Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Handy Manual.
By J. W. JOHNSON. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 125 pages. $1.00

The Forcing Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. In this work the author has compiled in handy form the cream of all the available information on the subject of forcing vegetables under glass. In addition to this, the experience of many practical growers in different localities is furnished. $1.25

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.
By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.
By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authorative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.
By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

GREENWICH, CONN.

The Greenwich Gardeners' Association is at work laying plans for the education of the children of this town in the art of horticulture. As yet these plans have not been thoroughly worked out, but one method of stimulating interest will be to present a plant to every school child in town on the first day of May and let the child plant and care for it to the best of his or her ability. In the fall the association will hold a flower show and give first, second and third prizes in each grade to the children whose plants have been best cared for. The idea of introducing horticulture in one way or another, into the schools, emanated from the Society of American Florists. T. Y.

DON'T LOSE IT.

You may have a little surplus stock in some line — not much, perhaps, but enough to cut quite a hole in the profit made on the whole lot if this little surplus is lost. But it isn't necessary to lose it. Nearly always there is someone, somewhere, who needs just that little batch of plants. You can reach that someone, everywhere, through a classified advertisement in the Review, at a cost of 10 cents a line. Everyone reads the Review's classified ads. Don't let the little surplus go to waste.

The Review will send Smith's Mum Manual for 40 cents.

I am much taken with the Review; I think it is a fine weekly for florists.—M. F. Kelsey, Worcester, Mass.

I am sold out of gladiolus bulbs. The little advertisement in the Review was a good investment.—Frank Klotz, Bowling Green, Ohio.

We have sold out of stock, thanks to your classified advertisements. We have nothing else to offer just now, but when we have we surely shall advertise it in the Review, because that means to get rid of it.—France & Vandegrift, Monroe, Mich.

Dallas, Tex.—The park board has accepted the plans of Architect Flanders for the erection of another greenhouse, 40x75, adjoining the present house, in City park. The cost of the building has been estimated as close to $3,000, though the contract has not yet been awarded.

Wellsville, O.—B. A. Mick, whose greenhouses are near Glasgow, conducts a retail store in town.. He was burned out at his stand on the public square a few weeks ago, but has secured a new store on Main street near Sixth, which he will conduct as the Wellsville Flower Store.

Washington, N. J.—Alonzo J. Bryan, proprietor of Bryan's Flower and Truck Farm, although he has been located here less than two years, has about 6,000 square feet of glass and is doing a good business in both the flower and the vegetable lines. He not only has a home trade, but is shipping nearly every day to various points. Mr. Bryan is greatly improving his place from time to time, and it is his intention in the spring to erect three more greenhouses, each 28½x100 feet, connected with an engine-room and potting shed all along the north side. He will also install a steam heating plant.

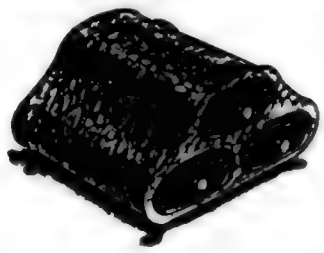
Greenhouse Heating.

TWO SEPARATE HOUSES.

Please state whether the following would be the most efficient way to heat two houses, 26x150 feet each: Two 4-inch flows and fifteen 2-inch or ten 3-inch returns in each house, each 4-inch flow running along the side walls, with two feet of fall, into four coils in each house under the benches as returns. The returns would have a fall of two feet from one end of the house to the other. Is it necessary to lead those four coils of each house into two 4-inch returns to the boiler, or will one 4-inch pipe do it? What size of an expansion tank should I have and how high? The houses are separate and one end of each is glass. They are located in New York state, and I want a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. If you can suggest any other hot water system that would be better than the one I have described, I shall be greatly obliged.

A. P.

Each house 26x150 can be heated to 60 degrees if one 4-inch or two 3-inch flows are used in connection with fourteen 2-inch returns. My preference would be to use two 3-inch flows, each supplying seven 2-inch returns. The flows would be placed overhead about halfway between gutter and ridge and would be graded so as to rise about eight inches in the length of the house. The highest point in the system would be the one most distant from the boiler and at the place where the branches for supplying the return manifolds are taken off. The main returns should in this case be 3-inch, so as not to throttle the flow. The expansion tank should have a capacity of seventy-five to 100 gallons and should be located twenty-five or thirty feet above the highest point in the system if possible. This will give twelve to fourteen pounds of pressure, which will enable you to heat the water to a much higher temperature than is possible with a lower tank. The connection from the system to the expansion tank should be made with the main return close to where it enters the boiler; a 1-inch pipe should be sufficient.



L. C. C.

DAMAGE FROM PAINTED PIPES.

I am in trouble and I come to you as the surest source of reliable assistance. Last July the man in charge of my houses painted the hot water pipes with Haskell-Wise rubber paint, like the enclosed sample. I noticed no ill effects until we began to close up the houses and had put on about 60 degrees of heat. Now everything looks very bad. The begonias are losing their leaves, the mums were discolored, the callas are brown at the edges, the smilax is dwarfed and twisted, and in fact nothing looks a healthy color. Is it on account of the fumes from the pipes? If so, what can I do? Would painting them over with a strong lime whitewash do any good, or is there an acid of any kind that would kill the effects of the paint? I must do something immediately.

While I know nothing of the materials used in the paint in question, it is likely that if it contains creosote or coal tar products of any kind it is responsible for the trouble in the houses. A little of either of these is sufficient to prove detrimental to plants under glass. I find that the paint in question will burn slowly and the only remedy I can suggest is that you procure a plumber's gasoline torch and use it to burn the paint off the pipes, first shifting the plants to other quarters, as it is likely that the burning will produce fumes destructive to the stock in the house. After it has once been effectively burned off, there should be no further trouble. It is never good policy to paint radiating pipes; rusty pipes are much better heaters than painted pipes. L. C. C.

The Market.

As is to be expected, flowers of all kinds are getting scarce. There is no question but that we can look forward to a whole lot of pickling this year, as the general market conditions would bring out a shortage without the holiday demand and, in order to come anywhere near filling orders, some stock will have to be held back. Judging by the looks of some of the stock coming in now, some growers have begun already.

At present time we are glad to say that business is good, with the wholesale men at least. Flowers of all kinds are cleaned out well every day and at good prices, and those houses which handle florists' supplies are quite rushed. The demand for supplies is right up to standard and it does not look as if the retailers are holding back to any extent. Should the present demand continue, this Christmas will be a record breaker, in spite of the financial disturbances. This will only go to show that the public must have flowers and florists' novelties, even if the times are a little hard.

Several large funerals and a few good decorations last week made a hole in the surplus of roses, which looked for a time as though they would grow into a glut. Everything is selling out clean now and the price of all kinds of flowers is advancing. The fact that carnations are going to be scarce for Christmas goes without saying, and the price is going to be as high as it has ever been in this city. There will be a good supply of roses, but not enough to fill all orders. Poinsettias will be the only flower that will be plentiful. The stock will also be fine and, with the scarcity of other flowers, they will be good property. There will be a good supply of violets and also of valley, narcissi and Romans.

Holly continues to be scarce and good stock is very hard to get. It is bringing $4 and $4.50 per crate and will likely go much higher if the supply is not better in a couple of days. Other holiday greens are in supply equal to the demand.

Current Comment.

The weather conditions last week were unfavorable, both for the grower and the retailer. The cut of both carnations and roses is light. The crop of customers ditto. It takes the sunshine to bring both flowers and people out. If the weather conditions improve and old Sol asserts himself this week, the supply for Christmas will be good. Money matters are easier, and with a better feeling all around, it is hoped that the Christmas demand will be as good as in the past.

The Indianapolis Florists' Club met December 11, at A. Wiegand & Son's Quite a number were out. All had a fine time. The next meeting will be held at the South Side Turner hall, January 15, when bowling will be the chief attraction.

R. F. Harritt, of Willowmere, sustained a heavy loss by fire last week, his chicken house, 14x16 feet, being destroyed, with over 400 chickens, also incubators and brooders and all his gardening implements. The fire was started by the explosion of the lamp in an incubator. As the chickens were all fine Rhode Island Reds, the loss is correspondingly great.

The Market.

One more issue of the Review and Christmas will be a thing of the past for another year. Present indications all point to a fair Christmas business. It lies to a large extent with the merchants themselves whether they get what business there is or not. Those who put on all the extra war paint they can will get the orders, while the fellow who goes along with the idea that there simply will be nothing doing is not likely to be disappointed. A great deal will also depend on the growers. If the price of cut flowers is reasonable, all well and good, but if some of the present quotations really go into effect many people will buy candy instead of flowers.

All of the good stock remains well cleaned up from day to day. There has been no noticeable change in prices since the last report.

Holly and ground pine are in good supply; the former sells for from $4 to $4.50 per case.

Various Notes.

Hubert Pierce, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, has just returned from a trip through Michigan. In his opinion there will be a good supply of carnations in this section for the holidays.

J. F. Sullivan disposed of a large number of ferns last week by filling the window with them and displaying a card bearing the words, "Special Sale of Ferns." The price was not reduced on the better grade of plants.

B. Schroeter, Jr., who is attending the University of Michigan, is at home for the holidays. He will help out at the greenhouses during the rush.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has had exceptionally good luck with its cold storage ferns. The first lot was taken out last week and there were twenty-six good ferns in each bunch.

Nothing has as yet come of the suit against George Leadly by Mrs. Allen P. Cox. The case was again postponed last week.

Schroeter had the decorations at the Hotel Ponchartrain for the New England Society. Green and red were the colors.

Philip Breitmeyer made his annual Christmas trip to New York, taking his son Harry along. Harry Breitmeyer is already one of the regulars in the store.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

FUNERAL WORK.

Wreaths.

Next to sprays of flowers there are, in my estimation, more wreaths made up for funeral work than any other design. Of course, this is not the case at every funeral. Among the poorer and even the middle class of people the harp, anchor, etc., are still popular, and it is hoped will always remain so. It is mostly the well-to-do people who prefer wreaths or large, fine sprays.

Of all the chances the floral artist has to show his skill, I believe the wreath gives him the most opportunity.

Many Styles.

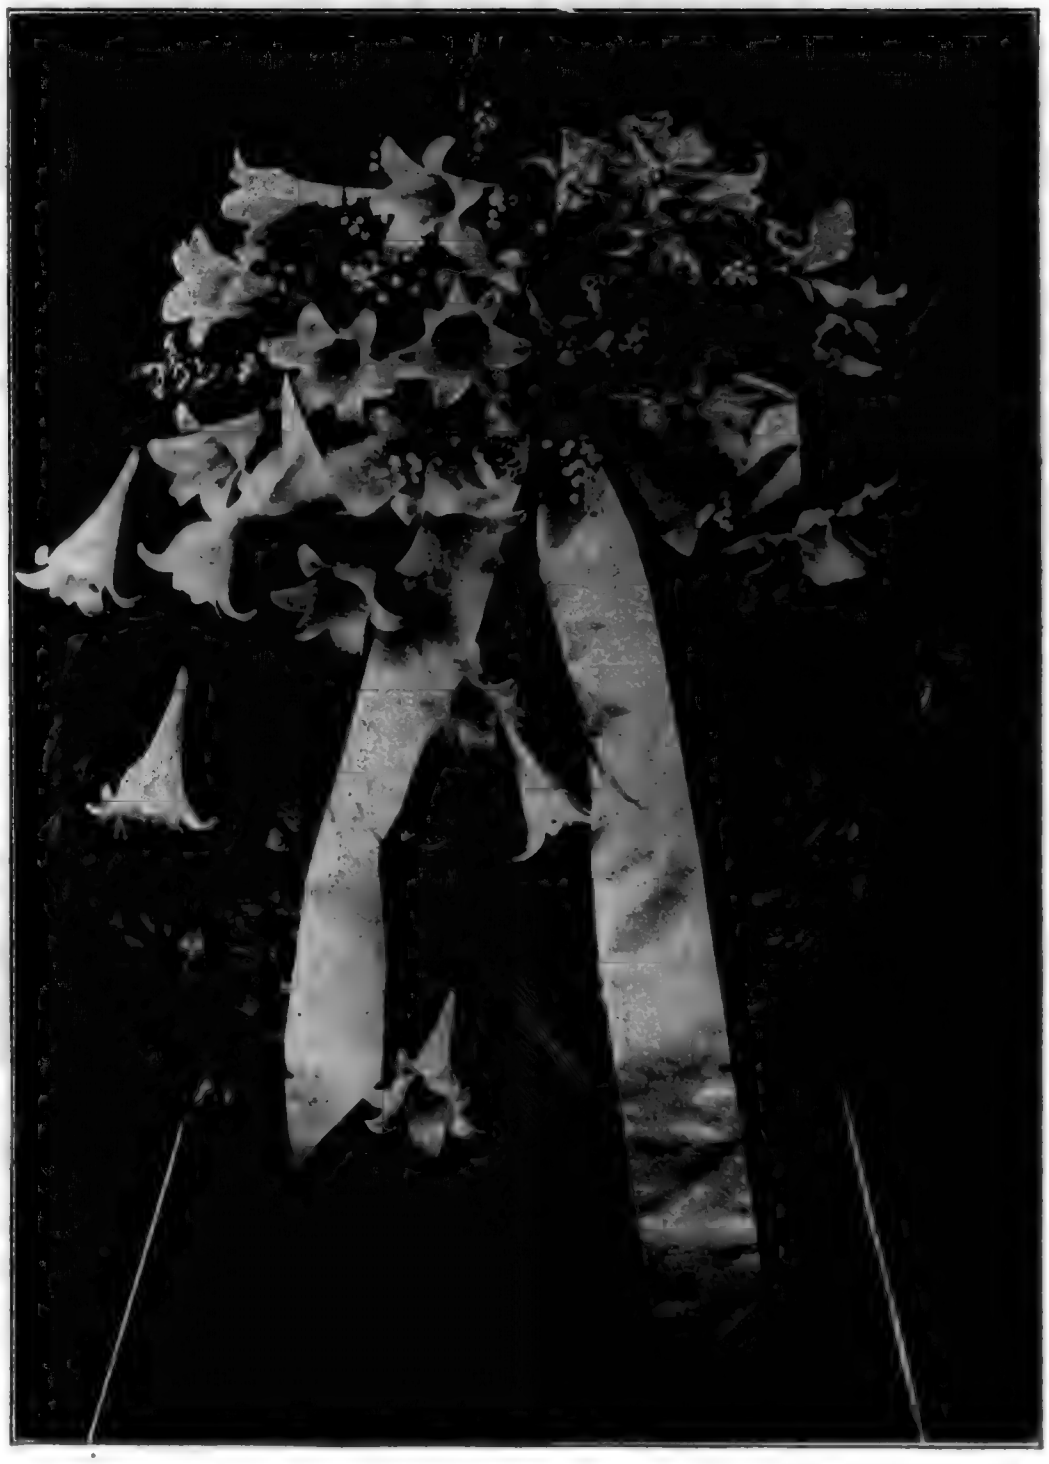
There is really no end to the number of ways of making up wreaths. Probably you have noticed the flowers at some expensive funeral, where we often see from fifteen to twenty wreaths, and each one has its own individuality. This, I presume, is one of the reasons why the wreath is so popular. It gives each person a chance to carry out his own taste.

The Preliminaries.

Before going into details in regard to the making of wreaths, I want to say a few words about the preliminaries.

Of course, the first step is to procure the frame. We will take it for granted that ours is going to be a 20-inch wreath, meaning twenty inches across the frame, outside measurement. As already stated in former articles, there are several ways of keeping the moss in the frame. The most frequent way is to use common tinfoil. This does well enough for ordinary work, but if you are making up a more elaborate piece, then I should prefer to use either green foil, black paper or, best and cheapest of all, the green wax paper we use for lining up boxes.

Place the paper over the back of the frame and bend it over the sides. Then put enough nicely torn up moss into the frame so that when tied into place it will be packed just closely enough to hold a toothpick or fern pin.



Have the moss about even with the top of the frame for all ordinary work. About the handiest way to tie the moss in is to hold the ball of string in the right hand and wind it about an inch and a half apart from the outside over the top to the inside of the wreath. Press the moss into place with the left hand as you go along. Then trim off the stray pieces with a pair of shears.

Most Simple Wreath.

The most simple wreath, and still pretty when well made, is one made up along the lines of a set piece. That is, you first cover your moss with common fern leaves, and make an edging of either smilax or galax leaves. When using the latter, stem them to toothpicks quite short and stick them around the outside and inside of the frame quite evenly, and all facing up. Then make a background of white flowers; run them around both edges first and then fill in the center. A few lilies, placed around in the wreath about every eight or ten inches, add much to the effect of the finished design. First make a hole in the moss where the lily is to be placed, cut the lily off short and stick it into the hole. Trim the wreath with an assortment of flowers, such as roses, carnations, sweet peas, hyacinths, etc., either in all white or in pink and white, as the occasion may demand. It is not necessary to pack the piece full of flowers; just arrange them loosely.

Loose Wreaths of All Flowers.

The more artistic wreath of all flowers is made up loosely of one or more kinds. For a loose wreath it will be necessary to have the moss a little deeper than for the foregoing wreath, so as to hold the flowers well in place. We will now suppose that you wish to make a loose wreath of all roses. For about an 18-inch wreath you will require about seven to eight dozen roses. Stem them to toothpicks, fastening one or more leaves in with each flower. The more open ones should be stemmed shorter than the buds, which should have about 4-inch to 5-inch stems. The more unevenly they are stemmed as to length, the better will be the effect of the finished wreath. Of course, you will have to use your own judgment to a large extent as to how closely to place the roses. They should not be so tight as to have the effect of being crowded; still, there must be enough. Some Asparagus plumosus or maidenhair fern stuck in between the roses will add much to the finished appearance. Wreaths of carnations, asters, etc., can, of course, be made up in much the same way. Asparagus Sprengeri goes well with either of the latter flowers. Then, again, you can use some smaller flower in connection with the large one; as, for instance, roses and valley, or carnations and sweet peas. If it be desired to use valley or sweet peas alone, they should be stemmed several in a bunch and of different lengths, to avoid a machine-made effect.

A wreath of all violets is also very pretty. Stem about ten or twelve of them at a time to a toothpick, using some of their own foliage as green. A wreath of valley or violets should not be made up too long before use. H. S.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Table Decorations.

The accompanying illustration shows a dinner-table decoration arranged in the conventional style by Charles Henry Fox, of the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. The plateau, or centerpiece, is made of dahlias with corner-pieces to match, of a single color. The arrangement is carried out for a luncheon or dinner at which the guests are seated, the idea being not to interfere with the view. The dahlias were grown under glass, the date at which this arrangement was used having been February, 1907.

The dinner-table arrangement is one in which the retailer finds his best opportunity for the display of individuality. Patrons complain of montony in the arrangements.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Rambler Roses.

Rambler roses with well ripened canes, more especially such as have been pot-grown all summer, may be had in bloom from the middle to the end of March by starting now. Repotting is neither necessary nor desirable at this season, but a quantity of the surface soil should be removed with a pointed stick and a surfacing of fibrous loam and bone meal applied. If the latter has been mixed in a pile for some time it will be all the better for it. For this early forcing Crimson Rambler is to be preferred to the pink varieties, such as Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins, which latter are all right after January 1. The canes should have any weak or dead wood removed; any thin shoots are better cut away entirely. In order to make them break evenly, twist them around three or four stakes stood uprightly around the sides of the pots. A night temperature of 45 degrees is ample at the start, raising it to 50 degrees as the plants break, and a few degrees higher later, lowering it again as the flowers start to open, but not too suddenly. Syringe the canes twice a day. Discontinue this after the shoots are started, or mildew may be encouraged.

Double Feverfew.

This easily grown but very useful plant should now be planted where any vacant bench room is at disposal. While a common flower and with the reverse of a pleasing odor, double white feverfews prove very useful in the spring and are especially valuable at Memorial day, at which time quantities of white flowers at moderate cost are in keen demand. No special culture is needed for double feverfews. Soil which has been used for chrysanthemums will answer very well for them if given a dressing of rotten manure. A cool house, 45 degrees at night, is better than one 10 degrees higher.

Marguerites.

Old plants grown in pots during the summer will have given a fine crop of Christmas flowers. With the passing of the chrysanthemums, there will be a better call for the smaller but more graceful marguerites. Plants from which a supply of Easter and Memorial day flowers are expected should not be neglected. Do not allow them to become potbound before giving them a shift, and spread them out so that they can have room to grow. If you want them in flower early, discontinue pinching. The tops can be removed once more from those being kept for Easter. Marguerites are gross feeders and heavy drinkers. They resent anything in the nature of forcing and should always be grown cool; 50 degrees at night is ample.

Dendrobiums.

That useful and ever popular orchid, Dendrobium nobile, will now be commencing to push its flower nodes. The plants ought now to be resting in a moderately cool and dry house; 45 to 50 degrees at night is sufficiently warm. Only enough water to prevent shriveling of the pseudo bulbs should be given. A little careless watering will cause many of the nodes to produce growths in lieu of flowers. A syringing overhead twice a week on bright days should provide all water necessary. Let the plants have the fullest sunlight. Never mind if the foliage and bulbs take on a yellowish hue; they will flower all the more satisfactorily. As the nodes become a fourth of an inch long the plants may be taken to a warmer house, using judgment in watering until the flower buds can be seen, when a more generous supply can be afforded them. Dendrobium Wardianum requires very similar treatment to that recommended for D. nobile.

Coelogyne Cristata.

In February and March no florists' orchid is as valuable as Cœlogyne cristata. It flowers over quite a long season, and being a good grower, it succeeds with ordinary care. It never should have a high temperature, even when growing. At present a house kept at 55 degrees at night will be high enough. The flower spikes can now be easily seen and counted at the base of the newly-made bulbs. It is the height of folly to force cœlogynes at all. It does not advance them at all, but leaves the plants weakened and the flowers are more puny and wretched looking. Keep the plants all on the dry side now. Never mind if the bulbs shrivel a little; they will plump up again when watered more freely.

Cattleya Trianae.

This is the standard winter cattleya, being indispensable from December 1 until April 1. If the plants have been grown together with a miscellaneous batch and have been kept well watered and shaded, they are probably deep green in color and, grown under these conditions, many of the flowering bulbs will produce one and two blooms only. Had they been subjected to more sunshine, the plants would have bloomed very much better. While in bloom they can be placed in a house kept at 50 degrees at night if required. Keep the plants on the dry side and do not play the hose on them unless absolutely necessary. All cattleyas prefer a cooler and drier atmosphere when flowering, while in the growing season they will relish abundant water supplies.

Loosely Arranged Wreath of Bride Roses and Valley.

Cypripedium Leeanum.

As a successional variety to C. insigne, nothing is better than C. Leeanum. The plant is a splendid grower. The flowers are produced with great freedom, and while the stems are less rigid than in the case of C. insigne and C. villosum, they stand up nicely. The dorsal sepals of the better forms of C. Leeanum are broad and bold, the colorings being very attractive. A temperature of 60 degrees at night will produce good C. Leeanums. The individual blooms will last three months, or just as well as in the case of C. insigne. As a commercial variety, this is one of the very finest cypripediums known.

Adiantums.

As you cut down your maidenhair ferns from time to time, remember that they like a little rest before being started into active growth again. We are referring more especially now to A. cuneatum, more grown probably than all other sorts combined, commercially at any rate. A repotting may be necessary in some cases; in others a top dressing may suffice for a season, if the plants are afforded occasional liquid stimulants.

Brief Reminders.

Save a few berries of solanums for seed before disposing of all your plants.

A large proportion of your Lorraine begonias will now be sold. Keep a sufficient number for stock purposes and do not let these be mere odds and ends.

Do you remember the weekly fumigation? Don't wait until you see plants alive with aphis. Prevention is better than cure.

Give your chrysanthemum stock plants a light bench in a cool house. Keep the soil scratched among them.

Spanish iris, sweet scented jonquils, La Reine tulips and Golden Spur narcissi may all be started at once. Grow the first two varieties cool.

The present is a good time to propagate crotons and dracænas by ringing the shoots. Be sure to keep the moss moist. Ficus elastica roots readily in the same way.

Keep early schizanthus staked and securely tied.

Throw away any sickly or weak lilies as they show their character. Drop a little tobacco dust on the tops of any plants first showing flower buds, which aphis will otherwise infest.

Don't forget to save a batch of poinsettia plants for stock for 1908.

STRAY NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

State of Trade.

There is still an abundant supply of chrysanthemums at Covent Garden market, but prices show an improvement. First quality carnations realize good prices, but common grades are cleared cheap. Roses are bringing better money, some good Richmond bringing the highest figures. English, French and Parma violets are of good quality. Orchids are in good supply. Eucharis, gardenias, pancratiums and other choice flowers are selling better. In pot plants Gloire de Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, spiræas, zonal pelargoniums, ericas, cyclamens, azaleas and bouvardias are abundant and of excellent quality. Trade in both plants and flowers shows an improvement.

Adiantum elegans is to a considerable extent displacing the old A. cuneatum at Covent Garden. Points in favor of the new-comer are larger fronds, longer stems, a more delicate color and fine keeping qualities.

Winter Flowering Carnation Society.

The third exhibition of the recently organized British Winter Flowering Carnation Society was held in the conservatories of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regents Park, December 11. Points are awarded as follows: Color 5 points, size 5, fragrance 5, substance 5, calyx 5, general appearance 5, length and substance of stem 5, habit of plant 5; total possible points 40. Certificates of merit of the first class are awarded only to varieties scoring at least 30 points, and awards of merit to those scoring 25 or more points.

The membership of the society grows steadily and the larger number of competitive classes early assured the committee of the finest exhibition of the divine flower yet seen in London.

National Chrysanthemum Society.

The annual banquet and meeting of the National Chrysanthemum Society of England was held at the Holborn restaurant, London, November 26, when Charles E. Shea presided over a goodly company. The annual report showed that seventy-seven new members had joined the society and that seven additional societies had become affiliated. The total membership was 430 and the number of affiliated societies 109. The reserve fund exceeded £100. During the present season 194 novelties had been set up for certificates, of which twenty-five received some form of award. The entries at the annual national show at the Crystal palace were one-third greater than in 1906.

Several new chrysanthemums received certificates at the hands of the National Chrysanthemum Society November 19. Among them were: Gretchen, a pure white, single, narrow petaled variety from Wells & Co.; the same exhibitors had M. Ellis, a bright yellow decorative variety, reflexed, promising as a market variety; Norman Davis had Mrs. J. Hygate, an immense true incurved white; R. Searle received a certificate for Marquis of Northampton, a fine bronzy yellow sport from W. R. Etherington.

The National Chrysanthemum Society held its winter exhibition December 4 and a market show December 11, at Covent Garden Market.

Royal Horticultural Society.

At the exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society, November 26, Norman Davis secured an award of merit for a large mauve pink Japanese chrysanthemum named Edith Jameson. James Veitch & Sons had a beautiful group of their winter blooming begonias, which presented a brilliant appearance. Some of the best kinds were Agatha, Socotrana, Winter Perfection, Julius and Ensign, the last two being specially noteworthy. J. Hill & Co. had a splendid group of ferns, in which they are specialists. H. B. May had a striking group of platyceriums, polypodiums, davallias and other ferns, mostly growing on bark and pieces of wood, with a groundwork of small adiantums and pterises.

Cutbush & Son had a telling display of oranges in fruit, Skimmia Japonica, pernettyas and other berry-bearing plants. H. J. Jones, Philip Ladds and W. Wells & Co. were the leading exhibitors of chrysanthemums, the last named having a grand collection of singles, some of the best being Irene Cragg, Kitty Bourne, Purity, Gretchen, Lady Windsor and Doreen. Cannell & Son had a great collection of zonal pelargoniums and there were many other attractive exhibits, including a table of pyramidal Lorraine begonias from J. Vert, a yard in height and as much in diameter.

A Vexed Question.

"Boards versus vases" has been a vexed question this year at the many chrysanthemum shows here. Some societies have entirely abolished boards, practically all are now using vases to some extent and the doom of the board system is heralded by some. Many growers and a large percentage of visitors do not approve of the abolition of boards, as one result would be a somewhat diminished interest in the exhibition. Unless some board classes are retained, many exhibitors will drop out of the running. Exhibitors here must furnish their vases, which is quite a serious expense item.

DRACAENA ROTHIANA.

The dracæna shown in the accompanying illustration is Rothiana, a species long known to science and for many years seen in collections in botanical gardens in all parts of the world, but it is only lately that it has attracted the attention of commercial growers, first by its beauty and second by its great hardiness, in which it is superior to Dracæna fragrans. The specimen illustrated was photographed at the establishment of W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J. The plant makes a fine specimen, one to two feet high, the long, pointed leaves being closely set, of great substance, bright green in color. It is well adapted for either indoor or outdoor use.

THRIPS IN BEAUTY HOUSE.

Prevention Better Than Cure.

This season so far there has been less complaint than usual about the ravages of thrips in Beauty houses. Is there any explanation for this? In former years we would have credited this condition to either a wet or cold fall. Neither of these conditions prevailed during the past season; still there are few complaints about thrips. However, it is not good policy to shout until we are out of the woods, and we have quite a long journey yet. So it is best to use all precautions to keep the pest in subjection.

As a means of preventing its entrance to the houses, great care should be taken to see that the manure used for mulching is free from the eggs. If there is any danger from this source the manure should be cooked; that is, subjected to such a temperature, either by boiling or roasting, that the eggs could not possibly survive.

I have frequently noticed that houses which have been clear of thrips during the early part of the season have developed a good crop of them immediately after the first application of mulch.

Use of Cayenne Pepper.

Light and persistent fumigation of tobacco stems will keep thrips in subjection. This frequent fumigation has a tendency to bleach the outer petals, which of course reduces the value of the bloom. Cayenne pepper can be used once a week with good effect. To derive the full benefit from this method of fumigating, it should be applied somewhat as follows:

Procure some iron plates and heat them in the furnace, withdrawing them just before they become red. Lay these in the path at about twenty feet apart and close the ventilators. After everything is in readiness, start at the end of the house farthest from the door and place on each plate a spoonful of the pepper. Work towards the door as quickly as possible, as the fumes are disagreeable and even dangerous if inhaled freely. Keep the house closed until the fumes are dissipated. This should be repeated at least twice a week during the season.

Many have found this method no good, but the reason is that they do not carry it out consistently. If after a few applications they still find thrips, the method is condemned. As the eggs are being hatched all the time, each brood should be looked after as soon as it appears.

BEAUTIES IN GEORGIA.

A great many people labor under the delusion that the American Beauty rose cannot be successfully grown as a greenhouse crop in the south, but this is refuted by a glance at the accompanying illustration, which shows one of the houses of Beauties at the establishment of John Wolf, at Savannah, Ga., whose experience has been that he can grow the rose as successfully as it is grown in a more temperate climate.

Mr. Wolf's establishment is a modern one and the Beauties have as good quarters as experience and money can provide. The house is a Lord & Burnham structure, the plants growing in solid beds, which are found preferable to benches because they do not dry out so fast.

Mr. Wolf has been in the business at Savannah since March 1, 1895, when he located there with $60 cash capital. With this sum he bought hotbed sash and plants. Not many florists ever made as small a beginning as did Mr. Wolf, and not many have worked harder or prospered more. Now he has twenty-one large greenhouses, all new, the entire place having been built or rebuilt within the last three years. He also has ten acres of land inside the city limits, with all improvements, office buildings, stables, horses, fixtures, a two-story dwelling, in good shape and paid for. Mr. Wolf was married on New Year's day, 1900, to Miss Sterib, of Philadelphia, to whom he gives a large share of the credit for his success. Besides the retail trade done in Savannah, he does a large shipping business to nearby towns and says he has no trouble in selling all that he can grow. Mr. Wolf is only 37 years of age and he says that he expects the next ten years to show a much greater increase in his establishment and the business than have the last ten years.

LOVE AND SYMPATHY.

Is there a feeling of mutual sympathy between a gardener and the plants he grows, and do the latter respond to care and kindness the same as a dog or a horse, or is it all a question of cultural attention? These were questions raised by a lecturer at a recent meeting of the Bristol Gardeners' Association, and, as might be expected, they aroused quite an animated discussion. At any rate, says the Gardeners' Magazine, there is something novel in the idea of plants responding to the care of a sympathetic grower, and vice versa, and if there is anything in it, then love and affection are the chief factors in successful horticulture. I must admit that I have often marveled at the way certain plants thrive and bloom under the care of old cottage dames in tiny windows, and where the conditions from a gardener's point of view are by no means favorable. There is no mistake about the old women loving their plants. Perhaps this explains it.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SINGLE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The large flowers common to most sections of the chrysanthemum family, the result of specialized treatment, enjoy a well-earned popularity which few of us would seek to lessen in the slightest degree, yet there are occasions when we feel they are overdone, and instinctively we seek the rest and change secured by the single varieties. These make a welcome change and addition as pot plants, but it is probably as cut flowers for furnishing dinner-tables, living-rooms, and all decorative work where lightness is essential that their utility is most generally recognized. Of late years the single varieties have made steady progress in popular estimation, which is partly explained by the present tendency to produce varieties having a clean central disk, this being one of the prominent characteristics of a first-class flower. At the same time, there has been a steady advance in the production of flowers having decided color.

The cultivation of single chrysanthemums does not materially differ from what is generally given the other sections of this group of plants. They may with advantage be propagated later. The soil should be moderately rich, and artificial manures be mainly employed to strengthen the color of the flowers, avoiding stimulants which influence vegetative growth alone.

Taste in the size of flower has often to be reckoned with; at present medium-sized flowers, like Mary Anderson or the beautiful Stella, appeal with singular force, while for certain classes of decorative work the dainty quill-like flowers of Star of Honor are appropriate, being suitable for arranging in the smallest and lightest flower glasses. The varieties named are offered by an English gardening magazine as the selection of the best seen at the exhibitions in 1907:

Star of Honor.—White, having a single row of quill-like petals borne upon dark-colored wiry stems.

Stella.—Pure glistening white, petals not flat, and in a double row; a first-class variety of dwarf habit.

Mary Anderson—White, soon changing to pink, petals broad and flat; a good old variety.

Annie Holden.—A rich bronze-yellow sport from Mary Anderson; desirable.

Annie Bramwell.—White, single row of petals, broad and reflexing, dwarf habit; one of the best.

Sir George Bullough.—Dark yellow, dwarf habit; an old variety, but still one of the best yellows.

Kitty Bourne.—Deep yellow, double row petals, dwarf habit; grand flower.

Mrs. R. N. Parkinson.—Bright yellow, petals flat, habit and growth like Mary Anderson; extra.

Mrs. E. Roberts.—White ground suffused by a delicate rose color, petals flat, about three and a half inches across; a splendid single.

Richard - Boston.—White flushed by pink; a flower of distinct beauty.

Ladysmith.—An old favorite; flowers rosy-pink.

Alice Gibbs.—Terra-cotta color in the way of Mary Anderson; a splendid flower in a rich color.

Clibran's Crimson.—Rich bronzy-crimson; a fine thing in this color.

Rev. W. E. Remfrey.—A very dark crimson, having several rows of petals; the disk is not always faultless.

Miss Crissy.—Small flowers, bronzy-orange, almost chocolate color; striking.

NOBLE'S HOOSIER HOME.

In this issue of the Review there are three illustrations which show how pleasantly D. C. Noble is situated at Columbia City, Ind., where he built his first greenhouse fourteen years ago. It was only 18x54 feet and was put up for growing lettuce, radishes and tomatoes. So good did the local demand for these prove to be that he extended the house the next year and two years after added another house sixty feet long, using hotbed sash for the roof.

In 1900, with a partner, three more houses 18x100 were built, but the partnership lasted only one year. It was in this year that carnations and roses were first grown, and these did so well that the next season another house 18x100 was added, with a small structure 12x48. This constitutes what Mr. Noble knows as the old plant and is next to his dwelling. The heating here is hot water.

In 1906 he built three houses 21x150, across the alley, and heats this range with steam. This year he added another house 21x150 to the new plant and grew in it 5,000 chrysanthemums, achieving such good results that he was able to win first prize on fifty blooms white at the Chicago flower show, his Mrs. Robinson beating the Eatons shown by Wietor Bros. and the Poehlmann Bros. Co. His Appleton were second and so were his Viviand-Morel, Poehlmann Bros. Co. beating him on yellow and H. W. Buckbee on pink. He grows 12,000 carnation plants and a few roses, the rest of the space being devoted to potted plants for the local trade.

One of the illustrations shows the Noble automobile, which home inventive faculty has fitted for both pleasure and business. Note the box on the rear for carrying stock for delivery. It is a handy affair. The same picture shows the fine hedge of arbor-vitæ which surrounds Mr. Noble's home. The picture was taken July 1, when the catalpa in front of the house was in full flower.

The other small picture shows the interior of one of the new houses. The middle bench is Lawson and the two side benches are a light pink sport of Lawson which originated with Mr. Noble. At the time the photograph was taken the plants were small, but good growth has been made and he is this winter cutting first-class stock. The place includes 27,000 feet of glass.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Watering.

Conditions affecting soil moisture under glass are different from those met with in the open, where there are no heating pipes, raised benches or confinement of roots. While these are intended to assist nature by maintaining more congenial conditions, they are nevertheless artificial and consequently demand close attention.

The old-time rule of watering only when dryness of soil made it imperative and then drenching the soil to the point of saturation or until a fair sized shower occurred under the bench, was obviously a waste of water, to say nothing of the loss of plant food carried out in solution. Probably no system of heating is without defect, and partly on this account we find spots which dry out sooner than the greater part of the bench; also the strip of soil along the side of a bench is inclined to become dry, especially on afternoons of bright days, and no matter when either state of affairs is found to exist, sufficient water should at once be applied to equalize matters.

A trip through the houses every morning and afternoon in search of such dryness is time well employed.

The oft-repeated advice to do the general watering on mornings of bright days is safe to follow, but I cannot accept the theory that no water should be allowed to touch the foliage; on the contrary, the whole plant is benefited by a gentle bath.

Of course, when touching up the dry spots between general waterings, care will be taken to wet the soil only.

If what promised to be a bright day turns out cloudy or stormy, after having watered, do not make the mistake of turning on more heating pipe and shutting the ventilators, with the idea of drying off the foliage. Turn on a little more heat if you choose, but raise the ventilators as the temperature increases, keeping the air moving outward.

In regard to syringing, I can only repeat my unaltered opinion that as a remedy for red spider it is often worse than the affliction; the careful grower will detect this pest's first appearance and either sacrifice the plant or prevent increase and spreading.

George S. Osborn.

CARDINAL AND WOLCOTT.

At the place where I work the Cardinal carnation often does not open well, looking sleepy when it first opens and staying that way. Our Wolcott also has somewhat the same tendency. Is there anything we can do to bring them out better? J. R. T.

When we grew Cardinal we had some blooms act the same way as you describe during the early winter, but later on the trouble disappeared. We were unable to discover the cause, so we concluded that it was a weakness in the variety. You will find Victory, Beacon or Red Chief more satisfactory to grow than Cardinal.

If the Wolcott stick in the center it may be that they are infested with the mite which is described by Mr. Davis on page 8 of the Review for December 19. Examine the blooms closely and, while you are looking for the mite, look also for thrips. They may be the cause of the trouble.

In this case, too, I would advise you to stock up with the newer sorts. Unless you are unusually successful with Wolcott you will find White Perfection or White Enchantress far superior and more profitable to grow. You will always find that a moderate sum of money spent in new varieties each season is a splendid investment. That you must recruit your list of varieties with the improved sorts as they prove themselves worthy goes without saying. I have always maintained that the grower who keeps right up to date is usually the one who makes the most headway. It may be that the same progressiveness which impels him to keep up with the times in this direction causes him to be more progressive in other directions, but anyway, you will usually find the current season's introductions on the places which are turning out the best stock and turning in the most money.

By this I do not mean a certain class of plungers, for I have always advised against plunging on any one new variety. Our own experience with the new varieties has taught us to avoid such folly. Having decided on about how much we wish to invest in new varieties, we make a list of all the varieties which we think might prove valuable to us and a few others, and then we order of each accordingly: Of some only a hundred, of others more, according to our impression or information about each variety. More than once have we found that the varieties on which we would have plunged have proved to be the least valuable of the collection. A most notable case was the variety Fiancee.

Under our method we have never yet failed to get one or more valuable additions to our list each year, and sometimes they came from where we least expected them. The old adage of not putting all your eggs in one basket is certainly well applied in the buying of new varieties.

I do not pretend to say how many you should buy of each new variety. That is entirely a matter for your own discretion. The size of your business and the nature of your business must determine that for you. If you propagate for your own planting only, you will not need as many as you will if you do a rooted cutting business. A hundred plants will make lots of cuttings and even less than that number will suffice on many places.

We have heard the remark that if a new variety is worth growing at all, not less than 1,000 plants should be benched. I agree with that remark when speaking of standard varieties, but with the new varieties, never. It is the language of the plunger, unless he has a very large establishment. Imagine a grower who houses 25,000 to 50,000 plants buying a thousand each of a dozen or more varieties each season at $100 per thousand! It is among these plungers that you hear the complaints about new varieties being gold bricks, etc., but you never hear such complaints from the grower who buys a reasonable quantity of practically every variety offered. He expects to fail with part of his purchases, but he seldom fails with all of them, and those which do succeed more than repay him for those which failed.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Simon J. Hider, Hillsboro, O., registers Carnation White Helen Gould, a sport of Helen Gould, white, center petals slightly penciled with pink, gradually turning to white as matured; calyx stronger than Helen Gould, size three and one-half to four inches across; stem strong, twenty to twenty-six inches long; habit of growth same as Helen Gould.

Registration of sports is made subject to the approval of the society at its meeting in Washington, January 28 to 30.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

CARNATION SHOW IN LONDON.

The finest show of carnations ever seen in England was held in the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, December 11, under the auspices of the Winter-flowering Carnation Society. The marked improvement in the number and quality of the exhibits bore testimony to the rapid strides carnation culture is making in this country. In a short time we expect to have many English raised varieties and the society is formulating a registration scheme. On this occasion, however, there were no home raised varieties equal to Mrs. H. Burnett and Britannia.

First-class certificates were awarded to the American varieties Winsor and Melody, exhibited by A. F. Dutton, Iver Bucks, the pioneer grower and exhibitor of American varieties, and to Rose-pink Enchantress and Beacon, exhibited by Hugh Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, who now rank among our largest cultivators.

For collection of cut carnations W. H. Page, Hampton, was awarded the blue ribbon for flowers of fine quality in which My Maryland, Mrs. T. W. Lawson, Enchantress, Britannia, Harlowarden, etc., were prominent. S. Mortimer secured second prize with an artistic arrangement in which the best were Enchantress, Harlowarden, Lady Bountiful, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Mrs. H. Burnett and Nelson Fisher.

The leading classes were for vases of thirty-six blooms. For white, all three prizes went to White Perfection; first, W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey; second, G. Lange, Hampton; third, W. H. Page, Hampton. For blush all prizes went to Enchantress in the following order: A. Smith, Enfield, W. H. Page and W. H. Lancashire. For light pink or salmon, A. F. Dutton scored with a charming vase of Winsor, followed by A. Smith and H. Burnett, both with Mrs. H. Burnett. For deep pink or rose, Mrs. T. W. Lawson held the sway, the prizes going to W. H. Page, W. H. Lancashire and A. F. Dutton. For crimson, A. F. Dutton came to the front with Harlowarden; W. H. Page second with Gov. Roosevelt; W. H. Lancashire third. A. Smith was first for scarlet, exhibiting his own variety, Britannia; W. H. Lancashire second, with Robert Craig. On any other color or fancy, A. F. Dutton was first, with Imperial, and H. Burnett, second, with Mikado.

Then followed classes of the above named colors for eighteen flowers of each. White Perfection was not so much in evidence here, the prizes going to Lady Bountiful, White Enchantress and My Maryland, exhibited respectively by Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey; H. Mathias, Medstead, and S. Mortimer. Bell & Sheldon were first in nearly all the eighteen blooms classes, winning in the blush class with Enchantress. Winsor was first in the pink or salmon class, the President in the crimson class, Robert Craig and Britannia first and second in the scarlet class.

For twelve blooms of any variety not in commerce, W. H. Lancashire scored with a seedling having a large, finely formed scarlet flower, but not altogether too pleasing a shade for commercial purposes. The same exhibitor was honored with having the finest vase of flowers in the show, thirty-six of White Perfection.

There were many minor classes in which smaller growers competed, in many instances with creditable flowers. Noncompetitive exhibits were a grand feature of the show and some of the exhibitors put up a wide range of varieties on long stretches of tabling, notably: H. Burnett, large gold medal; Hugh Low & Co., large silver gilt medal; Bell & Sheldon, gold medal; J. Lange, silver gilt medal; J. Peed & Son, large silver medal; C. Engellmann, silver gilt medal, etc.

J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y., has been over here for several weeks on a business trip and was invited by the committee to assist as one of the judges, and this he did with satisfaction to all. After the judging he spoke in eulogistic terms of the excellence of the show and the quality of the blooms, assuring us that in the leading classes they were equal to the blooms shown in America. After visiting the majority of the leading growers over here, he is astonished at the results obtained from pot culture and admits that for October and November cutting, pot culture is superior to bench culture. He also remarks upon the higher prices obtained here for first quality blooms. After an enjoyable trip and having endeared himself to a large circle of carnation growers by his unassuming and genial manners, he sailed from Liverpool December 14 for New York. BEE.

AT BRANDYWINE SUMMIT, PA.

A visit recently to E. A. Harvey's place, where carnations abound, was much enjoyed. While Edwin was not at home, his father took the lead and we followed from house to house, beginning with the house of Lawson, benched the last of February, which were fine, and surely one could ask no more at this season of the year. Just across the main aisle was a block of Aristocrat, which looked good, but did not see the gilt or hear the gingle that was in sight on the other side. Winsor, just over the way, was giving Lawson a hard chase, and Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress were traveling in their usual fine style. Quite a fine lot of Lady Bountiful showed all signs of winning the race in the whites. Perfection, hard by, was not in it at all. Queen still holds a good space. Victory was not to be passed by unnoticed. Beacon promises well for a little later.

A trial block of E. C. Marshall's white made us stand and take notice. It has flowers of the largest size, with stems strong and erect. A visit to its home, near Kennett Square, is well worth the time it takes. Any one wanting a white—and that of all colors we cannot do without—ought to keep an eye on it, for like its owner, E. C. Marshall, it will bear scrutinizing and acquaintance. I have seen it at three different times since it was planted in, and on the last visit I was amazed to see the wonderful wealth of growth and bloom that had developed in the four weeks. At Mr. Marshall's place we also saw Enchantress and Victory of fine quality. Queen naturally has had to retire to the side beds, with Red Sport and its companions. A house of mignonette here, as well as two at Mr. Harvey's, were in the best of shape.

A WANDERER.

THE BEGONIA MITE.

The begonia mite is a scourge in some gardens. Specimens of begonias sent from the west of England to the Board of Agriculture, says a British contemporary, were found to be infested with the mite (Tarsonymus), but this mite does not confine its attack to begonias, some species of which seem to be more susceptible than others, but also infests a number of other plants. Closely allied species have on occasion done much harm to box. With begonias the pest seems to be held in check if the plants are dusted with tobacco powder. Tobacco water and fumigating with tobacco are also favorably mentioned. Sulphur is a well-known treatment for mites generally, the treatment recommended for the black currant mite being to dust the plants with a mixture of two parts of sulphur to one part of finely ground unslaked lime. The begonia mite spreads rapidly where the cultural conditions favor it, and the increase is especially marked when the plants are allowed to become too dry. A case is known in which the mite, at one time a great pest, is now easily kept in check by the thorough and repeated syringing of the plants with clean water.

NERINES.

Those brilliant South African bulbous plants, the nerines, are little seen in either commercial or private establishments. This is rather surprising, as they bloom at a period when choice flowers are the reverse of abundant. One reason why they are not grown commercially is that at the time flowers are produced the plants are practically leafless. The umbels of flowers, borne on scapes twelve to twenty-four inches long, are, however, splendid for cutting and last nearly a fortnight in water, and should sell readily at any of the high-class flower stores, where novelties are always in demand.

Nerines, or Guernsey lilies, as they are commonly called, need cool treatment at all seasons. Our plants are wintered in a light, sunken pit which has no fire heat and where the temperature frequently hovers near the freezing point. The plants are never in the greenhouse except when in bloom, being placed in the pit as soon as the flowers have faded, and are grown there until the middle of May, when they are laid on their sides on a hot, sunny bank and left in this position until the flower scapes show in September or October. Two essentials for success in nerine growing are to have the pots thoroughly matted with roots (otherwise they will not bloom) and to give them a thorough summer baking in the sun.

In potting, three bulbs may go into a 5-inch pot and from a 5-inch into a 6-inch; such sorts as Sarniensis or Fothergilli major, some of the pink and other light forms, making smaller bulbs, do well in smaller pots or in shallow pans. For compost, turfy loam, leafmold and sharp sand is ideal, and plants should not be potted more than once in six or eight years, for the best results. Small bulbs can be picked out and potted rather thickly until they reach blooming size. The old plants require a little surface dressing each fall and doses of liquid manure once a week while making their growth, the leaves appearing just after the flowers.

The plants can be used effectively for open fire-place decoration, mixed with maidenhair ferns, and are also good for stands or window-boxes, arranged with light foliage plants of any kind. In a cut state they make a bright and attractive dining-table centerpiece. No other bulbous plant, excepting perhaps Vallota purpurea, compares with them in brilliancy.

N. Fothergilli major, with crimson scarlet flowers, is in my estimation the best of the forms. It is in season late in October or the early part of November. N. Sarniensis, brilliant scarlet, has smaller umbels and blooms a few days later. N. Corusca, which is in reality a form of N. Sarniensis, has larger flowers, broader foliage and greater vigor. The foregoing are the best varieties to grow, but the weaker growing, but free blooming pink, rose and other light-colored sorts are well worth a place in any collection of plants. W. N. Craig.

SOME FACTS ABOUT SOILS

Definition of Soil.

Soils are an aggregation of rock and mineral fragments, carrying an admixture of organic debris, together with substances in soluble and colloidal condition. The productivity of soils is determined by their composition, by their structure, by their climate and by the life activities within them. By composition we refer to their mineral and chemical nature; by their structure we refer to the size of the soil grains and to the segregation of them; by their climate we refer to their water content, their temperature, their aëration, their drainage; by life activities we refer to the interaction of the roots of plants and microorganisms upon one another, upon the soil grains, upon the organic matter, upon substances in solution and upon colloids.

Composition.

The composition of soils, and their structure so far as it influences weight, determine the absolute amount of plant food elements per unit volume, per cubic foot, per acre-foot or per acre-four-feet, which is the depth to which most crops are able to feed, the depth to which they send their roots if all the factors of productivity are at their best. Composition, therefore, determines the endurance of a field; the outermost limit of its productive capacity. This statement is not in accord with the teaching of our national Department of Agriculture, where it affirms: "Practically all soils contain sufficient plant food for good crop yields; the supply will be indefinitely maintained and this actual yield of plants adapted to the soil depends mainly, under favorable climatic conditions, upon cultural methods and suitable crop rotation."

It is safe to say that no statement in recent years, designed to direct agricultural practice and issued by high authority, is farther from the truth than this. Few statements could be more misleading and land agents are using it, both in good faith and unscrupulously, to sell at high price low grade lands. Much nearer the truth is the statement: No soils contain sufficient plant food for maximum yields when all other factors are at their best; and the best cultural methods, with rotation of crops, only hasten the exhaustion of soils.

Fallacy in Teaching.

The Department's teaching has resulted from confusing plant food elements with plant food. Rigid chemical analysis has demonstrated that primary rock, crushed to the fineness of soil, may carry per acre-four-feet, seventy-eight tons of potassium, 250 tons of calcium, 133 tons of magnesium and even eight tons of phosphorus. So, too, an acre-four-feet of good soil may carry as much as 100 tons of potassium, forty-five tons of calcium, thirty-five tons of magnesium and even twelve tons of phosphorus, and there is this much foundation in fact for the statement we have criticised. But these enormous amounts of plant food elements present in the root zone of field crops are no more to be regarded as plant food for those crops than they are food for the animals feeding upon pasture grass.

A paper by Prof. F. H. King, of Madison, Wis., read before the Congress of Horticulture at the Jamestown exposition, September 23.

The food of plants, derived from the soil, is only certain substances which are dissolved in the soil moisture or which are carried in the soil in a form which may be readily so taken up as it is needed; and the amounts of these present in the root zone of field crops at any one time are relatively very small when compared with the amounts of the plant food elements from which they are derived. Much more is a soil like a pasture where plant food grows than like a bank or granary where it is stored, and just as a rich pasture may produce sufficient grass to carry a large herd, so may a fertile soil produce from day to day plant food sufficient for good crops. Just as pastures differ in the amounts of herbage on the ground and in the amounts they are able to add to this as it is fed away, so do fields differ both in the amounts of plant food present in the root zone at any one time and in the amounts they are able to add as this is withdrawn.

An Actual Experiment.

Our own observations, published by the Bureau of Soils, have demonstrated that four good soils, observed to produce 2.5 times the yield of corn and potatoes per acre that four poorer soils did under identical treatments, also gave up, when washed three minutes in five times their weight of pure water, 2.58 times as much plant food. Not only was there this difference in the amounts of plant food carried in water-soluble form in the best and in the poorer soils, but the amounts of this same plant food taken out of like areas of field by like numbers and kinds of plants during the same time was 3.2 times as great in the sap of the plants which gave the highest yield. Such observations would appear to fully justify the general conviction that increased yields should be directly attributed to better feeding and that better feeding is a direct result of larger amounts of plant food available to the crop. It is taught, however, by the Bureau of Soils, that all soil solutions are sensibly identical in composition and in concentration; that they are strong enough for large yields and that this strength will be indefinitely maintained. From these conclusions the Bureau further teaches that mineral fertilizers, green and stable manures and a good rotation of crops owe their efficiency to the power they have of neutralizing toxic principles which tend to accumulate in cultivated soils, rather than to any power of increasing available plant food, an abundance of which at all times and in all soils is held to be present.

Availability of Plant Food.

While it is true that good soils may yield to pure water two, three and more times the amounts of plant food that poorer soils will, and while the absolute differences may be as 3,200-pounds per acre-four-feet to 1,200 pounds, yet these quantities are so small in proportion to the total water present in the soil that one may with truth say, from the standpoint of the chemical balance, as Professor Whitney does, that the composition and concentration of all soil solutions are sensibly the same. Nevertheless it is undoubtedly true that soil solutions are measurably different, both in composition and concentration, and from the standpoint of plant functions they must be profoundly so, for organic life is almost inconceivably sensitive to small quantities of matter.

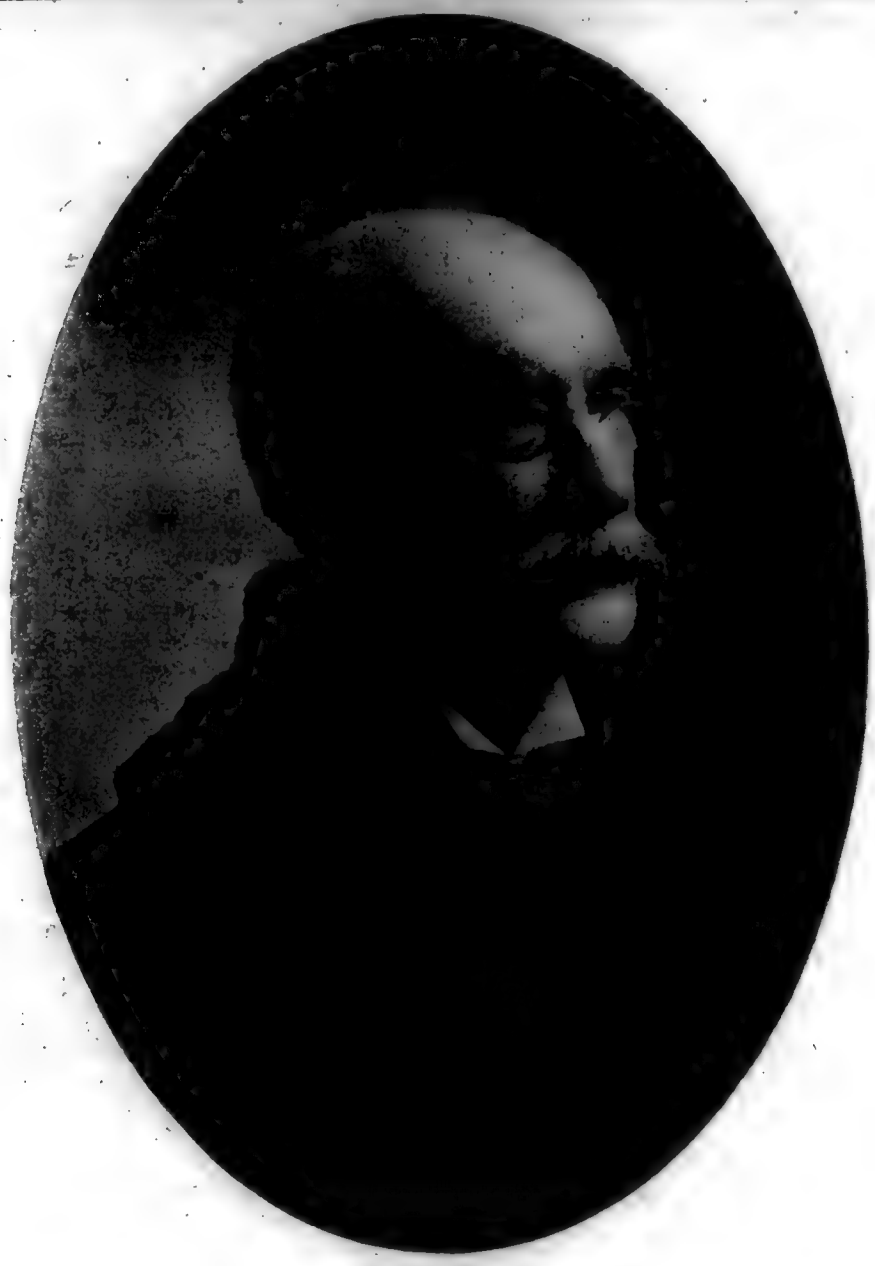
Our published results show, too, that we are able to recover from the surface four feet of good soil as much water-soluble plant food of both potassium and phosphorus as would be removed from a field by nine forty-bushel crops of wheat per acre, and from poorer soils as much as would be removed by six such crops, and here is what has been thought a safe foundation for the contention that even in water-soluble form the poorest soils contain plant food enough for good yields. So there is, in absolute quantity, but not in available quantity. For example, a three-horse tread-power may be in such condition that when one horse is put upon it no work is done; adding a second horse may yet yield only half an available horse-power, but when the third horse is put in place its whole weight may yield effective power, so that the available work becomes three times what it was with two horses. So it may be with soils. Plant food enough for perhaps many crops must be present in order that enough for one may become available.

Nature's Method of Fertilizing.

So far as we know, either from published data or on a priori ground, there is no foundation for the hope that the supply of plant food in soils may be indefinitely maintained simply by good tillage and suitable crop rotations, which make positive additions only of nitrogen to the soil. The only way Nature has ever produced crops, and this is the way she has always maintained soil fertility, has been to return to the field the whole crop, and by working along this line for a thousand years together she never did and never can bring all her fields to an equality in productive capacity, as should be the case if all soils carry an abundance of plant food.

A very simple calculation, based on well-established data, will show that an exhaustion of the plant food elements, large as these amounts are, must necessarily follow any system of cropping which involves no return to the soil other than nitrogen. The amounts of plant food removed by certain crops are definitely known; the absolute amounts of plant food elements carried by good soils are known, and taking twenty tons of potassium per acre-foot, which is about the amount carried, a quantity equal to the whole of this would be removed in about 1,400 years by wheat yields of forty bushels per acre; and the entire amount of phosphorus carried by the surface foot is equivalent to only about 400 such crops. Careful records have shown, too, that the Mississippi river carries out to sea annually enough material to lower its entire drainage area one foot each 4,000 to 6,000 years, which means that the surface foot of soil may be completely removed and replaced by a corresponding layer from below at the same rate, but the rate of removal of potassium by a forty-bushel crop of wheat is three to four times as rapid as this, and the crop exhaustion for phosphorus is ten to fifteen times as rapid as rock is being converted into new soil on the average over the Mississippi valley. Were Professor Whitney's contention true, the mean productive capacity of the soils in the Mississippi valley should be no more than three to four bushels of wheat per acre, for this is the rate at which rock weathering and erosion are supplying phosphorus to the soil from below.

Structure.



From the standpoint of structure, soils differ very widely, both in the extent of their internal surface and in the character and extent of the segregation of their particles. These differences are fundamental, and very important in determining the relative productive capacity and in directing agricultural practice. An acre-four-foot of one-foot granite blocks would possess an internal surface of twenty-four acres to which water might adhere, upon which plant food might develop and where it might be stored, over which the roots of plants might spread and feed and where soil organisms might dwell. To reduce the diameters of these cubes from one to one-thousandth of a foot would increase the internal surface one thousand-fold, making it aggregate 24,000 acres per acre of field. But even this surface is too small to maintain a high productive capacity. Our coarsest sandy soils possess an internal surface per acre-four-feet exceeding forty-five square miles per acre of field; our loams, 270 square miles; while our finest clay types possess an internal surface exceeding 1,300 square miles per acre of field. It is clear, therefore, that there must be wide differences in the productive capacity of soils due to differences of internal surface alone, even where their chemical natures may be identical. This must be so, because where there is more surface more water can be retained, plant food may form more rapidly and more may be stored and held in reserve and even accumulated during intervals of small demand, as well as retained against loss by leaching.

The innermost portion of water films investing soil grain surfaces, in my judgment, is held there with so much force as to be little subject to change, either by drainage or capillary movement, and also becomes highly charged with plant food, which likewise is strongly retained, escaping only by the slow process of diffusion when the roots of plants are placed in contact with the soil grain surfaces or when the excess hydrostatic and capillary portions of water are moving by. We have found, for example, that when a chemically cleaned sand was charged with a solution of potassium nitrate, ten repeated washings in twice its weight of distilled water still left in the films of moisture retained by the sand grains enough of the nitrate to represent 244 pounds per acre-four-feet. Plant food so retained by soils may still be available to crops, for their root hairs are similarly invested with water films and when placed in apposition with the soil grains the water film becomes common to the two and simple diffusion permits the root to feed upon the plant food so retained.

Proper Drainage.

This brings me to consider a principle underlying proper land drainage. It is very important that when rain falls upon a field the excess water remain only just long enough on its way through the open water passages to saturate the soil; anything longer than this provides time and opportunity for the most valuable plant food materials carried in the water films about the soil grains to diffuse out into the moving water and so become lost in the drainage.

THE DEATH ROLL.

W. W. Edgar.

After a somewhat lingering illness, borne however with much patience, W. W. Edgar died December 18, of cancer of the liver. Mr. Edgar was an Englishman, hailing from Cheshire, where he first saw the light April 28, 1843. After working on several English estates, he decided to try his fortunes in America and crossed the Atlantic in 1867. He was employed first in the, at that time, well known Pratt estate in Watertown, where David Allan had charge for many years. Later he went as gardener to Major Claffler, who became governor of Massachusetts, and stayed there seven years. Afterwards he was employed by the late John Galvin, father of Thomas F. Galvin, the well-known Boston florist, and upon leaving him went as foreman to Thomas W. Dee, at Mount Auburn, where he stayed until he started business on his own account, at Waverley, Mass., in 1885.

Mr. Edgar, who was possessed of tireless energy, soon built up for himself a successful business and his productions, both of cut flowers and plants, have always had a high standing in the Boston market. His specialty had usually been pot plants, such as lilies, Lorraine begonias, azaleas, Rambler roses, acacias, poinsettias, ferns and about everything salable from a commercial standpoint. In addition to his greenhouses at Waverley, which covered a considerable area, Mr. Edgar, owing to his increasing business, bought the Nathan Morse estate in Waltham, a short walk from his other plant, and erected several commodious houses on it. The deceased was possibly the first successful commercial grower of the now popular Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and was quick to note the merits in any novelties which promised well from a commercial point of view. He on many occasions exhibited at the Boston shows, having some splendid vases of chrysanthemums at the last exhibition.

Mr. Edgar was always pleased to welcome visitors at his greenhouses and home and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club enjoyed pleasant field days there on several occasions, being always kindly entertained. Of this society the deceased gentleman had been a member almost from its organization. He was a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, of the S. A. F. and the American Rose Society. He had been for some time a director in the Park Street flower market, where many of his products were sold. He was a member of Belmont Lodge A. F. & A. M. and Coeur de Lion Commandery K. T., of Charlestown. He also belonged to the Odd Fellows and Royal Arcanum. In affairs connected with the town of Waverley he took an active interest and his was one of the best known figures in a community in which he was held in much esteem.

Mr. Edgar had been married three times, a wife and nine children surviving him. Two sons, Robert S. and Frank, are engaged in the business at Waverley and have been a great help to their father of late years. The interment took place from All Saints' Church, Belmont, December 21, when the sacred edifice contained a large gathering of mourning friends who had come from far and near to pay a last tribute of respect. There were delegations from the several societies to which Mr. Edgar belonged, including a number of his confreres from the Park Street market and Gardeners' and Florists' Club, each of which sent handsome floral souvenirs. The display of flowers was one of the largest seen at any funeral in Waverley of late years. The pallbearers were Alex Montgomery, Thomas Roland, W. J. Stewart, P. Welch, M. P. Norton, Joseph Fuller, F. R. Mathieson and T. A. Cox.

Mrs. Julius Schray.

Mrs. Julius Schray, wife of Julius E. Schray, St. Louis, died early Monday morning, December 23, after a short illness. Mr. Schray is of the well-known firm of Wm. Schray's Sons and his many friends in the trade extend their sympathy.

Dennis McKenney.

Dennis McKenney, a nurseryman well known in Alameda county, California, was burned to death at his home in Irvington, Cal., on the morning of December 19. Mr. McKenney was alone in his house at the time and the fire was discovered by a watchman on the premises, who hastened to extinguish it, but when he broke in his employer was found terribly burned about the lower part of the body. He was still conscious when taken from the building, but expired shortly afterwards. The supposition is that Mr. McKenney went to sleep in bed with a lighted cigar in his hand and in this way set fire to the bedclothes. He was 60 years of age and leaves a wife to mourn his loss.

George Vair.

George Vair, of Toronto, Ont., dropped dead December 11 as he was stepping off a street car on his way home from his day's work. On leaving his work at the Normal School he had appeared to be in perfect health, and his death was evidently due to some form of heart trouble. He was born in Scotland 74 years ago and came to Toronto in 1855. During the following year he was engaged by Sir David McPherson as gardener and florist at Chestnut Park, and he retained that position for thirty years. During the last eight years of his life he had been gardener at the Normal School. He had always taken an active interest in horticultural matters. He was prominent in the work of the Toronto Electoral District Society and was its president for about ten years. He was widely known and highly esteemed in the trade and took an active part in entertaining the American Carnation Society at the time of its convention at Toronto last January.

E. V. R. Thayer.

Eugene Van Rensselaer Thayer died of heart disease at his Boston home December 20. Mr. Thayer was 52 years of age and had been ailing for some time. He had a fine estate at South Lancaster, Mass., where also three of his brothers had their residences. He was a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. His head gardener, E. O. Orpet, is noted as a grower of orchids and has made a specialty of seedling raising. W. N. CRAIG.

TOLEDO, O.—Harry Heinl refused to accept a consignment of 300 azaleas from Ghent which arrived via Lake Shore railroad in bad condition.

SPECIAL NOTICE

NEW YEAR'S

Because New Year's falls on Wednesday, the day the Review is printed, the issue for next week will go to press one day earlier than usual,

Tuesday, December 31

Advertisers and correspondents will please see that their matter reaches us not later than Tuesday morning, and earlier will be better.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1907: President, William J. Stewart, Boston; vice-president, John Westcott, Philadelphia; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

Next to red, Killarney has proved to be the most popular Christmas rose.

The Plantadendron is the name of a flower store at Utica, N. Y.

Now is the time to order the rooted cuttings of carnations needed for next season.

Christmas comes but once a year, 'tis true, but there still is Easter, due April 19 this season.

Let all who fear congestion of the cut flower markets take heart: During 1907, 36,580 Greeks immigrated to this country.

Tell your customers that it is the proper thing to send New Year's remembrances, especially to those who may have been overlooked at Christmas. You can suggest that no New Year's gift is in better taste than a fancy box or hamper of violets.

The Garden and Farm Almanac for 1908 has been isued by Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. It contains a large amount of practical information, completely indexed, and looks to be worth 25 cents to any one who plants, either for pleasure or for profit.

If "A Long Island Grower" will send his name, not for publication but merely as an evidence of good faith, the Review will take pleasure in answering his questions regarding carnations for the New York market. Anonymous communications never are noticed.

Readers of the Review will please bear in mind that it is the practice to promptly discontinue all subscriptions upon expiration if not renewed. If you want the Review you will not neglect sending the dollar when you get our notice that it is due; if you don't want the paper the publishers have no desire to force it on you and then present a bill.

Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee.—Poor Richard's Almanack.

John R. Fotheringham, of the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, has just completed a visit of several weeks to the trade in England, during which he served as a judge at the exhibition of the Winter-flowering Carnation Society, London, December 11.

WHAT IS MONEY?

The John C. Moninger Co., in a "Merry Christmas" circular, has this to say on money:

"What is money? It is not wealth, for no man figures his wealth by the actual cash money that he possesses. Money is merely a means of exchange. It is a substitute for real wealth. The man who builds a house would not want to take his pay in shoes from the man who makes shoes—he couldn't use that many shoes, nor would he want his pay in hats, or neckties. For this reason money was brought into use. Thousands of years ago, before money was used, men traded cattle. Cattle were wealth. If a man had a piece of ground he sold it for a certain number of cattle and all business was transacted with cattle as the base for money. Finally the hides were traded and then a piece of leather with a stamp on it. At last paper was used and various kinds of metals—money was brought out in this way. It represented wealth. Because money is short is no sign that we are poorer—not in the least, for our wealth still remains and we are only in need of means for exchanging it.

"As to the shortage of money, the best illustration we know of is this: Freight cars are, like money, used for moving things from one place to another, and if several of the large owners of freight cars got together and decided to hoard the cars we would soon be without means for moving our goods. Freight cars would be short and the business of the country would be at a standstill. If the holders of money, from fear of hard times and panics, choose to hide their money and hold it, there of course follows a shortness of it. When our money is gone we have no means of exchanging our wealth and must go back to primitive methods of trading cattle. We would not be any poorer than we were before.

"It is now time for the man who has any wealth, whether much or little, to put it to use. You can make a better trade just at present than you can later on. We honestly believe that the florist who builds for next year will make more money than he ever did before on the same amount of capital invested."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The latter part of last week saw only moderate demand but light supplies of stock of good quality, so that prices were strong. It was not until Saturday night that there was any quantity of stock to be seen, and this was due to Saturday afternoon shipments by growers who could not reach the market Sunday.

The Christmas business began in earnest Sunday, when shipping was heavy. Those houses which make a specialty of the shipping business found it necessary to work all day Sunday and a number were open until late at night before the last order was dispatched. It was a big

New Year's calls for an especially large quantity of Violets. Everybody can sell them in quantity, if offered. We have them; the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles.

BEAUTIES

We have a good supply of American Beauties, extra fine stock, all lengths of stems, but especially strong on long.

CARNATIONS

If there is any item we are stronger on than on other stock, it is on Carnations. We are in full crop and the best stock we ever shipped; our Enchantress have been the finest in town all this season, as well as last. Also large lots of fine white and pink.

Mignonette

A fine crop of fancy Mignonette just coming on.

Bulb Stuff

Plenty of Paper Whites, Romans, Jonquils. Tulips just beginning.

Also large supplies of Sweet Peas, Bouvardia, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Stevia, etc.
Plenty Green Goods, as always. An extra fine crop of Smilax now ready.

day—one of the largest the Chicago market has seen in a long time. In general, there was enough stock, but of course special lines ran short. Some houses were obliged to cut carnation orders, but most of them had enough of everything but red. Roses were shorter than carnations, which was just the opposite of what had been expected by the majority. Of course, red was out of the question. Beauties were scarce, unless one was willing to take open flowers, and these were not wanted for shipping orders. There was no special call for other items of stock Sunday, although poinsettias, chrysanthemums and some other things were shipped in good quantity.

Monday, December 23, was really the big day in the market. Orders were heavier than on Sunday and supplies of stock generally less. During the day it was difficult for one wholesaler to buy of another and early orders were cut in many instances, but after the wholesalers found where they stood there was a sorting up which let orders go out in as good shape as they ever are sent out at a holiday. Of course, red could not be supplied wherever wanted, and medium Beauties were exceedingly short. Long could be had if open flowers would do. Roses were much shorter than carnations. Enchantress was in heavy supply, exceeding either pink or white in quantity, and was just a little weaker in price than had been expected, which may be said to have been the case with the whole carnation market late Tuesday evening, after the orders had gone out. There were heavy receipts of violets December 23 and large quantities were carried over to Tuesday, although the shipping demand for violets is steadily increasing. Poinsettias were in large supply and not especially good sale. There were no notable increases in the supply of such things as lilies, Paper Whites, Romans, sweet peas, stevia, etc., and few of these are called for on shipping orders. Many chrysanthemums were on hand, but most of them were poor and not many shipping orders called for them. The city buyers received little attention Monday and, in fact, they made little attempt to buy for other than that day's needs, asserting that a break was certain by Tuesday night.

While there was some stock carried over from Monday night, Tuesday, December 24, brought much lighter receipts than on the two previous days. The market would have been comparatively bare had the retailers taken hold as usual Monday night, but even on Tuesday morning they showed little desire to buy. The receipts of violets, which had been heavy Monday, were still heavier Tuesday, but there were great differences in quality. Some stock was fine, but there were thousands upon thousands of shakers. The good stock was selling out fairly well at about $1.50 for Tuesday's market, although prices ranged from $2 down. A fair clean-up of all good violets seems certain, but there will be a great quantity of poor stuff that will bring next to nothing. Tuesday's market was firmer than the retailers expected, the wholesalers standing firm with the conviction that before the close of business Tuesday night the retailers would have to take at good prices everything of good quality that was in the market.

Christmas at Retail.

The retailers put in the usual stocks of plants in anticipation of the Christmas trade, but most of them were inclined to delay the placing of orders for cut flowers. The trade did not amount to much until Monday, when the rush began. As this issue of the Review went to press on Tuesday, it is impossible to say how the total of sales compare, but it seems likely to be somewhat less than last year, for where the holiday business is crowded into a couple of days it seldom makes a record. The retailers say buyers generally have asked for lower priced gifts than last year. The best selling baskets were from $4 to $6, where last year $5 to $10 was readily paid, and the same request for cut flowers at lower prices has been noted.

Christmas Plants.

The supplies of Christmas plants were rather greater than usual, but there was not much novelty among them. Quality was excellent, the azaleas being particularly good, and they were used in more of the plant arrangements than usual. Poinsettias in pans were offered in thousands, but not all were of rapid selling quality. In fact, the bracts were decidedly small. Cyclamens, primroses and Jerusalem cherries were good and sold well. Oranges and ardisias were seen in considerable quantity, with some aucubas. Lorraine begonia was less freely offered than last year. Boxwood and other evergreens were used in considerable quantity and it was noted that in many stores more green was used in plant arrangements than ever before.

A Retailers' Market.

A well-known downtown retailer says that there is no cloud but has its silver lining. While his business thus far this season has been less than last year, the difference in the cost of stock has been enough to make up a large part of the loss, and his profits have been almost as great as last year. While a part of his requirements are extra select, he does a great deal of funeral work and can use flowers which would not ship. During the rose glut in November he made a harvest and with a falling off in sales throughout October, in November except at Thanksgiving, and in December up to Christmas, he came out nearly as well as in the same period last year.

In Edgewater.

Stollery Bros. were looking forward last Saturday to one of the busiest weeks in their experience. They had already received enough orders for decorations, in churches and elsewhere, to assure them of a good holiday business.

Leopold Koropp's store, always noticeable for its artistic appearance, is particularly attractive at present, in its holiday array. Mr. Koropp has been strenuously busy for a week or more. In addition to a fair amount of work

AN INVITATION

To all my brother florists of Chicago and vicinity, and all their friends, I hereby extend a cordial invitation to visit me in my newly rebuilt quarters, at the old location, Lincoln and Van Buren Sts. My Christmas decorations will be in place for two more weeks.

in his own immediate neighborhood, he had decorations for several downtown hotels and restaurants, including the Hofbrau, the Edelweiss, the Bismarck and the Union hotel.

H. F. Halle is well satisfied with the patronage he is receiving at his pleasant new corner store on the north side. His show windows are so large as to give him a fine opportunity for the display of his stock. He has just received a nice lot of azaleas, chiefly Simon Mardner and Vervæneana.

Seitz & Nordell have dissolved partnership and Henry Seitz is now running the business in his own name. His new place at the northeast corner of Evanston and Glenlake avenues is a model of durability, completeness and convenience. The greenhouses are of Moninger construction, with concrete walls. The store, boiler-room, work-room and stable are built of concrete blocks. Mr. Seitz is also building, for his own use, a pretty six-room frame residence, near the greenhouses and fronting on Glenlake avenue.

Mr. Kill is Interviewed.

A recent issue of the Inter Ocean, one-time Chicago's leading daily, contained half a column about Peter Reinberg and his business that bore unmistakable evidence that the young lady reporter had been interviewing Leonard Kill. Witness the following:

"The Mrs. Marshall Field rose, which is a shaded pink of exquisite tints, is grown by Peter Reinberg, who combines the duties of being the Democratic alderman from a Republican ward with the business of being the grower of more roses than any other Chicago florist. There are 1,580,000 square feet of glass over the Reinberg greenhouses, and the Reinberg rose tract covers acres and acres.

"Because the Reinberg roses are grown cooler than any other roses, they keep longer and look fresher. There is a dewy freshness about one of the Reinberg roses that a professional florist will recognize at a glance.

"The colorings of the roses are another accomplishment that the florists who are employed by the Carnation Alderman have become expert in. The tints of the roses are the more wonderful to contemplate when the observer remembers that they have been secured by a marvelous application of scientific principles of art with the assistance of nature. It is the personal quality of absorbed and enthusiastic interest in the growing of roses that has made the Reinberg rose what it is. From Alderman Reinberg and Manager Kill to the boys who work in the greenhouses as assistants, there is a uniform interest about the product of the place. The Mrs. Marshall Field is the queen who reigns supreme among their roses, and they give her the homage courtiers would pay to a reigning monarch. And not one of her lovely court of minor satellites is neglected."

A Christmas shipment of Mrs. Field went as far east as Troy, N. Y.

Various Notes.

C. A. Samuelson and W. J. Smyth had the greater part of the business for the Henry Dibblee funeral December 21, where large quantities of flowers were used. Mr. Smyth says business has been excellent in the last fortnight, although not quite up to last year.

At E. H. Hunt's, W. E. Lynch says they were excessively busy beginning December 21, and that the Christmas season has been the best on record, with the opportunity of doing more business had the supply in certain lines been greater.

The store of Kennicott Bros. Co. has looked like Thanksgiving instead of Christmas this week, because of large receipts of Bonnaffon chrysanthemums. Dorner's new pink carnation, Winona, is handled here. It sells quickly and the retailers report it has great keeping qualities.

C. A. Samuelson says buyers who readily paid $20 per dozen for long Beauties last Christmas, hesitated at $18 this year, and the $2 difference was directly out of the retailer's pocket.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent a good sized shipment of its special grade of roses to Ottawa, Canada, December 21. With twenty-five per cent duty added to the Chicago market price, it gives an idea of what Canadians think of Chicago roses. Cardinal brought $6 a dozen.

The E. F. Winterson Co. had large receipts of white and pink chysanthemums for Christmas. Quality being fair, good prices were realized.

Zech & Mann report receiving a Christmas present December 21 in the shape of a new rose grower, who began shipping that day without the formality of previous arrangement.

Clifford Pruner, who has been on the sick list since the flower show, was able to take part in the holiday rush at Hunt's. He will go on the road again early in the new year.

W. H. Hilton acknowledges that his affection is for horses rather than for flowers and will sell his flower store if he can.

Harry Rowe had the writing-room at the Palmer house as an annex for the Christmas business, the same as he had it Easter.

Frederick Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, says he looks for a steady improvement in business after January 1, referring particularly to general trade and its natural effect upon the cut flower market.

The Fleischman store on Jackson boulevard is said to use more violets than any other store at Christmas and Easter. For December 24 they ordered 45,000, dividing the business between several houses.

One of the visitors last week was F. C. Rice, of Rice Bros., Minneapolis.

E. C. Amling had the first Trumpet Major narcissi seen in this market. They arrived December 20.

E. B. Washburn is at home from Madison, and helping out at Bassett & Washburn's during the holiday rush.

Weiland & Risch say they missed their heaviest crop of Killarney for Christmas, but will have it for New Year's.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports excellent satisfaction with the Christmas business in supplies. Sales exceeded expectations and all Christmas specialties were cleared out except a few paper bells and some immortelle wreaths.

Philip Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says the Christmas business was in every way satisfactory except that some special lines of stock did not equal requirements.

Joseph Foerster has completely changed his notion about Killarney. Last year he thought little of it, but this season it was the best thing George Reinberg had at Christmas. The Benthey-Coatsworth Co., too, says Killarney was the leading item this week.

J. J. Kruchten is figuring on a large crop of carnations from his father's greenhouses during January.

Wietor Bros. say that the chrysanthemum season, which practically ended with Thanksgiving, while not as good as last year, was still entirely satisfactory. Their Christmas business was helped out by a big cut of fancy carnations.

C. W. McKellar is handling cyclamen plants again this season and says they sell well.

The committee of the Florists' Club appointed to handle the rose meeting had a session December 21 and delegated the various parts of the work of preparation to the several members of the committee. George Asmus was delegated to hunt for a hall.

Dodd's Floral Co., not incorporated, opened a flower store at 1047 East Sixty-first street early this month.

P. J. Demas, proprietor of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, was in the city December 21 and 22 looking for stock.

Holly has sold for $7 per crate and upward. Green was abundant and the market closed at the lowest.

Alonzo Wygant, general superintendent for the United States Express Co., and well known to wholesale florists, died December 23. The funeral December 26 will be a big one and call for many flowers, for Mr. Wygant was widely connected in the business world and a member of many clubs and lodges. He was 71 years of age.

Lily of the valley has been slow sale for several weeks.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week business was rather quiet. As usual, just before Christmas there was little society work going on; a few small weddings and dinners and a good deal of funeral work is about all that can be reported for the week. Some of the large establishments report a great many advance orders and plant sales have been quite satisfactory. Baskets filled with plants are being more generally offered than last year.

(December 23), as little stock of any one variety is coming in and the commission men will only take advance orders on the basis of "If they come in we will fill your orders," and all are looking for a scarcity in roses, carnations and violets, with greatly advanced prices. They expect the usual supply of bulb stock, which is generally large for the holidays. Last week all the commission men cleaned up every day, as little came in. All stock is of extra good quality. Holly is scarce, selling in some instances at $14 per case for extra select.

Various Notes.

J. Bruns, of Pacific, Mo., was a caller last week, buying holiday supplies.

C. Young & Sons Co. has an artistic outdoor decoration of laurel. This, with the artistic window decorations, attracts a great deal of attention.

The club's committee on the pottery question was to have met December 19, at Kuehn's, but owing to the busy season Chairman Sanders will call a meeting after New Year's, when more time can be taken and the members of the committee are not so busy.

W. C. Smith & Co. are receiving some extra fine bulbous stock, which includes lily of the valley, Romans, Paper Whites and callas. A fine lot of Californian violets are also seen here daily from their Kirkwood consignors.

Pierre Schneider, of Kirkwood, is sending to Kuehn's some of the finest Enchantress carnations that come to this market. This consignment is sold clean each day to one of the west end florists.

Fred H. Weber's Boyle and Maryland avenue place is filled with the finest of everything in the blooming plant line. He is in the heart of the fashionable district and expects a large holiday business.

Ludwig Zimmer, the Biddle market florist, reports that he has disposed of a great deal of green and holly. He has an attractive window decoration.

Arthur Ellison is home for the holidays. He will come in handy to help the Ellison Floral Co. during the Christmas rush. He will return after New Year's.

F. H. Meinhardt and the Koenig Floral Co., who are opposite the large cemeteries, have been kept busy with cemetery decorations, which consist of grave covers, wreathing, holly and green wreaths.

The window of the Riessen Floral Co. is one of the attractions on Broadway. A great many advance orders have been placed and they expect their usual rush.

The Bentzen Floral Co., on North Grand avenue, is making great preparations to supply the large retail trade. A specialty is made of fine blooming plants.

The first Florists' Club meeting in the New Year will take place Thursday afternoon, January 9, at two o'clock. President W. C. Young reports that the trustees are preparing something interesting for the members. A general discussion will take place on the holiday trade. This should interest retailer, wholesaler and the grower. Secretary Bentzen will send out special invitations to all in the trade. A large attendance is expected.

Adolph Goldenberg, representing R. M. Ward & Co., New York, was a visitor.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The week before Christmas saw the usual curtailment in flower receipts. Demand was light, with prices considerably higher, especially on carnations and violets. Christmas week opened with heavier supplies and a firm tone to the market. Whether prices will remain stiff until Tuesday evening is problematical; on Monday, a slump in some lines seems probable. There is a good demand, far better than we could have hoped for a month ago, but it hardly promises to equal last year's record. The comparatively clear skies and absence of severe cold has been favorable to a large cut of flowers and no shortage of any varieties seems likely.

Roses are of fine quality. Beauty is of exceptional excellence. Bride and Maid were never better. Richmond and Killarney are splendid. Wellesley, Chatenay and other sorts are all good. Some nice blooms of Safrano, an old-time favorite, are also seen. Carnations are rather aggressive, as usual. For a week past $6 per hundred has been realized by all good flowers, some bringing higher rates. Violets are making $1 to $1.50 per hundred, but may be lower before Christmas. There is a fair supply of valley, callas and lilies, both Harrisii and speciosum. Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are plentiful. Yellow daffodils of the French Trumpet Major type are arriving in fair quantity, also tulips from one or two growers. Poinsettias seem to be more plentiful than usual, at prices ranging from $2 to $6 per dozen bracts. A little Euphorbia jacquiniæflora is seen, also mignonette, marguerites, sweet peas, snapdragon and cypripediums. There is a good call for Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, also for adiantum and common ferns.

Plant trade has been quite good, some of the leaders being azaleas, the leading sort being Hexe, locally known as Firefly; Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, cyclamens, Otaheite oranges, ardisias, solanums and primulas. Some nice hollies, aucubas and other berried shrubs are selling well. There is a good demand for small ferns in dishes and a fair call only for palms and Boston ferns. There is an unexpectedly heavy call for wreathing of every kind.

The weather all day Monday was warm, with a drenching rain. It hurt Christmas trade considerably, especially with the retailers.

Awards for exhibits at the meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 17 were as follows: Rose No. 294, from John Cook, Baltimore, color of a deep Bridesmaid, awarded a report of merit. A seedling lily, L. Philippense x L. longiflorum secured a similar award for R. & J. Farquhar & Co. The lily is fairly intermediate in habit and flowered in exactly ten months from seed. H. F. Woods received a cultural certificate for splendid Princess violets. Elijah A. Wood had some excellent pedigreed and William Sim equally good Christmas Pink and Mont Blanc sweet peas. T. H. Westwood showed Begonia La Vesuve, which he stated is a grand bedding sort. E. B. Beals, of Springfield, had several vases of promising seedling carnations. W. N. Craig received a report of superior merit for culture for Eucharis Amazonica.

Eben Holmes, from Montrose Greenhouses, had two fine vases of mixed roses and S. J. Goddard excellent Beacon, Octoroon, White Perfection and Ceres carnations. The latter is of Scott color and was awarded a report of merit.

W. J. Stewart spoke entertainingly of his late trip to Jamestown, up the Potomac to Washington, etc. Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig told of sights they had seen, horticultural and otherwise, in and around New York city. It was voted to hold ladies' night January 21, when the new officers will be installed. This will attract the largest gathering of the year.

Peirce Bros. have a big lot of Hexe azaleas just right for Christmas, also a dwarf double pink named Petrick. They have some nice Lilium auratum from cold storage bulbs.

Houghton & Clark are showing a fine lot of Otaheite oranges, Lorraine begonias, azaleas and ardisias.

H. M. Robinson & Co. say that trade in wreaths and other decorative greenery has surprised them. They feared diminished demand but it proved heavier than a year ago. They had some fine cattleyas and gardenias among choice flowers.

Henry Penn is mourning the death of his sister, which occurred December 20.

A. Roper's new seedling striped carnation, Bay State, has been making top price at the Music Hall market.

William Spillsbury and A. T. Kidder, as usual, have had some Princess of Wales violets which it would be hard to duplicate.

Thomas Roland had an excellent plant trade and is well cleaned out of all salable stock.

William Walke, of Salem, noted as a grower of poinsettias and Lorraine begonias, had a splendid lot of Lilium Harrisii just right for Christmas.

Among the earliest bulb specialists to market yellow Trumpet daffodils were E. Sutermeister, Frank T. White, Mann Bros. and William Patterson, of Wollaston.

T. F. Galvin had a fine stock of ardisias and poinsettias. One window was devoted to camellias.

mas pick of carnations since he started business. The quality was nearly all fancy.

Thomas H. Westwood, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, is among the latest victims of the grip.

William Sim had his usual immense stock of high quality single violets for Christmas supplemented by a fine lot of sweet peas.

No finer Bride and Bridesmaid roses ever came into the Boston market than W. H. Elliott is now sending from his Brighton establishment.

Farquhar & Co. have a batch of several hundred seedling lilies, longiflorum x Philippense, many of which are showing flower buds. Their effort is to secure a larger bulb than L. Philippense produces and at the same time get a lily which can be forced into bloom much quicker than L. longiflorum or Harrisii.

F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, has made a specialty of ardisias for the Christmas trade. Mr. Dolansky is a noted grower of sweet peas. His stock is handled at Park Street market by J. F. Free.

Welch Bros. have handled an enormous quantity of decorative material the last fortnight.

President Westwood has appointed Edward Hatch, W. J. Stewart and P. Welch a committee on resolutions on the death of William W. Edgar.

W. B. Goodenow and Thomas Peglar have some of the finest double violets seen in our market for Christmas.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Christmas is in the air, and all that the word implies of good cheer, optimism and generosity. All last week and Sunday we have had in New York a brand of weather that would make a Californian envious; sunshine in abundance, Sunday like a day in June. This should overcome somewhat the light Christmas supply of cut flowers which has been feared for several days and which, judging by the steadiness and gradual advance of the last of the week, means higher rates than had been anticipated. The fact is, stock is scarce. Pickling or no pickling, there will not be enough to go around and, moreover, the financial situation is clearer, the money pulse is beating stronger and the people are spending money again. On Saturday streets and stores in retail New York were blocked with the multitudes of Christmas shoppers and few were without holly and wreaths and many other evidences of the florists' prosperity. Many of the luxury merchants have suffered, especially the jewelers, but the florists seem to have benefited by the economy of the wealthy, and plants and flowers have taken the place of diamonds and pearls, as acceptable gifts to friends and loved ones. So we now anticipate a merry and successful Christmas for all. A continuation of good weather will assure it.

The plantsmen are already out of the woods and every plant worth while in the greenhouses of the expert growers of this vicinity has been sold and delivered. Every good plant within a radius of thirty miles will be used by the New York market or shipped to other cities. There have been many buyers here lately, making their selections, the swellest one of them all from the park department of Detroit. Prices for perfect plants have been firmly held and at quite as high a figure as a year ago, for there has been no diminution in the aggregate of sales. The varieties which have sold most rapidly are Lorraines, dracænas, azaleas, oranges, ericas, poinsettias and ardisias. Holly trees have sold well and cyclamens and araucarias have been especially attractive and well grown. Of the popular nephrolepis ferns and decorative palms the sale has been large and satisfactory. The plant growers have no cause for discouragement and now that they have effected a harmonious and powerful organization, there seems to be no good reason for anything but progress and profit this side of April 19.

Special Beauties sold at 40 cents December 21, and a few of them touched 50 cents. There is no doubt of 75 cents for Christmas and for the best I think one may safely forecast $1. All the grades of Beauties and, in fact, of every rose, sold fast and high. Scarcity rather than heavy demand was given by the wholesalers as the cause. Maids advanced to 12 cents and carnations to 6 cents, these figures of course being for the selected.

Lilies were firm at 12 cents. Best valley sold at from 5 cents down to 2 cents. Orchids were in good demand in the city and out of it. There will not be any orchids in wholesalers' ice-boxes Christmas morning. There are some grand gardenias in the market, selling at 50 cents, and there are a lot as low as 15 cents. You pay your money and you take your choice. This fact now applies to about everything sold by the wholesalers. One has to have a pretty good reputation and record to secure credit, and the slow payers and non-payers are rapidly becoming converted to the new system, which has been inaugurated by the wholesale cut flower association.

There are still a few chrysanthemums in the market. The growers plan to deliver the last of them Christmas morning. The Jap has had a long and persistent season and, although prices have been below those of 1906, the aggregate of sales has been quite up to record years. However, we gladly speed the parting guest, and will now get down to business and see what the orchids, and roses, and violets, and carnations can do with the old man of the sea removed.

Monday, December 23, brought a heavy rain, but notwithstanding this handicap, the retailers did an excellent business and expect to be well cleaned out. The weather turned cooler Monday night and prospects are for an excellent clean-up everywhere.

Monday the prices for the best Beauties were up to $75 per hundred; Maids $20, carnations $10, violets $1; cut flower shipments were light. The plant market was lightly attended.

Various Notes.

The store of Traendly & Schenck was burglarized Sunday night, December 22. Entry was had through the cellar and the cashier's desk was broken open. The loss was only $10 in change.

Mrs. Scallen has taken over the store at Broadway and Forty-second street, formerly conducted as Scallen's and sold out by the sheriff last week.

Herman Mende, of Secaucus, N. J., has been delivering from $50 to $100 worth of mums daily for some time, which Phil Kessler handles. The stork celebrated at Mende's last week and left a young mum grower as a Christmas memento a little ahead of time.

The Hatchet Club, of Newport, R. I., composed of the best of the gardening aristocracy of that city of millionaires, will have its annual banquet January 2 and the Rickards brothers will be guests. They have a number of new songs for the occasion.

The Starke Co. is the name of the new plant and cut-flower firm, headquarters at 52 West Twenty-ninth street, with William Starke as manager.

The sales of angelus and alpha bells have been large this year. Their lasting quality especially commends them. B. Rosens was the inventor.

About 5,000 cases of holly came to New York this year. Sixty per cent of it was unfit for sale. Twenty per cent of it was good. This readily commanded $5 a case. A good deal sold at $4 and the trash went off at $3 and under. The worst of it was not worth opening. The scarcity of good quality holly became known in time to set a lot of dishonest shippers at work and, berries or no berries, all the holly in sight was cut and sent to this market and other markets. There will be a lot of foxy grandpas next year who will want to see the goods before they purchase. Another goose that laid golden eggs has been killed.

The holly trees that were imported sold fast. Stumpp & Walter Co. had a fine stock of them. Mr. Walter has recovered from a severe attack of the grip, which laid himself and family on the shelf for two weeks.

Trepel's new store. The Blossom, has blossomed out in earnest over in Brooklyn, and has done a tremendous Christmas business. Its window space is enormous.

The Christmas tree enterprise is over for the year. It was the usual clean up and quite profitable to the mountain farmers, I judge. Prices ranged from 75 cents a single bundle to $25 for a single tree. A florist on East Thirty-fourth street near Fifth avenue was the buyer of the giant, and a good many trees from $15 each down to $5 were purchased by the florists for church and hall decoration.

No pen can paint the beauty, variety and gorgeousness of coloring in the windows of the retail florists of New York this week, especially on Monday, before the real rush began and the selected plants were put away. Never have such brilliant decorations been seen. To particularize would mean the naming of every retailer in New York. In many a window was illustrated artistic individuality that I have never seen excelled.

Mr. Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, with his family, is spending his Christmas holiday at Glen Cove, L. I.

Joseph Fenrich is handling superb valley from Schultheis, as usual.

Charles Millang's conservatory was crowded all the week with blooming plants of every kind that were going out as fast as they came in. Some especially fine poinsettias and begonias were among them.

J. K. Allen's sale of poinsettia plants was quite satisfactory. As usual at Christmas, his display of thirty varieties of carnations attracted much attention.

Out of town shipments by all the wholesalers were larger than expected.

Samuel A. Woodrow worked day and night for a week with a large force of helpers, shipping plants to Boston and many other New England cities.

All the wholesale cut flower houses made merry the night before Christmas.

The year in its entirety has left no cause for pessimism. The success, in the aggregate, has shown enlargement and profitable progress. The future is bright with possibilities and accomplishments. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The continued rainy weather has put a small damper on the transient trade of the retailers, but regular customers were buying much better last week than for some time. There is an abundance of all kinds of stock and prices have not yet commenced to inflate, although we are within one week of Christmas.

There is the usual scarcity of fancy roses, especially Beauties, but of everything else there seems to be enough and to spare. Violets are a glut and despite the nearness of the holidays the price has decreased twenty-five per cent during the last two weeks. For the first time in the history of local conditions there has been an abundance of poinsettias, and they are of better quality than ever before seen here. The Japanese growers have gone heavily into this end of the business this season and, although they have produced a large quantity of stock, the quality has not been first-class. The finest lot seen in the local market has been from the nurseries of Hutchins & James, of Elmhurst.

Carnations will, from all appearances, be in ample supply for the holidays and the quality is first-class throughout. The growers have not raised the prices, but we can look for a slight advance in a day or two.

Valley has been moving slowly and is not used to any extent, apparently, except in funeral work. Roman hyacinths are in the same position and the demand for these also is light. Green goods of all kinds are among the best selling articles at this time and together with redwood and garland and smilax have done much to swell the receipts of many retailers.

Various Notes.

H. M. Sanborn, of Berkeley, leased a large lot adjoining his Telegraph avenue store for the Christmas holiday trade.

The Young American Florists, now situated on Mission street, near Twenty-sixth, report a heavy demand for all classes of holiday goods. They have one of the largest stores in the Mission.

D. H. Maggart, formerly connected with the Capital Nurseries, of Salem, Ore., has gone into business at Elmhurst, Cal.

A. Rolleri has opened a store on Seventh street, near the corner of Clay, in Oakland.

James Skinner, the Christmas tree man, has handled over 10,000 trees up to the present writing this season and expects several car loads from Oregon within the next few days.

Charles Stappenbach reports a record-breaking holiday trade along all lines. His store is one of the centers of attraction on Polk street.

Notice of the death of Dennis McKenney, of Irvington, will be found in the obituary column this week. G.

"PLEASE SEND THE REVIEW."

The REVIEW finds much encouragement in the receipt of letters like the following from a florist at South Framingham, Mass.:

"Please send the REVIEW to ———, South Framingham, Mass., for which I enclose his dollar. The REVIEW is all right, as is shown by my advising Mr. ——— to take it in preference to three others."

But what interests the publisher is that the REVIEW is all right enough for a subscriber to take it upon himself to take a friend's money and mail it in, simply because he thinks the friend will profit by having the REVIEW; it must be all right, sure enough.

The REVIEW frequently receives such courtesies at the hands of its readers, for which it not only returns thanks but promises to provide an increasingly interesting paper.

I TAKE the REVIEW for the retail matter that is in it, including the advertisements, and get lots of help from them. —C. B. SERVICE, Sharon, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The dark weather of the last week had its effect on the supply of all cut flowers, but more so on roses and carnations, which by the end of last week were bringing excellent prices, almost equal to those of last year. Our old standby, Bridesmaid, in the better grades is scarce, but, with Killarney and Chatenay to help out, the shortage is not badly felt. The supply of Beauties has shortened considerably and they have doubled in price, with a firm belief that they will bring $10 to $12 per dozen for selected stock before Christmas is over. Some of the large growers who have cut heavily in the last few weeks report a scarcity in good medium and long Beauties.

Red roses are in great demand. One grower alone, in one day's shipment, sent over 1,000, which found ready sale.

Carnations are still scarce. The supply fell off decidedly in the last week, due mostly to the growers holding up their stock, and to the cloudy weather.

Cattleyas and cypripediums are in good demand, the shipments to out-of-town customers heavy. Valley is selling well, while good mignonette and Easter lilies find ready purchasers.

Romans and Paper Whites are a glut and sell at any price. Violets, double and single, are holding their own and with good weather will be fine for the holidays.

The stores plunged in plants for Christmas, such as poinsettias, Scotch heather, etc., which when made up in baskets find ready sale.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

The most beautiful as well as the most useful Fern ever offered. It is suitable both for specimen pot plants and for using as a cut frond. Well grown stock ready now. 2¼-inch, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 4-inch, $10.00 per doz.; $75.00 per 100. Specimens in pans, $2.00, $3.00 and $5.00 each.

Gardenias.

Alexander B. Scott was standing in the middle of a beautiful gardenia house that sunny afternoon. "This house is just a little better than I had them this time last year," Mr. Scott said, "while this other house next door is just as good as I had them then." Mr. Scott's gardenias last year were the best in the country; the apparent difference between the houses lay in a slight difference in the profusion of buds and in the greater length of stem. The house conditions were most favorable, a high temperature with air, while the soil had evidently been as an old grower loved to describe it, "joos soaked," the foliage and buds being perfect throughout.

Among the Retailers.

All the leading flower shops in the city have made their windows and stores most attractive for the holiday season. As is usually the case, red and green predominate and are conspicuous in the displays. Although a week or so ago it seemed as though, owing to the financial troubles of the last few months, the Christmas demand would not be as great as in previous years, this has not proven so, as the demand for cut flowers is quite as large as it was a year ago, while the demand for growing plants is even greater.

H. H. Battles has a number of pretty shaded camellias growing in pots in his window, and these attract the eyes of many passers-by. He also has great quantities of especially fine single violets and large mignonette, and orchids of fine quality. Mr. Battles states that Easter lilies and azaleas are in great demand.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have, in addition to the fine display in their store and window, a large display in one of the main halls of the Bellevue-Stratford, and have decorated the dining-rooms and palm-room with pretty hanging baskets, filled with growing poinsettias. With the possible exception of mistletoe and holly, nothing seems more appropriate for Christmas decoration. Their window is especially attractive, being one mass of Lorraine begonias, some growing, some tastefully arranged in baskets, the light pink of the flowers giving a particularly delicate effect.

Joseph Kift says that this is quite as good a Christmas as he has known, but he is unfortunate in having two of his trusted employees away. He has a fine display of poinsettias, and has a novelty in the shape of a number of pots filled with growing mushrooms, large and well formed.

Many and various sized Kriss Kringles catch the eye among the decorations at the store of Pennock Bros. Their window is full of them, some with packs on their backs, others carrying their packs in their hands in the form of baskets, and in some cases the little figures are carrying watering pots. They were brought from Antwerp, Germany, to look out from Pennock Bros.' window, and make a very pretty display, as the packs, basket and watering pots are filled with either growing or cut flowers appropriate to the season. The idea is quite a novel one, as the figure can be used as well for a vase as for a flower pot.

Charles Fox has the Sign of the Rose in even more festive garb than usual at this season of the year. In fact, this attractive shop has never looked better.

The general air of prosperity and the busy signs in and around the various shops surely bespeak a good winter, and even though the season did start late, Lent does not start until March 4; so the season should average well when compared with its predecessors.

Various Notes.

Mark Mills, who was reported ill, was back for the Christmas rush.

M. Rice & Co. report that their business for the year 1907 was far ahead of any year in their history. Their continued growth is the result of carefully looking after every detail of their business.

The retail stores have doubled their forces for the holidays.

Charles Grakelow, the enterprising uptown florist, is sending out an attractive calendar.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., is serving his apprenticeship in the seed house of Henry A. Dreer. Mr. Montgomery, who is a nephew of Alexander Montgomery, of Waban Conservatories, is working in the city warehouse and boarding at the Riverton Nurseries.

A visitor to the Florists' Club said that he at once recognized Godfrey Aschmann from his published photographs. There was, however, something wrong; it finally came to him that he had no araucarias in his hand.

H. F. Michell Co. reports the sale of green goods as extra heavy.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving some good Beacon, the new red carnation.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. had a new lot of stock, such as birch bark baskets, sea moss and cycas leaves, which arrived on the steamer Andalusia. It was all disposed of before reaching their store.

Berger Bros. are doing a large business in holly and holly wreaths.

The store of the Pennock-Meehan Co. might have been mistaken for a beehive this week.

The Leo Niessen Co. has been pushing steadily forward since becoming settled in its new building and the result of the increased facilities was more apparent than ever during the Christmas rush.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society elected the following officers at the annual meeting, held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall, December 17: President, James W. Paul, Jr.; vice-presidents, James M. Rhodes, Henry F. Michell, Dr. J. Cheston Morris and Rudolph Ellis; treasurer, S. W. Keith; secretary, David Rust. March 24 was fixed upon as the date for the spring exhibition.

DOOM OF THE BIG TOMATO.

The big tomato has had its day, and its fate has been settled by that voice which decides what shall and shall not be in most matters of public interest, i. e., public opinion. When the man in the street first cultivated his palate up to a point of liking tomatoes, growers set out to provide him with big fruits, which went all right for a time. The new varieties of a few years ago were characterized by the size of their fruit, and there is no telling what pitch we should have got to by now if things had gone on, but the consumer put the veto on big tomatoes, and they have gone under. Perhaps he admired the monsters when seen on the show board, but when he went to the shop for a pound of tomatoes he didn't want a single fruit, but about four, and market growers soon began to realize this.

Exhibitors have followed in the same line, and today one rarely sees monstrous fruits staged, and if they are they are generally passed over for medium-sized specimens, for judges, as a rule, have got to treat tomatoes on the show board from a utility point of view.

Again, the cook has had something to do with the triumph of the medium-sized tomato. She plainly indicated to the gardener that he could keep his big fruits to show, or do what he liked with them, but she wouldn't have them, and now the four or five to the pound variety rules supreme in the private garden, as it does in the market establishment. Raisers, too, have come into line, and the tomatoes of recent introduction which are now popular are varieties which bear large clusters of medium-sized fruits, that are bright in color, and are not given to cracking. Doubtless we shall have more new varieties as time goes on, but unless they favor the above description, and are heavy croppers, they will stand a poor chance, for in the tomato world today quantity with quality is demanded, rather than individual size. —Gardeners' Magazine.

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of The Florists' Manual."—J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

TELLS you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

Treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

WHITE GLOBE onion seed is already marked "sold out" in the incoming offers.

THE favorite stocks of market gardeners in the carrot line are exceedingly scarce.

SOME heretofore hidden lots of seeds of the flat varieties of onions are being discovered.

THE Henderson catalogue is out and one of the handsomest books the house has sent out.

THE prices of seeds are going to vary a good deal, judging from the retail catalogues so far received.

ONION sets are reported to be shrinking heavily, a dry rot in the whites, and a wet rot in the reds and yellows being accountable for it.

POSTED dealers are of the opinion that $6 per bushel for Evergreen and $7 for Country Gentleman is about all that any purchaser will stand at present.

LARGE quantities of German grass and clover seeds are still arriving in this country, the last boat from Hamburg having landed 1,700 bags of clover seeds and 519 packages of grass seeds.

VALLEY pips promise to be equal to all requirements of the trade in 1908, large lots still arriving. The fast new steamer, President Grant, from Hamburg, reaching New York December 20, brought 644 cases of pips, as follows: H. F. Darrow, 60; Wm. Hagemann & Co., 362; S. Stern, 222.

be so limited that their orders will not tax the supply.

IT is reported that seed of Phoenix Roebelenii is scarce.

THE W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has five catalogues "on the fire" at present.

THE seed advertising in the general magazines for January is lighter than usual.

HENRY F. MICHELL, Philadelphia, was elected, December 17, one of the vice-presidents of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

IS it not a little bit curious, when you stop to think about it, that the seed catalogues go out almost on the day that winter begins?

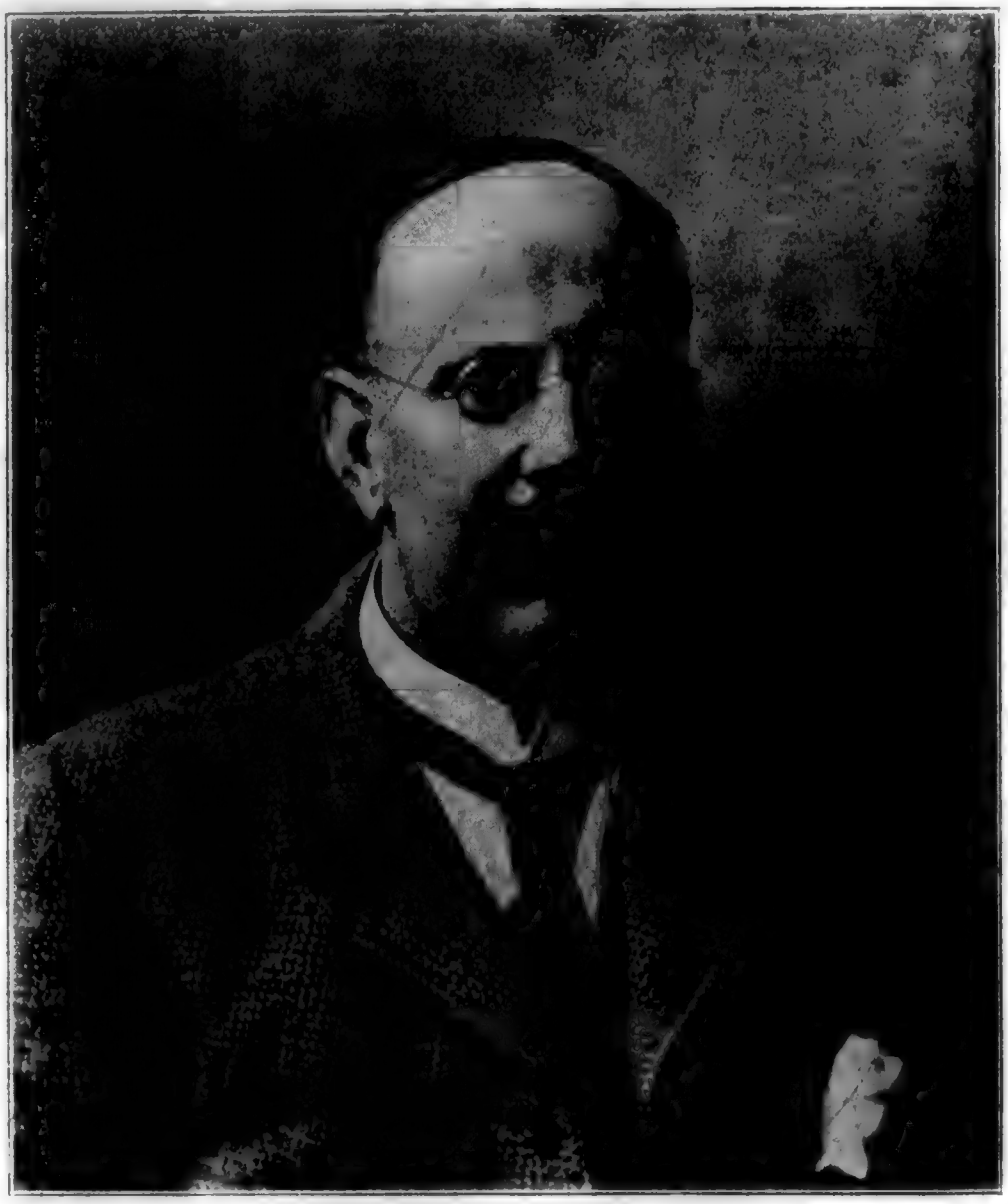
SOME of the newer standard varieties of beans that have heretofore sold at high prices will be surprisingly low in the coming lists, it is said.

THE preliminary price lists of representative wholesale seed dealers are out and there are no startling features, either as to prices or otherwise.

THE southern editions of the seed catalogues are now in full flight, to apprise the planters down in Dixie that the joyous holiday season is at hand once more.

IT seems pretty well established that where a seedsman employs the Seed Trade Association's non-warranty he is protected from liability for unsatisfactory crops.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued its final estimate of the 1907 crops, showing the farm value of the corn crop to have been $1,340,446,000.



SEEDSMEN will be able to place their hands quickly upon much valuable information by adding the Garden and Farm Almanac for 1908 to their trade libraries, and any planter will get 25 cents' worth from the almanac, so that it may well be added to the list of publications carried in many catalogues.

REFERRING to the increased cost of catalogues this year, particularly in the cost of paper and press work, one wholesale and retail seedsman says: "We expect the trade and the public to stand for higher prices for seeds this year, so why should we kick on the cost of paper? All we want to know is that others are being charged the same advance."

"INTEGRITY of stocks" is a card that yet seems to cut a figure in assisting seedsmen to get a double price for the seeds they offer, at any rate some houses seem to thrive mightily by printing prices in their catalogue that if placed in others would cause a complete frost. If the purchaser will pay double for an article because it is offered by a specialist, it would seem then that it pays to be in the specialist class, if you can.

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY

The annual meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society of England was held in London, December 6. Leonard G. Sutton, F. R. H. S., of the firm of Sutton & Sons, at Reading, presided. The annual report showed a record of a splendid year of work and increasing success. At the annual show there were more exhibitors, more exhibits and more visitors than in 1906. The committee reports that one of the most pleasing and interesting features of the year was the visit of W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, with his wife and family. Mr. Burpee visited most of the leading sweet pea growers in the United Kingdom. He was keenly interested in the splendid London show, which surprised him; and he was impressed by the extent and importance of the society's trials. As evidence of the pleasure he experienced among us, he has presented the society with a fine fifteen guinea challenge cup.

The society's trials are recognized by all as one of the most important and most valuable services rendered by any society to floriculture, and traders in the United States, in New Zealand and on the continent of Europe have frequently testified to their value. Three hundred and fifty rows were on trial last summer, and, in addition to giving awards to meritorious varieties, the floral committee did excellent work by drawing up a list of "too-much-alike" varieties, by recommending certain varieties as the best in their respective color classes, and by preparing a list of those old and inferior varieties which it is unnecessary to test further in the trials.

Next year's show will be held in London, July 24, and in connection with the Royal Horticultural Society of Ireland a show will be held in Dublin, August 5.

Wm. Cuthbertson, J. P., of the firm of Dobbie & Co., Rothesay, Scotland, was unanimously elected, on the motion of S. B. Dicks, of Cooper, Taber & Co., London, to the office of president. He has long been closely identified with sweet peas and everything pertaining to them. In conjunction with the late Richard Dean, he promoted the exhibition of the sweet pea at the bicentenary celebration in 1900. His firm has introduced a number of meritorious varieties and this year received the society's award of merit for the Marquis, Prince Olaf and Princess Victoria. It may also be mentioned that his daughter, Miss Jessie Cuthbertson, is preparing a complete list of all known sweet peas for the 1908 sweet pea annual. C. H. Curtis, Adelaide Road, Brentford, Middlesex, England, was unanimously reëlected honorary secretary. Bee.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending Dec. 14 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	1	$ 15	Fennel	10	$ 151
Anise	40	275	Grass	185	998
Canary	3	9	Hemp	600	2,781
Caraway	100	776	Mustard	416	3,319
Celery	80	449	Poppy	326	1,849
Coriander	235	931	Rape	243	2,202
Cummin	75	830	Other	..	4,239

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $27,650.

NEW SWEET PEAS.

That there will be synonyms among the large number of new sweet peas offered this season is a foregone conclusion, says a specialist writing to the Horticultural Advertiser. Clara Curtis and Cream Spencer are pretty sure to be alike. I have grown the latter, and have seen the former growing, but could not compare blooms. Constance Oliver, Nell Gwynne, Evelyn Hemus, Vera Jeffery and Our Queen will run the creamy pink shade closely, although the last named is probably the richest of the lot.

Then, I guess, we shall have a bother with the two varieties named Purity. Bolton's Purity is closely akin to Etta Dyke and White Spencer. Lumley's Purity is said to be an advance on Dorothy Eckford. Then we have Lorna Doone, Bobby K, and Princess Victoria running the blush shade. Beauty comes under this tint also, but it is unknown to me. It shows a buff pink tint.

The amazing rush of white sorts in recent years has been noticeable to every one. Four were sent out last year. This year we have the three Spencers—Purity, White Spencer and Etta Dyke,—one plain sort in Finetta Bathurst, one hooded in Purity, and Acme faintly tinted. In deep pinks we have an influx again—M. A. Linzee, Audrey Crier, and Horace Skipper, all Spencers.

Silver Wings will prove a pretty sort for daylight, but under artificial light it will look white, or nearly so. Maggie Stark reminds me of Coles' Earl Spencer, a formidable rival to St. George. The American Florence Morse (Spencer) may prove to be Elsie Herbert.

POSTAL PROGRESS.

The committee on postal affairs of the American Seed Trade Association has not pushed very hard this season; still, we have been corresponding with the various parties trying to secure the adoption of favorable legislation both in regard to the mailing of catalogues at a bulk weight and on parcels post, both foreign and domestic. From the discussion at the last Seed Trade convention, I did not think that the association was ready to undertake a vigorous campaign this year on these subjects, as of course it will require the expenditure of some money and considerable time to push them forward to a successful issue. Appended you will find copy of H. R. 6233, which at our request was introduced by Hon. J. A. T. Hull, of Iowa. You will notice that we have changed the wording quite a little from previous bills, so that it now applies to seeds and other third-class matter, as well as to catalogues. While I know that by far the larger portion of such bills die in the committee-room, without even being discussed on the floor of the House, still this matter is of such interest and would be of such great benefit to the postoffice department, as well as to all publishers and dealers who do a large amount of business through the mails, that I think it should be looked upon favorably by the committee on postal affairs in the House and secure their approval. We are doing what we can by correspondence to push the work forward.

Charles N. Page, Chairman.

The following is the text of the bill referred to above:

A bill providing for the manner of payment of postage on books, catalogues, and other printed matter.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the postmaster-general is hereby authorized and instructed to accept third-class matter, consisting of books, pamphlets, catalogues, and other third-class matter, at the postoffice of the town of publication, upon payment of postage on the bulk weight, without affixing stamps, at the present rate of postage for third-class matter, that is, 1 cent for each two ounces or 8 cents per pound: Provided, That no single pamphlet or package shall weigh less than two ounces and that the total quantity presented for mailing at any one time shall not be less than fifty pounds: And provided further, That the wrapper or envelope of each package shall bear the notice, "Postage paid in money at regular third-class rates," with the sender's permit number.

NOVELTIES FOR 1908

Godetia Dwarf Compact

CRIMSON GLOW

(Our Own Raising.)

This splendid new Godetia will be eagerly sought after when once known. It forms a compact little bush about 9 inches in height, completely smothered with flowers of the most dazzling, intense crimson. A bed of this variety produces a vivid effect, the intensity of which it is impossible to describe. To be fully appreciated it must be seen growing.

The color of Crimson Glow is many shades deeper, more vivid and intense, and quite as compact in habit as Sunset, which we introduced three years ago.

$15.00 per 100 pkts. $2.00 per doz.
(25 cents retail.) (See Colored Plate.)

Eschscholtzia Erecta Compacta

DAINTY QUEEN

We have the greatest pleasure in being able to introduce this exquisite new color in Eschscholtzias. It is so delicate and striking that we are certain it will excite universal admiration, and become one of the greatest favorites of this charming race of our new improved compact Californian Poppies. It is almost impossible to adequately describe its soft and delicate shade of color.

The color is a tender blush or pale coral pink, slightly deeper toward the edges, with a groundwork of delicate cream, and like Intus Rosea, which we introduced in 1905, is quite the same color inside the flower as outside, so that the effect in color is the same when the flower is open as when closed, which is quite unusual in all other Eschscholtzias.

$15.00 per 100 pkts. $2.00 per doz.
(25 cents retail.) (See Colored Plate.)

PEA, THE PILOT (Re-selected)

We have no hesitation in saying that of all the Peas introduced for many years past, there has not been one to equal the PILOT in merit or usefulness. Unfortunately when this Pea was first introduced it was not perfectly fixed. However, even in its unfixed state it was considered the best early hardy Pea, but it showed too much variation. Ever since it was first brought out we have been carefully selecting it, and have at length succeeded in obtaining what we consider a really first-class stock, which we have now pleasure in offering.

We are quite sure that eventually this now re-selected variety will take the place of Bountiful and Ameer, as it is practically as early as Eclipse and as hardy, while it possesses a pod of the Gradus type.

We have but a limited quantity of this fine stock to dispose of. $18.00 per 100 lbs.

OUR RECENT NOVELTIES

selected and introduced by us during the last one or two years are certainly among the most fixed and distinct of any, and comprise, together with many others, the following EXTRA GOOD ONES:

Beet Early Model Red Globe, very early, perfect globe shape, very small top, and rich deep color.

Beet drooping crimson willow-leaved for ornamental bedding purposes only; about size and habit of Dactylis glomerata variegata grass, with which it contrasts well.

Alyssum maritimum compactum Little Dorrit forms a perfect little bush, with miniature white rocket flowers. A gem for bedding.

Chrysanthemum coronarium Tom Thumb Golden Gem; height 15 inches, very double, very free, very compact.

Chrysanthemum inodorum Snowball; very large, very double, very pure white flowers.

Eschscholtzia erecta compacta intus rosea; compact habit, intense rose or rosy carmine inside and outside of petals; we introduced this one year before Burbank's Crimson was put on the market.

Nasturtium (Tropaeolum) Queen of Tom Thumb. The elegant and distinct new race of variegated leaved sorts which we were the originators of and introduced in 1903. We have now a few more colors and a very fine mixture; also a tall section in grand mixtures, which we have named Tall Queen Hybrids.

Sweet Peas. In these we have introduced the last year or two some of the very finest large flowered varieties, and certainly the most fixed, viz.: Gladys Unwin, Phyllis Unwin, Evelyn Byatt; Nora Unwin, today the finest and purest white. Mrs. Alfred Watkins; Frank Dolby, the most fixed large flowered blue. E. J. Castle and A. J. Cook, a large flowered Mrs. Walter Wright.

CALIFORNIA ONION SEED.

"Some months ago we had occasion to make observations on the rather exaggerated claims made for California grown seeds," says W. Van Fleet, in the Rural New Yorker. "That the peculiar climate favors abundant seed production in many plants, and is also especially favorable for seed harvesting, is a commercial certainty. California-grown seeds in certain varieties now dominate the market, and are used with a fair degree of satisfaction, but evidence of occasional deterioration is not lacking. Sweet pea and onion seeds from California come in for more than usual criticism. They are doubtless grown with care and every effort made to keep them true to type, but they fail to measure up to the reasonable expectations of the buyers. The idea is that excessive seed production may lessen vitality of individual seeds, and the long and featureless growing season may diminish the inherited tendency of plants, native to regions where summer and winter are sharply defined, to perfect the portions desired by the grower, such as the bulb in the onion and the bloom in the sweet peas. As seed production is mainly a matter of economics, seeds being naturally grown where they can be most abundantly and cheaply produced and the deterioration not particularly evident in a single generation, it has been suggested that the stock plants be grown where the necessary seasonal conditions obtain and the product then used in California to grow the seed crop. The need for this 'revitalization' has been denied by Pacific coast growers and horticultural journals, but that it is practiced by observing seed producers is made plain by this clipping from a Colorado farm paper:

The California seed growers who contracted for 110 acres of seed stock in the Greeley district are disappointed in the crop, for they are not securing more than half a yield. These onions were contracted to be grown at 70 cents per 100, and it was thought that 30,000 sacks would result, but the attacks of lice cut the crop short. As fast as the onions are harvested they are shipped to the coast, where they will be replanted for the production of seed. The best yield yet reported was five acres from which an average of 300 sacks an acre were taken.

"Better results would doubtless be had by coming to the Atlantic coast, where our commercial onion varieties have been largely developed, and where the most careful efforts to perfect the types are still made, but the climate of northern Colorado furnishes seasons far more clearly cut than California. Sweet pea stock seeds for California planting are to some extent grown in New York and New England. The practice is quite certain to extend, as western seed-growing problems are further elaborated. Lima beans, nasturtiums, petunias and a host of tropical and semi-tropical varieties, however, seem entirely at home in that land of abundant sunshine, and may be expected to improve steadily under the fostering care of their growers."

Dr. Van Fleet seems wholly to have lost sight of the fact that the purpose of the Californian growers in contracting for the crop at Greeley, Colo., was the prime necessity for replenishing their stocks of bulbs, the quantity available for planting for seeds in the Santa Clara valley having fallen below their needs. We doubt if the Californian growers will admit any thought of necessity for "revitalization" in their stocks by using Colorado bulbs.

BOLGIANO'S DISCLAIMER STICKS.

In the matter of the non-warranty suit won December 12 by J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, the New York Commercial says: "The Bolgianos advanced two contentions. One was that the seed had not been planted in land favorable to its development. The other was that in any circumstances they were not responsible for the failure of seed. This latter ground was taken in view of a disclaimer of responsibility which they averred was distinctly printed on seed packages, bill heads and in their catalogues.

"Some years ago, it is stated, the seedsmen of the United States, anticipating trouble through the failure of seed sold by one or another of them, employed the best legal talent available to provide a method of avoiding damages in just such cases. The advice of the lawyers was that a disclaimer of responsibility be given as wide publicity as possible by the seedsmen. This has been done, accordingly, since that time and the Bolgianos offered their catalogues, etc., in evidence to show that they had adhered to this course. They also presented catalogues of more than 100 seed firms of this country and Europe showing that with only one exception the disclaimer was availed of by all of them."

The suit was over the failure of a pound of pepper seed, costing $2.45, to produce satisfactory results. The plaintiffs, Winfield & Leggett, asked damages in the sum of $3,600. The case occupied the attention of the court for two weeks, involved the hearing of sixty witnesses and the reading of twenty-five depositions. It was stated by an attorney that the suit cost in the neighborhood of $5,000.

FOR HOTBEDS.

I have a good call for tomato and other vegetable plants in the spring. At what date should I sow seeds to grow the plants in hotbeds and have them ready at planting time in Ohio? Any suggestions will be welcome.

M. W. H.

Members of the brassica family, such as cabbage and cauliflower, should be sown about the first part of March to give nice plants by setting out time, but the more tender subject, such as tomatoes, peppers, egg plants, etc., need not be sown until about two weeks later, as they cannot be set in the open ground until the weather is warm and settled, which is usually about the middle of May, or later. MILDEW ON LETTUCE.

Is there a remedy or preventive for mildew on lettuce? Although I keep my lettuce on the dry side, yet I lose a large per cent of small plants in flats when there are several cloudy, damp days together. D. F. R.

There must be something wrong with the atmospheric conditions of your house. Just what it is it would be hard for me to say without seeing it, but lettuce at that stage of growth is not subject to the attacks of mildew in a house where it has the proper temperature and sufficient fresh air. A too high temperature would cause a soft growth and leave it an easy prey to this and kindred diseases during dull, cloudy weather, but the more probable cause is lack of proper airing. A close atmosphere is congenial, both for the breeding and spreading of the spores of fungi. Try to maintain a night temperature not exceeding 45 degrees, with 60 degrees by day in bright weather, and give air to sweeten the atmosphere on all possible occasions. Keep the plants fully exposed to the light to keep the foliage firm and avoid crowding and I do not think that you will have much more trouble from mildew. F. R.

WORMS IN MUSHROOM BEDS.

Can you give me any information concerning the small worm that attacks the mushroom and spawn? It resembles the worm found in decayed blood or bone meal. R. E. P.

When this small worm is troublesome, the larva is present either in the soil or compost forming the bed, but as a rule it seldom appears to any injurious extent during the winter months, or as long as the temperature can be kept comparatively cool; but as the season advances the insects hatch out and begin their destructive work. Our experience is that as long as the temperature of the mushroom house can be kept as low as 55 degrees the worm gives little trouble, but just as soon as we fail to keep the temperature down to this figure it begins to get down to business and the crop might as well be given up for the season, as, once it has got a footing, we have never been able to find anything that will exterminate it without injury to the mushroom crop.

The mushroom is delicate and easily injured and will not stand experimenting with, as other plants would. Anything that could be applied strong enough to kill the worm would almost certainly prove destructive to the crop. W. S.

RICHMOND, VA.—The store of Ratcliffe & Tanner is so handsomely and elaborately decorated for the holidays that it cannot fail to attract favorable attention.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Herbert L. Sawyer, formerly with Mills, and James H. Payne have opened a flower store at 27 West Bay street and will do business as Sawyer & Payne.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Alfred W. Lemke, formerly of the firm of Colberg & Lemke, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. The creditors will meet January 3, at 11 a. m., at 523 Manhattan building.

A BED OF MUSHROOMS

Raised from our Spawn, will bear longer and yield better than from any other variety of Spawn. This is proven by facts. Full particulars and information how to succeed in mushroom raising free. We warrant you if using our method of growing mushrooms that all will go well.

FLORISTS have a splendid opportunity of raising Mushrooms by utilizing the waste space under the benches, and then utilizing the waste material of expended mushroom beds in growing flowers. Now is the time to make your beds. Lambert's Pure Culture MUSHROOM SPAWN, the best Mushroom Spawn in the market, is sold by all leading seedsmen. A fresh sample brick, enough for a small trial bed, together with large illustrated book on "Mushroom Culture," will be mailed postpaid upon receipt of 40c in postage stamps. PACIFIC COAST.

A DELAY in the mails throws the San Francisco news-letter out of its usual position this week. It will be found on page 25.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—J. P. Parker has purchased an interest in the Leedham Bulb Co. and has been elected vice-president of the company.

SEATTLE.

State of Trade.

The outlook for the Christmas trade, in spite of the depression in money circles, is bright. Seattle seems to have a little the best of the situation, with so much Alaska gold coming in. People are certainly crowding in here, and statistics taken from the records of arrivals and departures at the Union depot show that the city is growing at the rate of 4,000 to 6,000 people a month.

The Florists' Association.

The Seattle Florists' Association, which has been practically dormant for about twelve months, was shaken out and restarted at a meeting held at the store of Malmo & Co. on the first Tuesday in November. The officers elected for the ensuing year, and who have pledged themselves to put new life into the society and try to overcome the professional jealousies existing, are: President, W. H. Thompson, superintendent of the Seattle public parks; vice-president, C. Malmo; treasurer, J. J. Bonnell; secretary, Frank Bathurst, corner of Twenty-second avenue and Olive street.

The meetings are to be held on the first Tuesday in the month, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, First avenue and Cherry street.

It has been decided to change the name of the club to the Seattle Florists' Society, for a most peculiar reason. One of our leading members said that on several occasions people had come into his place of business and made the remark that the florists had got together and formed an "association," and that the prices of flowers, etc., would be advanced the same way as in other trusts and associations. It took time to explain away this false impression; so a motion was put in writing at the November meeting and was passed at the December one, changing the name to the Seattle Florists' Society.

It was decided to hold a chrysanthemum show next fall, and a committee was appointed to wait on the growers.

Various Notes.

The Washington Floral Co. will have an excellent lot of stuff for Christmas. A house with 1,500 poinsettias is just right. This firm also has a nice lot of made up pans of flowering and foliage plants.

The amount of glass erected this last summer is quite large, as the following list will show: H. Harrington Co., seven houses, 20x150 feet; Woodland Floral Co., a block of houses 100x300 feet; Jackson & Co., Brighton Beach, five houses, 20x200; the Seattle Floral Co., two houses, with an elegant store and showroom; G. Bjorkman, Fremont, one house; G. Bell, Brighton Beach, two houses. Several others have added glass this season, whom I have not had the time to visit.

Several new stores are open now. Mr. Walz, late manager for the H. Harrington Co., has opened an attractive store in the Washington annex. Sam Graff, late of Chicago, has a store in the public market, Pike Place. The Al-Ki Floral Co. has a store on Cherry street, between First and Second avenues. Miss Winehill has a small store in the entrance to the Downs block, on Second avenue, and the Bell Floral Co. a small store at the entrance to the Savoy hotel, on Second avenue. The Burdette Co. has opened an uptown store at First avenue and Denny way, with a large assortment of nursery stock in the rear.

Since the consolidation of the Woodland Park Floral Co. and the Pacific Seed & Floral Co. their business has increased very much. The postal card idea is a good one, but the picture does not do justice to the elegant fixtures in the store. A. BALMER.

CHRISTMAS PEPPERS.

At what date should I sow seeds of Christmas peppers to have the plants ready for sale at Christmas, 1908?
M. H. W.

Seed sown at the end of March will be sufficiently early to produce good peppers for Christmas sales. Sow in a good heat; 60 degrees at night will suffice. Prick out into flats when large enough to handle and plant outdoors when frost danger is gone, lifting and potting about the end of August. As the planted-out stock grows to quite a large size, it may be better to carry along in pots all summer, shifting successively from 2-inch to 4-inch and 6-inch pots, in which latter size fine bushy specimens can be grown by attention to watering and judicious feeding. Jerusalem cherries (Solanum capsicastrum) can be similarly treated, plants from outdoors and lifted being in this case much superior to pot-grown ones. I think you will find this a much better selling Christmas plant than the peppers.

C. W.

DON'T LOSE IT.

You may have a little surplus stock in some line — not much, perhaps, but enough to cut quite a hole in the profit made on the whole lot if this little surplus is lost. But it isn't necessary to lose it. Nearly always there is someone, somewhere, who needs just that little batch of plants. You can reach that someone, everywhere, through a classified advertisement in the REVIEW, at a cost of 10 cents a line. Everyone reads the REVIEW'S classified ads. Don't let the little surplus go to waste.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres. C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE Grandview Nursery & Orchard Co., Des Moines, Ia., has completed a new office building and warehouse at East Ninth and Hull streets.

CRIMSON RAMBLER roses are still called for in large numbers, but it has been a noticeable fact that larger numbers of pink climbing roses have been planted.

WILLIAM H. MOST, of the government forest service, has collected 600 pounds of seed of the Douglas fir near Thunder City, Idaho, which will be planted in the forest reserves in Colorado and Utah.

PRIVET, no matter how old or how large, will stand cutting back to any extent, but in the event of cutting back young or old privet being necessary, it will be better to delay the work until spring.

REAL estate agents at Nelson, B. C., are endeavoring to interest the English people in Kootenay, which is being advertised as "British Columbia's greatest fruit district" in English horticultural publications.

ARBOR VITAES are perhaps the most serviceable of what may be termed the minor evergreens. Among them are varieties useful alike for hedges, groups and isolated specimens, and invariably satisfactory in varying situations.

THE Garden and Farm Almanac for 1908, just issued by Doubleday, Page & Co., New York, contains the American Pomological Society's "Catalogue of Fruits" as a list of varieties adapted to each section of the United States.

THERE is a growing demand for Rhododendron maximum. It is gaining in favor because it is almost hardy everywhere, besides being unquestionably one of the most decorative shrubs, easily obtained and needing little after care.

ALL rhododendrons, even R. maximum, are benefited by some covering over the roots in winter in many sections of the country, while those that are not hardy should have the protection of evergreen branches laid over them in addition.

AT Beeville, Tex., A. V. Schwab and E. A. Rolleck have established a nursery and will be ready for business in the spring. F. G. Hutchison, a Californian, also contemplates locating in that vicinity and starting a nursery.

JOHN C. OLMSTED is planning the improvement of the park system of Portland, Ore., and has made a report to the city council in which he recommends, among other things, the purchase of land along the hill west of the city for the extension of the system. The property is valued at nearly a million dollars.

PROPAGATING.

Cuttings of yews, arbor-vitæs and retinosporas root readily in sand in a propagating house where bottom heat is available in winter. Cuttings of the last season's growth, taken with a heel, will root freely. After the cuttings are put in the sand they should be well watered and the sand kept fairly moist right along. Light shade also is necessary.

If the cuttings have been put in the bench, when rooted they will require to be put in boxes filled with sandy soil and kept for at least two weeks in a growing temperature. Then they may be removed to a cool house and kept there until early spring, when they should be placed in a coldframe to harden and finally be disposed of for the summer by placing in a somewhat shady, sheltered place. For the first winter it will be well to keep the young plants under cover and then in the spring following plant them in beds in the open ground.

If instead of putting the cuttings in the sand on a bench, they are put in boxes and the boxes placed over heat, the necessity for transplanting the cuttings when rooted will have been obviated, while equally satisfactory results in rooting the cuttings will usually follow.

M.

PRUNING.

When, in pruning trees, it is necessary to remove branches wholly it is much the better way to saw the branch close up to the trunk of the tree than to leave a portion of the branch. Some have still the idea that benefit results from leaving a part of the branch (about one foot), but from actual experience it has become well known that such a practice invariably injures the trunk of the tree if the portion referred to is allowed to remain and decays. The decay often extends inward to the trunk. On the other hand, when the branch is cut off close up to the trunk, the wound soon heals, leaving no trace of its infliction upon the tree. And, besides, the latter method produces neater work.

When pruning is necessary it should be done to most trees in late fall or winter. Pruning in spring has the effect of weakening the vitality of the subjects operated upon, a condition to be especially avoided when the desire is that strong and vigorous growth should result from the operation. No trees should be pruned when the buds are bursting in spring; rather than do that, when strong resulting growth is the object, it will be better to defer the work until another autumn.

M.

THE LAXTONBERRY.

The Loganberry has been successfully used abroad in breeding berry fruits. The most promising appears to be the Laxtonberry, raised by Laxton Bros., Bedford, England, from a cross of Loganberry with Superlative, long considered the best European raspberry. The new fruit is raspberry-like in appearance and flavor, being darker red than the Loganberry, and pulls off in the manner of raspberries, instead of retaining a blackberry like core as does the Loganberry, but grows like the latter in long trailing canes. The growers think it will supersede the Loganberry, which has become a recognized market fruit in eastern Europe, South Africa and Australia, though in common with other hybrids of the western dewberry it is a flat failure on this continent, except along the Pacific coast, where it originated, says the Rural New Yorker. Plants will grow and bear for several years in eastern fruit-growing localities, but are never productive and satisfactory. Many crosses of the Loganberry with blackberries and raspberries have been made in this country, but none appears to be desirable. Superlative is a large, long, red raspberry of the European type, productive where it thrives and of excellent quality. It is said to do well at Rochester, N. Y., but the foliage blights severely.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen was held at the Coates house, Kansas City, December 17 and 18. In the morning session of the first day routine business was discussed and committees were appointed. In the afternoon President Willis delivered his address on "The Past, Present and Future." In the course of his remarks he said that the most troublesome question the nurserymen had to face was in connection with railroads. Shipments which should be delivered in three days are often delayed a week, until trees are killed. "The discoveries of Luther Burbank have not affected us much," he said. "And in the hubbub over him many other faithful workers have been ignored."

One of E. M. Skinner's suggestions aroused a warm discussion. He proposed that the association resolve to pay common laborers only $1.25 per day. J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, and C. G. Ferguson, of St. Joseph, protested, and it was finally decided to allow the labor question to remain unsettled.

In the afternoon session, also, the following officers were elected to serve during the ensuing year: President, E. P. Bernardin, Parsons, Kan.; vice-president, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Iowa; secretary and treasurer, E. J. Holman, Leavenworth, Kan. Executive board: F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; R. J. Bagby, New Haven, Mo.; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, and A. J. Brown, Geneva, Neb.

The program for Wednesday, the second day of the meeting, included a long list of brief papers on topics running all the way from a discussion of the New York banking flurry to consideration of the best size of apple tree for orchard planting. Nearly everyone present had a chance to be heard.

NEW ORLEANS.

The main subject of the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was to be a discussion on the next chrysanthemum show. The attendance was so poor that no action could be taken. Is it on account of bad weather, or a little more rush of business at this time of the year, or is it that the florists show little interest in the matter which prevented them from coming? A decision will be had at the next monthly meeting. Paul Abele, R. Eichling and R. Lockerbie were appointed members of the finance committee for next year.

Robert Lockerbie says that J. Newsham will have finished moving to his new quarters at the Halfway by the first of the year.

R. Eichling, at U. J. Virgin's, reports business for decoration and funeral work brisk.

At the markets the sale of plants is slow.

From the appearance of the supply, Christmas trees are not going to be short, as last year.

Miss Carrie Eble, niece of Charles Eble, was married December 18. She has been Mr. Ebele's efficient artist assistant for the last four years.

On Sunday morning, December 22, a hail storm passed over New Orleans, doing considerable damage to the hotbeds and greenhouse glass. This sort of weather is happily quite unusual around here.

M. M. L.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The new greenhouse in Snyder park is 44x150 feet, with a shop at the west end 14x44. It is equipped with a hot water system, including a Kroeschell No. 5 boiler, 300 feet of 4-inch heating pipe and 2,400 feet of 2-inch pipe, and is thoroughly up-to-date in every respect. The total cost of the building, including boiler, carpenter-work and steam-fitting, was $3,000. The cost, however, was greatly lessened from the fact that the entire plumbing, excavation, and carpenter-work was done by Superintendent McIntire and the park force. Already 50,000 flower pots have been purchased and the work of propagating bedding stock for 1908 has begun.

New Carnation Brilliant Scarlet

DEFIANCE

There are Seven Reasons Why You Should Grow Defiance, and They Are:

1st. It is by far the best color seen in a scarlet carnation; it is the true velvety scarlet and not red; it will average three inches in diameter throughout the season.

2d. It is unexcelled for productiveness by any carnation in commerce today.

3d. It is a clean and upright grower, producing an abundance of high grade flowers without any special treatment.

4th. It is in perfect health and not subject to rust or any other disease which is very prevalent amongst other carnations today.

5th. It is of perfect form. Blooms are very symmetrical; center nicely built up and very full, but not so as to appear crowded; stems are very stiff and wiry, holding the flowers perfectly erect.

6th. It is a scarlet for the entire season, and can be had in crop in October, continuing through the entire season. It does not lose its color in bright sunlight—in fact it improves under a bright sun when other reds fade.

7th. It is the only scarlet today, and by growing DEFIANCE you will be satisfied it has no faults; it is full of vigor and will do the work when other scarlets fail.

Strong, well-rooted cuttings, every one guaranteed, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Usual discount on large orders. January delivery as yet.

RAMBLING JOTTINGS.

John Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., did a wise thing when he located at West Middlesex, and he did not consult a clairvoyant either.

Walter W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., is blossoming out as an orchidist now that he has so slick a range of houses, built by the King Construction Co. He says the truss system is all right and he has no fear for the prairie gales that formerly made him quake. He always grew fine Beauties and will not be satisfied if he does not beat the best. He expressed himself on carnations thus: "Victory is great. Craig is a disappointment. Aristocrat is not a taking color. Cardinal is the only scarlet just right for Christmas, and a heavy crop. White Perfection is the best white. Winsor is acting very much as if it were a sport of Lawson, being stocky and almost identical with the exception of color. Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress are practically the same in every locality, being the least affected of any kind by the nature of the soil or the method of culture." A house of Princess of Wales, just right for the holidays, with every bloom already sold, was a sight. Mr. Coles said that 1,000 of them would each cover a silver dollar. I doubted it, but we measured several that more than did so.

W.

Boise, Idaho.—The Boise Floral Co. opened a downtown store for Christmas.

The Review is the most satisfactory dollar's worth in the trade.—W. G. Newell, Galesburg, Ill.

LLOYD No Gold Brick

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Unrooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. 10 per cent discount for cash with order.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There has been a decided falling off in the receipt of all kinds of stock. Roses, especially, are away off crop and will be scarce for some time. Carnations are beginning to come in more plentifully, but are none too many for the demand. Romans and valley are coming in freely, as well as some fine stevia.

The quality of violets received of late has never been surpassed in this locality. The eastern double violets are also excellent.

Various Notes.

E. A. Wilhelmy, of Lorain avenue, had two adjoining stores rented for his extra Christmas rush.

The Excelsior Club, on Woodland avenue, was badly damaged by fire December 20, giving Warncke & Son's greenhouses a close call. The glass, being close to the clubhouse, was damaged somewhat.

A. M. Coe's carnations are coming on in fine shape. His single violets are also fine.

Knoble Bros. had a large business at the Hollenden, having twenty-five tables to decorate, in addition to the banquet hall.

Lars Anderson, of Rocky River, has been sending in some extra fine cut poinsettias.

The stevia being sent in by Robert Kegg, of West Park, is by far the best in the market.

The F. R. Williams Co. is cutting a fine lot of calla and longiflorum lilies.

Westman & Getz report business as very good.

The J. M. Gasser Co. had an attractive window display, consisting of green curtains draped with clusters of small electric lights in different colors. B.

Easton, Pa.—Fred Munz has leased the Herman Simon greenhouses and will sell his stock at 459 Northampton street.

Madison, Wis.—Louis Russos is now occupying the new store which he built for his own use, about a block from his former location. The new building is an elegant one, with the interior finished in mahogany.

Ames, Ia.—During a recent visit by Dr. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, arrangements were made with the agricultural college here to establish a branch of the government's work of plant distribution.

WE DESIRE TO CALL ATTENTION TO OUR LARGE AND FINE STOCK OF Nephrolepis Piersoni Elegantissima, Whitmani, Etc.

These are splendid selling plants for the holidays. We offer exceptionally good value in the 6-in. and 8-in sizes. Plants are in perfect condition and are exceedingly good value at the prices quoted. You will find no better selling plants than these beautiful ferns, and we offer them at lower prices than ever before. 2¼-in. pots, $6.00 per 100; 3½-in. pots, fine perfect little plants, $15.00 per 100; 6 in. pans, 50c and 75c each; 8-in., $1.00 and $1.50 each; 10-in., $2.00 each; larger specimens, $3.00 to $5.00 each—according to size.

NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII, fine plants, 6-in. pots, 50c each.

NEPHROLEPIS BOSTONIENSIS (The Boston Fern), 6-in. pots, 50c each; 8-in., $1.00 each.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans

There is nothing that sells better during the entire winter than small ferns for fern pans. We have a splendid stock of extra strong plants in 2½ in. pots, in the hardiest and most useful varieties for this purpose. Our stock will be found very strong and very nice. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Surplus Bulb Stock

We offer what remaining bulbs we have at bargain prices. The only cheap thing about them is the price. The bulbs are of first-class quality and in perfect condition. Bulbs planted in December, and even as late as January, can be had in fine shape for Easter; and as Easter is late this spring (April 19), they can be planted later than usual. If you have not all the bulbs you want, this is the last opportunity to get them. We offer an exceptionally fine lot of Hyacinths, Tulips, and the choice varieties of Narcissi, at bargain prices. Send for our surplus list.

Winsor Carnations

We have a splendid stock of strong rooted cuttings ready for immediate delivery. In order to get the best results from Winsor, it should be planted early. Now is the time to get gilt-edged stock. We have a splendid lot of cuttings ready for immediate delivery, and can also furnish strong established plants from 2¼-in. pots, fall propagations. Strong rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

DETROIT.

The Market.

I think I am safe in saying that Christmas business was away ahead of expectations. There was a big demand for plants of all kinds at good prices.

There was a scarcity of roses of all kinds. Carnations were plentiful; the price ranged from 4 cents to 8 cents. Violets were also in good supply; the demand for them up to the present writing has been good. Contrary to my last report, holly and ground pine were a scarce article by Christmas. The supply of holly was not nearly equal to the demand.

Club Meeting.

The last regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Wednesday, December 18. About one-third of the members were in attendance.

A lengthy discussion was held concerning the advisability of giving a fall or spring flower show. The matter was finally left in the hands of a committee of six. This committee is to be appointed by the president and the names are not known as yet.

There will be no meeting January 1. The next regular meeting will be held Wednesday, January 15.

Various Notes.

W. B. Brown reported his business as being far ahead of last year for the week beginning December 16. He takes an optimistic view of the situation.

P. F. Reuss, of Johannesburg, is again in the city, helping at Schroeter's during the holidays. H. S.

Dallas, Tex.—The contract for furnishing the framework, ventilating apparatus, etc., for the new greenhouse in City park has been awarded to the John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago.

WASHINGTON.

At the present writing everybody is getting in shape for the final rush. All the stores report business as good as usual, with plenty of good stock. Harty & Co., the wholesalers, besides cut flowers, have sold a great many azaleas and other plants.

The store windows are unusually attractive this year. Small's have a large cluster of satin bells in all sizes suspended with ribbons, some white, some red, with red electric light bulbs for clappers, under a canopy of asparagus with a background of holly. The effect is beautiful.

Z. D. Blackistone has a sleigh drawn by a flock of doves, and some beautifully decorated heather plants.

The Washington Florists' Co. has a pretty rustic window filled with cedar stumps with ferns and other plants growing in them. A camp kettle with twigs sits over a red light.

Kramer has his usual display of wreaths, poinsettias and decorated plants. He has a store on Ninth street for the holidays. O. O.

USE FOR LOW GROUND.

We have a low piece of ground that covers about two acres which can be easily arranged so that it is covered with anywhere from six inches to six feet of water, fed by five large springs. Are there any flowers or vegetables that can be grown in this fresh water to market that will bring us fair returns? If so, what are they? Our market is handy for anything. A. J. B.

I am unaware of any vegetable which can be grown in water. You might flood the piece of ground and grow water lilies, such as nymphæas and nelumbiums. They are the only aquatic flowers which would have any commercial value. A depth of two or three feet of water would suffice for these plants. For a list of suitable varieties and methods of cultivation refer to the Review of November 28, page 11. C. W.

Dayton, O.—John E. Freudenberger, having left the National Cash Register Co., will go into business for himself here.

Canton, Ill.—Harry Venn, head gardener for U. G. Orendorff, is visiting friends at Rose Hill and Skaneateles, N. Y.

Pelargonium Purity

Why not grow PELARGONIUM PURITY as an EASTER PLANT? They can be had in splendid shape. They are as easy to grow as a geranium bloom early and continue blooming for two months; make dwarf, bushy plants as pretty as a azalea, and can be sold more readily because cheaper. We have a few thousand in fine shape, 3 inch stock which we offer at $1.50 per doz; $8.00 per 100. We also have other good varieties such as Galatea, Countess of Crew, Gloriosa, Countess of Warwick, Tommy Dodd, etc., $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price.

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

The Propagation of Plants.

By ANDREW S. FULLER. Illustrated with numerous engravings. Describing the process of hybridizing and crossing and also the many different modes by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied. Cloth. 359 pages. $1.50

How to Make Money Growing Violets.

By GEORGE SALTFORD. For men and women in towns, villages or on farms. Tells what is the best soil for violets, how to prepare it, planting, watering, cultivation, varieties, heating, fertilizers, insects, diseases, marketing, shipping, etc. Illustrated. 25 cents

Ornamental Gardening for Americans.

By ELIAS A. LONG, landscape architect. A treatise on beautifying homes, rural districts and cemeteries. A plain and practical work with numerous illustrations and instructions so plain that they may be readily followed. Illustrated. Cloth. 390 pages. $1.50

The Forcing Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In this work the author has compiled in handy form the cream of all the available information on the subject of forcing vegetables under glass. In addition to this, the experience of many practical growers in different localities is furnished. $1.25

Gardening for Pleasure.

By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the amateur in the fruit, vegetable and flower garden, with full directions for the greenhouse, conservatory and window garden. Technical terms and phrases professional gardeners use in writing or speaking on matters relating to horticulture have been avoided as far as possible. 404 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

The Dahlia.

By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

Commercial Violet Culture.

By B. T. GALLOWAY. An illustrated, comprehensive and complete treatise on the commercial culture, growing and marketing of violets for profit. Of interest to the amateur as well as the commercial grower. Cloth. 224 pages. $1.50

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $2.50

The Market.

That flowers are scarce goes without saying. But it can be said that they are scarcer this year than they usually are at this time. In fact, I don't believe that you could pick up a good sized bundle in all of the wholesale houses put together. The weather has been anything but what is wanted to force bloom. There has been scarcely any sun and it has been pretty cold, too. Many of the growers were off crop anyway, and so it was expected that flowers would be scarce for Christmas, scarcer even than they have been at that time for many years, and that is saying a whole lot. Poinsettias were abundant and we had them to fall back on in many cases where other stock could not be secured. There does not appear to have been as much salting as is usual, but this is perhaps because stock was so scarce anyway and prices correspondingly high. There are plenty of green goods. The demand for galax has never been better and boxwood is selling in great shape. A boxwood and red immortelle wreath has a holly one beat anyway, and it will bring a much better price, too.

Retailers reported few advance orders. I believe, though, that everyone had all of the business he could take care of.

Various Notes.

Mums are still being shipped to this market by the Kenton Floral Co., of Kenton, O., and the Lampert Floral Co., of Xenia, O. The stock is good for so late and brings a good price.

The Hoffmeister Floral Co. reports a shortage of roses for the holidays, though a good cut was expected. The bad weather prevented the numerous buds in sight from opening.

Charles Pommert, of Amelia, O., the goldfish man, reports the demand for goldfish to be as good as ever and he cannot raise enough to fill all orders. Mr. Pommert ships the fish all over the country and has been very successful in this ticklish business.

L. H. Kyrk spent a few days last week among his growers in Indiana. He reports stock scarce with all of them, though the quality is of the best.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was a visitor.

C. J. Ohmer.

All members or prospective members of the American Carnation Society living in the state of Ohio will please notify at once E. G. Gillett, 113 East Third street, Cincinnati, O., if they will attend the meeting of said Carnation Society, at Washington, D. C., January 28 to 30. This request is made by Secretary Hays, of the American Breeders' Association, for the purpose of getting railroad rates.

E. G. Gillett.

Louisville, Ky.—This market was well stocked with Christmas supplies, both greens and cut flowers.

Jamestown, O.—D. E. Adsit has erected three houses, each 20x80 feet, and expects to grow a general assortment of bedding and decorative plants and vegetables. This winter he will use part of his space for the growing of lettuce. L. C. Adsit, lately of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., will act as his grower and manager.

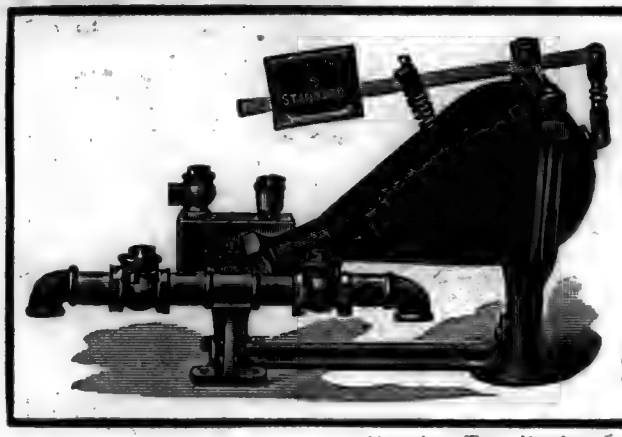
RADIATION.

Will you inform me as to how many feet of radiation a 1-inch, 1¼-inch, 1½-inch, 2-inch, 2½-inch, 3-inch, 3½-inch and 4-inch flow pipe ought to supply, using hot water? F. M. L.



Pipes less than 1½-inch are seldom used as flow pipes or risers. The following table will show the amount of radiation a given size pipe will supply:

1½-inch pipe,	225	square feet radiation.
2 -inch pipe.	400	square feet radiation.
2½-inch pipe,	620	square feet radiation.
3 -inch pipe,	900	square feet radiation.
3½-inch pipe,	1,220	square feet radiation.
4 -inch pipe,	1,600	square feet radiation.

The above table is on a hot water basis. F. R.

ANTHRACITE COAL.

According to my experience in the use of anthracite coal for horticultural purposes, it matters little what the size of the boiler is, provided the character of the fuel is rightly understood by the stoker. I began using the large vein anthracite coal somewhere about the year 1876 or 1877, with no previous knowledge of its peculiarities. Not much success resulted at the start. By continuously raking and disturbing a fire of anthracite coal, not only is an indifferent heat evolved, but a considerable proportion of the fuel is shaken through the fire bars and remains thus unconsumed. In order to obtain the best results with this fuel in any type of boiler, quite apart from the question of price, it must be allowed to do its work undisturbed. By proper regulation of the damper, a fire of anthracite coal will endure many hours without attention. The chief value of this coal, therefore, lies in its great durability, but to this must be added, that when intelligently used, there are no clinkers and little ash. Further, there is an entire absence of sulphurous fumes; also, there is a saving in labor, and a minimum of night firing, together with the practical certainty of ensuring a uniform temperature.

The Standard Steam Trap

is acknowledged the best for the florist because it is durable, and does its work without trouble and annoyance, saving its cost by the economy in coal bills.

COLLEGE POINT, N. Y.

An industry which adds considerably to the prosperity of College Point and which has been in existence more than two score years, is the growing of flowers and plants for the New York markets. About ten firms are engaged in this line of business and have a good many acres under glass. The largest grower and dealer is Anton Schultheis, whose "little white city" of wood and glass, filled with all kinds of flowers, plants and ferns, is situated on Nineteenth street, near the meadows. Golsner Bros., whose father was the pioneer nurseryman of the village, have large greenhouses on Twelfth street and Third avenue, and on Third avenue, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. Other growers are Henry Mainz, John Lurk, M. Kullmann, Frank Zimmermann, John Reck, C. Eckhardt, Philip Haas and Martin Martini.

HOUGHTON, MICH.

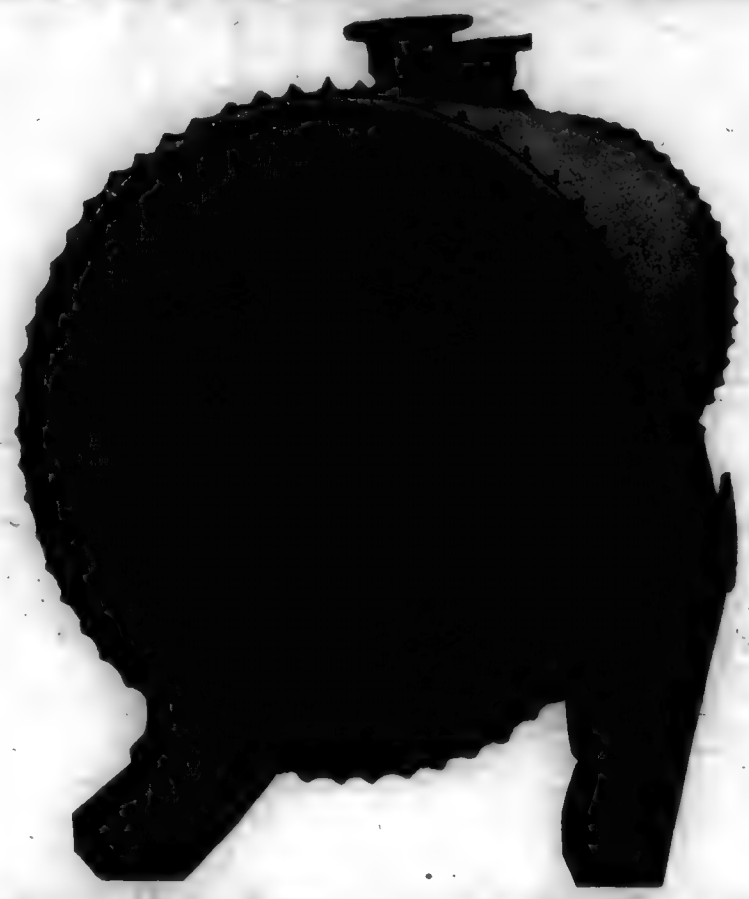
The Lakeside Floral Co.

The Lakeside Floral Co., with its headquarters here and its branches at Calumet and Chassell, has developed and prospered remarkably since it was organized last spring. Besides buying all the property of the old Lutey Floral Co., the new firm has almost doubled the capacity of the Chassell greenhouses, has built a new store and conservatory at Calumet, improved and partly rebuilt the Calumet greenhouses and purchased the building formerly occupied by the Lutey Floral Co. in Houghton.

At Chassell the company has eighty acres of land, with a quarter of a mile of lake frontage and with side tracks, docks and other special conveniences for transportation. Part of the land is used as pasture, while the rest of it is being planted with nursery stock. It is the intention to use the entire acreage for nursery and greenhouse purposes eventually. The Chassell greenhouses include 35,000 square feet of glass, devoted entirely to cut flowers. The success of this plant is largely due to the energetic efforts of the foreman, Harry Lutey, and his assistant, Alfred York.

The Calumet greenhouses comprise 20,000 square feet of glass, besides the new store and conservatory, already mentioned. The houses at this branch are under the efficient management of John Murley and are used not only for cut flowers but also for propagating purposes and for ferns, bulb stock and bedding plants.

DALLAS, TEX.



Such men as E. E. Perryman, Otto Lang, Ernest Nitsche and Henry Holtkamp were the pioneers in the florists' business in this section and cleared the way for the great industry that was to come. From the nucleus started by these men, the first greenhouse and nursery of any considerable size was constructed by the Texas Seed and Floral Co. some fifteen years ago, and this was followed a short time afterwards by the plant of the Southern Floral Co., under the management of E. E. Perryman. It was with the coming of E. H. R. Green two years ago that the industry reached a development that made its influence felt throughout the southwest.

Curious to relate, that which was mainly responsible for Mr. Green's big plant on the Kaufman road is the boll weevil. For the purpose of fighting this insect, which was playing havoc with cotton raised along the Texas Midland, of which he is president, Mr. Green purchased 245 acres of land near Terrell, to be used as an experimental farm for seeking a way of exterminating the pest. Quite naturally, with glass on the place, some flowers were grown.

Dallas has now practically 500,000 square feet under glass, there being between 400 and 500 men employed at some seasons of the year. In one flower factory alone there were over seven carloads of glass used, and two carloads of wire are required to furnish stakes to maintain the upright character of the plants. During the summer season it is necessary to syringe the flowers under glass frequently and it takes 65,000 gallons of water daily at the Green plant for this purpose. This water comes from their own wells and goes through a softening process before it is used on the plants.

The establishment of great greenhouse plants here has brought about a marked decrease in the local retail prices for cut flowers. For instance, chrysanthemums sold last year for $6 per dozen; this year they could be purchased for $4. Roses are a great deal cheaper, and, in fact, there has been a decrease of from twenty-five to fifty per cent all down the line in cut flowers of all kinds. This, of course, is occasioned to a great extent by the doing away of express charges. Local retailers report that the citizens of Dallas are taking advantage of these prices and that there is always a ready sale for good stock.

With Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, and the leading cities of north, south, east and west Texas, as our tributaries, it will be only a question of time before the industry of raising cut flowers and plants, and the nursery branch of the business, will be recognized as one of the leading factors in the growth of Dallas as the financial, manufacturing and industrial metropolis of the southwest.

GLEANED EN ROUTE.

Irving Gingrich, manager of the South Bend Floral Co., of South Bend, Ind., says he does not recall a time when purchasers held off so long as at this holiday season, but they came with a rush that kept him and his help as busy as they could be.

A. F. Beyer & Sons, of South Bend, found their big store none too large to accommodate the stock disposed of during the holiday season.

W. D. Rettic, of South Bend, has no store, but has fitted up a natty office at the greenhouses, which, being near the center of town, are easily reached and they are kept very attractive.

Van Bochove & Bro., of Kalamazoo, echoed the call from the great central west market of short supply and stiffer prices.

Burt & Coggan, of Battle Creek, Mich., are located in the new Arcade building, occupying two stores ordinarily, with an additional store during the holiday season. They grow pot plants quite largely and find an increasing demand. Azaleas are scarce, owing to late arrival of shipments, but poinsettias, primulas and specimen ferns are in splendid shape. Almost everything was sold out, owing to the almost prohibitive prices of roses and carnations.

Levant Cole, of Battle Creek, is one of the pioneers in the business and has no fault to find. He has a snug place and disposes of all he can grow.

Joseph B. Blessing, of Jackson, Mich., intends taking a long trip after the holidays. He has not had a vacation for thirty years and the recent death of his side partner has convinced him that all work is not good, even while in this land of Eden.

Clara Brown & Co., of Jackson, do a large cemetery business. Just now they are rushing orders for wreathing. The junior partner is laid up with rheumatism; particularly unfortunate at this busy time. W.

FITZGERALD, GA.—Joel Thomas has erected an additional house, 16x70, and will do more building next year if business continues to prosper.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

If you want to catch Anthony Wiegand you must get around early in the morning, for this young man of 76 summers is around at 5:30, ready to inspect the early shipments of flowers. Later in the day he hands over the reins to the boys, who are handling this flourishing business just as the founder would wish. The exhibition, described and illustrated in the REVIEW recently, was an unqualified success. Mr. Wiegand feels justly proud of the enterprise and says he saw only one this season that was on a more elaborate scale, and that was at Dreer's, which he acknowledged to be the most complete commercial collection put up.

H. W. Rieman, of Indianapolis, is aiming to give a spring show on the southeast side. He can do it, having remodeled his entire plant. It is now cement and iron throughout, with the exception of the rafters. He has a fine lot of cypripediums, which sell freely on the place—a striking proof of the esthetic tastes of his patrons.

John Heidenreich, of Indianapolis, formerly attended market regularly, but is now raising stock that sells quickly on the place. He has the best batch of late chrysanthemums in the city.

Conway & Co. make a specialty of carnations. They should have named the new aster Lucky Strike. A big batch of orders demonstrated the medium by which their find was brought to the notice of the trade.

The Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis, has purchased a large farm about seventeen miles out. John B., who presides over the ranch, says they can raise fine cattle as well as flowers. Nothing is too good for them, as their fine store attests.

Another of the craft who has partially turned farmer is John A. Newby, of Logansport, Ind., who recently purchased a fine tract of land outside the range of smoke and dust. There is no need to worry about good soil now. W.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING, S. A. F.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE S. A. F. O. H.— Greetings: At the opening of this year I desire, on taking over the office of president of our national society, to extend to you my heartiest good wishes for a prosperous and successful year, both as regards our individual interests and those of the organization, the welfare and advancement of which we all have so much at heart. No man ever entered on the duties of the presidency of the S. A. F. O. H. more conscious of the great responsibilities resting on him than I am. To maintain the standard of efficiency to which the organization has been brought by my able predecessors is a task which even the most experienced in the work of the society must regard as a formidable one. But, as the old saying has it, "the best of men are but men at best." I assume the leadership, therefore, to which your suffrage elected me, promising you my very best endeavor to fulfill, as far as I can, the trust which you, my fellow members, have reposed in me.

But in order that the society shall measure up to its highest efficiency during the year 1908, I must have, and expect to obtain, the fullest coöperation of all the members. I therefore urge the state vice-presidents to do their very best in securing new members in their respective localities, to spread abroad therein propaganda concerning the organization, its benefits, its usefulness and how deserving of encouragement and support it is, by every man and woman engaged in the lines of industry we are banded together to promote and advance.

Of the various committees appointed by my predecessor in office I earnestly desire, as I feel sure of obtaining, the faithful and full performance of the respective duties which have been assigned to them, as on the result of their endeavors very much of the progress of our association depends. I also hope that every member, individually, will act well his or her part in the furtherance of the work of the S. A. F. O. H. "One for all and all for one" should be the motto impelling each of us in our every effort along the lines of society work.

I wish to call particular attention to the forthcoming flower show, to be held under the society's auspices at Chicago, Ill., in the fall of this year. The committees appointed to carry out the details of this our first undertaking in this line are now hard at work, and I bespeak for them the best assistance of all the members, looking to the ultimate success that is hoped for in our stupendous venture.

I would briefly refer to the great loss which our organization has sustained by the sad death of our secretary, P. J. Hauswirth. The work of the secretary's office is being looked after temporarily by Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill., whose well-known ability ensures the utmost efficiency in everything connected with that office.

The preparation of the annual report for 1907 is being rapidly pushed to a conclusion, and the publication and distribution of the document will be accomplished with as little delay as possible.

Again assuring you of the "best that is in me" in the conduct of the society's affairs during 1908, and looking for and expecting the cordial and hearty support of you all, I am,

Yours fraternally,
F. H. TRAENDLY, President.

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

There is evident satisfaction in the Christmas trade reports.

A fortnight before the holidays, prospects were not encouraging, but it appears that almost universally the business was as great as in any previous year and in most of the cities a new record was established. The general explanation seems to be that all this scare about hard times has been false alarm, but that a few people who have in previous years spent large sums for Christmas gifts, really did this year content themselves with sending flowers.

It seems to have been quite generally the case that supplies were greater than a year ago and as a consequence many wholesale centers report that prices were not up to those of last year. In some cases retailers tell the same story, but in general they realized the same figures and consequently a better profit.

The demand for red always falls short and when it came to Beauties, or Richmonds, or red carnations, it was a repetition of the old saying that "he who hesitates is lost." The retailer who hesitated about placing his Christmas order got no red. Nor were there, as a rule, other roses for late buyers, but carnations were enough to go around. This refers to the wholesale markets. In the country towns practically everything was cleaned up and more could have been sold.

The plant arrangements, which have been so popular the last few years, had a larger sale than ever before. They have worked their way down from the fashionable stores of New York to those places where the stock is retailed in the potting-shed at the greenhouses. Nearly everyone now sells some kind of plant arrangement at Christmas and Easter. The supply of plants was greater than ever and cleaned out fairly well.

There is general satisfaction with the Christmas business and the trade starts in on 1908 with the enthusiasm engendered by its biggest Christmas.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT

End of an Unusual Year.

The year 1907 has passed into history as one of the most unusual in the annals of our trade. The early months of the year saw business at high tide; not only the flower business but all lines of manufacturing, mercantile and speculative activity. Everything went merrily "as a marriage bell" until the date arrived for spring; but spring did not arrive on time and from that portion of the year until its close conditions have been disturbed and the future fraught with more or less uncertainty.

The Year in Cut Flowers.

The first part of the year was one of unusually high prices for cut flowers. It was only the fortunate grower who was able to produce the usual quantity from a given space, but the good prices which prevailed enabled everyone to make a profit and the summer found the growers in the heyday of their prosperity.

The result was a general overhauling, expansion, and thorough preparation for a big season in the fall of the year. The autumn found rose crops well advanced and production the heaviest on record, with its consequent tendency, had there been no unusual outside influences, toward lower prices. Exactly the reverse was the condition with carnations. In general, the field conditions had been unfavorable, the plants were small when housed and they did not get away promptly, with the result that production all through the autumn was lighter than usual and the tendency toward higher values.

The Mum and Violet Seasons.

With chrysanthemums, the splendid season which the growers enjoyed in 1906 prompted a large increase in the production for 1907, and, as is almost always the case where production is increased, the principal part of the increase was of no better than medium quality. This of itself would have tended to reduce average values all along the line, and especially by comparison with the splendid season of the year before, had there been no unbalancing of general business conditions just as the mum season opened. While prices were lower than usual in nearly every market, those growers who supply the trade in New York city suffered much more than those in the west, and many report an unprofitable season.

The violet growing industry along the Hudson has become one of more than local importance, for Rhinebeck violets now are sold in practically every market east of the Mississippi, and from Chicago they find their way in thousand lots clear up into British Columbia and south to New Orleans. Western towns also are finding that the big dark blue violet of Rhinebeck will sell at a profit in spite of the loss of its fragrance. The violet growers have complained for years that there was no longer any profit in the business, but just the same they keep on increasing the production.

Last spring the New York violet market was overloaded and the western outlet was sought and considerably developed, as a result. Since autumn, the disturbed condition in the east has caused heavier violet shipments west than ever before. Prices have been below those of other years, while quality has been superb.

Bulbous Stock.

The sales of bulbous stock in the spring were at a somewhat lower level than the year before, but this did not prevent a banner business in bulbs this season. The standard forcing sorts of tulips were quickly cleaned up and, after a somewhat prolonged season, the bedding stock also has cleaned up nicely.

The reports show that rather more Harrisii and longiflorum have been potted up than a year ago, and there are larger quantities in cold storage for later blooming, so that we shall have lilies in quantity all the year around.

The cut of French stuff, Paper Whites and Romans, which comes into the market at the end of November, has been going slowly at lower rates than last year and the prospect for a good season for these is not brilliant. Nor were the first jonquils or cut tulips pounced upon with avidity by the buyers.

The Spring Plant Trade.

The late spring of 1907 was a matter of serious moment to those who grew bedding plants. The condition was general throughout most of the northern states and it resulted in sadly overtaxing the capacities of the greenhouses; there was no room to spread out the stock and a great deal of the material sold was below the usual quality, as a consequence. When spring finally came it passed quickly into summer and the large amount of spring business had to be taken care of in less than the usual time. Nevertheless, there was little cause for complaint over the profits of the season; the troubles were in the difficulties of handling stock and sales. It again was demonstrated that all the good bedding plants, ready at the right time, would find a sale. In fact, there was a shortage in many lines at the height of the season, particularly of geraniums, which later became plentiful, that part of the stock which proved to be surplus not having been in bloom at the time it was wanted.

A condition specially noteworthy was the spring demand for perennials. The sale of hardy stock for garden planting in 1907 was greater than in any year in trade history. The peony and the phlox stand specially well in public appreciation, but many florists are growing to handle flowering shrubs and many nurseries are taking up perennials. The gardening instinct appears to be only just awakening in the American people.

Holiday Plants.

Those plantsmen whose specialty is holiday supplies, did a big business for Easter and again for Memorial day and for Christmas. In the spring they cleaned up everything at good prices, although some had their troubles with lilies. For Christmas, sales were equally good in volume, but prices were not quite up to those of a year before. The holiday plant trade is steadily increasing, because the possibilities of cut flower production generally throughout the country are not equal to supply the holiday demand for blooms. The sales of holiday arrangements of plants in baskets, hampers or other receptacles are increasing all over the country, not so much, we believe, because of their novelty or their enduring quality as because a supply of cut flowers adequate to every-day requirements falls far short of the needs of a holiday.

Summer Business.

The excellence of the summer business is worth noting. While there are localities in which nothing is doing in summer, this condition no longer prevails with the majority of the trade. Many large growers of cut flowers for the wholesale market now find their summer crops among the most profitable for the year. This does not apply to asters, gladioli, outdoor sweet peas, etc., which generally seem largely overdone, especially in the poorer qualities. There is, however, a good summer sale for really first-class cut flowers, and crops of Beauty, Kaiserin, Killarney, etc., pay handsomely.

Increase in Glass.

The greenhouse builders and the dealers in horticultural supplies had their banner season in 1907. It is difficult to estimate with any degree of accuracy the extent of the year's increase in glass area, but it is of record that one manufacturer of material supplied cypress milled for 800,000 square feet of glass in the first four months of the year. With eight or ten firms making a specialty of this business, and a number of smaller growers still unaware that the specialist can beat the local planing mill at all points in the game, the total increase must have been something prodigious.

It is worth while noting that the increase was not great in the enormous plants which are now supplying several of the cut flower centers, but rather the increase lay in the fact that almost every grower who had one or more houses added something to his place. In addition, quite a number of new establishments for cut flower growing were started in districts at some little distance from any large cut flower market.

Effect of New Glass.

These plants are doing a shipping business in wholesale cut flowers, supplying only a few near-by customers, but they must sooner or later be felt in the older wholesale sections. To a greater or less extent they are responsible for the sudden and violent fluctuations in wholesale prices in the larger markets. These local wholesale cut flower growers, with no very large supply, take care of the needs of a limited number of buyers during times of normal production. In times of heavy crops they can supply one or two more near-by stores, but in times of scarcity they fall short of meeting the needs of their regular customers, who then fall back on the big markets and boost the prices they have to pay. The same thing results from the building of glass by those whose outlet is at retail. In times of large supply they are consignors; in times of scarcity, buyers. With many a wholesaler it is either a feast or a famine, and the condition promises to become more acute as the seasons progress, but fortunately so far buyers have increased in number and needs more rapidly than local glass has increased, so that thus far supply and demand are on the whole fairly well balanced in the big wholesale markets, even if the changes in supply and prices often are startling.

Glass for Vegetables.

In passing, the increase in the extent of glass devoted to vegetables should not be overlooked. A year or two ago the forcers of vegetables under glass were in panic lest the rapid increase in the winter supplies of vegetables from the far south, brought in express refrigerator cars, should ruin their business. But they have found that the public will pay for quality. (If they will do so in supplies for the table, it stands to reason that the same thing will hold true in matters of sentiment, and the grower of first-class cut flowers will have the call on the market.) Last year the vegetable growers had a splendid season and they built heavily in the spring of 1907. Thus far this winter prices have been exceedingly low and the probability is that there will be much less building for vegetables in the spring of 1908, whatever may be true of building for cut flowers, which gives every indication of being large, particularly in the west, where the country is prosperous as never before.

Flower Shows.

The flower shows of 1907, those educators of public taste in things floricultural, were the most successful ever held, although they came just at the height of the financial flurry, when the banks were hoarding their currency and declaring it was the people. The greatest show of the year was at Chicago, but all the lesser affairs were marked by exhibits of superior quality and rewarded with attendance greater than usual. The popularity of flower shows is certainly greater than ever before.

The shows of 1908 will have to contend with a presidential election, although save in a few localities, where early exhibitions are the rule, the shows will open the week after election. The "great and only three-ring event of the year" will be the national flower show at Chicago. This not only is planned on broader scope than any other exhibition ever held in this country, but it is the first attempt of the Society of American Florists in the way of a public exhibition. The guarantee fund is the greatest ever raised for a flower show and the premium list the most liberal. The cooperation of the Rose, the Chrysanthemum and the Carnation Societies has been enlisted and the show will, without any opportunity for it to be otherwise, prove not only the greatest ever held in this country, but the longest, for it will be open to the public for ten days, November 6 to 15, inclusive.

Florists Fortunate.

The florists may count themselves fortunate in the business of the autumn season. Men well informed on general trade conditions assert that the florists' business in November and December was less affected than almost any other by the financial flurry. Florists have spoken of their wares as luxuries and have taught themselves to believe that at the first sign of retrenchment on the part of the public, the flower bill will be cut off. This may be true in a sense, but the experience of the last two months has shown that flowers are a need of the present, and that what the public needs today it will buy, while the needs of tomorrow are put off. As an illustration, the metal industry (and surely metals, like copper and steel, are necessities) have been almost at a standstill. The general view is that it is merely a case of suspended animation and that the business usually booked by the dealers in necessities in November and December will come with a rush at a little later day.

The Flurry in Percentages.

As indicating something of how the country felt the fall flurry in finance, the figures of the bank clearings for November are of interest. Bank clearings, being the exchange of checks among city banks, are generally considered the best index of the extent of the country's business.

In November the bank clearings of the whole country showed a reduction of 29.3 per cent. In New York city the reduction was 36.1 per cent. For all the clearing houses outside of New York it was only 17.6 per cent, and the average in the group of western cities ranging from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Kansas City and Denver was only 3 per cent. In the middle west, including Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, etc., the reduction was 15.9 per cent.

We all know that the New York cut flower market felt the blow a great deal worse than did any other city, and the comparison of 36 per cent reduction in clearings in New York and 3 per cent reduction in the grain states indicates about the way the flower business was affected by the troubles of the banks.

Wealth in Farmers' Hands.

As pointed out in the annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture, made public November 30, the total value of the farm crops of the United States for 1907 was $7,412,000,000, which is the prodigious sum of $657,000,000 greater than in 1906. If the farmers had any share in making the prosperity of the early part of 1907, they surely have the means in hand for contributing to equally good times in 1908.

Exports Greatest Ever.

As another indication of what we may look forward to, the exports of the United States for the month of November, which is the latest for which figures are available, were the greatest for any thirty days in the history of the country. In that month, the United States sold and shipped to foreign countries foodstuffs, agricultural products and manufactured articles to the enormous value of $204,444,860. This not only exceeds October by $24,000,000, but it was $5,000,000 greater than any month in our history. Breadstuffs alone contributed $24,736,636, so the farmer is getting his share.

Balance of Trade.

But the best feature of the November figures is that in the month our imports were only $110,789,109. This means that the balance of trade in our favor for only one month of the year amounted to $93,665,751. It is equal to all the gold the banks imported to allay the financial flurry. It was the farmer and the manufacturer whose products paid for the gold that helped the bankers out, and it is upon such natural and economic resources that the prosperity of 1908 will be based.

CONWAY'S ASTER.

F. A. Conway & Co., Indianapolis, think they have a first-class thing in the white branching aster they have been growing for cut flowers for several years, and which has now been worked up to a point where they have saved about 115 pounds of seeds from the 1907 field of plants shown in the accompanying illustration. The Indianapolis retail florists have endorsed the opinion of Conway & Co., and it is largely due to the recommendation of Bertermann Bros. Co. that finding that the big dark blue violet of Rhinebeck will sell at a profit in spite of the loss of its fragrance. The violet growers have complained for years that there was no longer any profit in the business, but just the same they keep on increasing the production.

The Indianapolis retail florists have endorsed the opinion of Conway & Co., and it is largely due to the recommendation of Bertermann Bros. Co. that so large a stock was worked up. Irvin Bertermann, when blooms were first offered him, pronounced it an excellent thing and predicted a wide popularity in the trade as soon as the variety should become generally available; he insisted that a large stock of seeds should be worked up before Conway & Co. let the variety go out of their hands. The flower is pure white, of large size and good shape, showing no open centers in a large field of plants. The time of blooming is from midseason to late, and it usually is the late asters that realize the best prices.

THE NEW DIRECTORS.

It hardly would be possible for President Traendly to have picked out two better known men as his appointees to the executive board at the S. A. F. John Young is as widely known as any man in the trade in the east. Not only has he spent many years in active work as a wholesale florist in New York city, but he has served for years and years as secretary of the New York Florists' Club, his popularity being such that, coupled with his efficiency, the members never have thought of a change.

George Asmus, the western appointee, has served for the last half dozen years as manager of the Chicago flower shows and as such has made a record for efficiency which places him at the head of exhibition managers of this country. He is no less indefatigable in his work for the affairs of the Chicago Florists' Club, the Illinois State Florists' Association and many of his other trade connections. He not only has been a regular attendant at the S. A. SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Popularity of Pot Plants.

One more Christmas has come and gone. We trust it was a profitable one for the many readers of the Review and that their benches of salable pot plants were well cleaned out. The great holiday once more showed the striking popularity of pot plants as Christmas gifts. It would certainly seem that Easter and Christmas are becoming the plant growers' two best selling periods, and another year will probably note a still further advance in the popularity of well-grown pot plants.

The Christmas sales should have made some bench room for bedding and other stock, which has been cramped for some time. Give your little geraniums more space and spread out all plants coming along for spring sales. In the general clearance of left-over stock, be sure to reserve enough for your needs another season. Poinsettias will be mostly cut. Lay the pots or pans under a bench on their sides, in a house kept at 45 to 50 degrees at night. They will need no water or attention until May. If your stock was grown in boxes or benches, take up a number of roots and plant thickly in other boxes and stand in a frost-proof shed or any dry building until wanted. Lorraine begonias will be, or should be, sold out pretty well. Do not forget to reserve sufficient plants to provide stock for propagation. Do not keep all the poorest stock for this purpose. It pays to take cuttings from strong, healthy plants. Keep these in a temperature of 50 degrees. You cannot do any propagating now; later, however, you will get all you want.

Any azaleas or camellias unsold should have the flowers picked off. Give them a warm, moist house to make their growth in and syringe twice a day in bright weather. Move to cooler quarters as growth advances. These will flower finely for you another season and earlier than what you may import. The commonplace but ever useful stevia should not be forgotten; half a dozen pots will provide all the plants you will need. Cut them down and hold in a cold house for at least a couple of months before propagating.

Seed Sowing.

January is a cold month, but the days are lengthening quite perceptibly and old Sol's power is again slowly increasing. The coldest months in the year are the best for propagating purposes, as there is a steady bottom heat in the benches and less fluctuation in atmospheric conditions. While cuttings root better under such conditions, seeds of many kinds also germinate very satisfactorily. It is yet too early to start seeds of any bedding plants, but if you want to get some fine plants of gloxinias and tuberous begonias, a start can be made at once. As the seeds of both of these plants are very tiny, they should be sown on the surface of the soil in pans or flats which had been previously watered. A light scattering of fine sand over the seeds is all the covering required. Dracæna congesta and D. Australis, Grevillea robusta and Aralia Sieboldii may all be sown now, and if kept in a warm, moist house, with a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees at night, good seed can hardly fail to germinate. Avoid the use of animal or chemical manures in soil for seeds. Plenty of leaf-mold is the safest medium.

Propagation.

Cuttings of crotons, dracænas, dieffenbachias and other fine foliaged plants will now root easily in a brisk bottom heat. If the sand is kept moist and they are screened from the sun's rays, very few will fail. Most of the country florists need a big stock of variegated vinca for vases and piazza boxes. Now is a good time to insert a good batch of cuttings. The young shoots springing from the base of your old stock plants will root much more quickly than the more matured wood. Hydrangea cuttings taken now can be grown into nice salable plants for Memorial day trade. Hydrangeas which were recently started will be throwing a good crop of side shoots. Inserting a batch of these will insure fine plants for next year's sales. If you are short of lemon scented verbenas and heliotropes, put your old plants in heat and they will soon give plenty of nice soft cuttings. If you kept over some old coleus plants, these will very likely be crowded with mealy bugs; better get in a good batch of cuttings and consign the old stock to the rubbish heap. Your old plants of bedding geraniums should also now furnish a crop of stocky cuttings. Insert these in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots of light, sandy soil. Place in a bench over hot water pipes or steam pipes. Water well and then allow to dry out before applying more. This is better than putting the cuttings in a sand bed, where a large proportion would undoubtedly damp off.

Lilies.

It is still a long cry to Easter, as that festival is quite late in 1908, but the florist must needs be on the alert now if he wants his lilies in prime condition by April 18. If the plants are four to six inches high and are kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night, they are all right. Those just coming through the soil will need a warmer house for at least a time. Do not allow the plants to crowd one another. Throw away any sickly or diseased ones. Drop some tobacco dust on the tops of the shoots as a preventive of green aphis and, to make doubly sure, fumigate once a week. L. candidum, if wanted in flower before Easter, may now be given a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. It will not tolerate any hard forcing. L. Harrisii comes in very useful all through the winter. It should have 60 degrees at night, and the flowers are better cut before becoming too fully expanded.

Miscellaneous Bulbous Stock.

Most of the Dutch bulbous stock will now be well sprouted and such standard varieties as La Reine tulip and Golden Spur and Von Sion narcissi can be brought in every few days. The tulips will be very short-stemmed unless drawn up well in a warm, dark place before being placed in the light. The narcissi do not require as warm treatment as the tulips; 70 to 75 degrees at night will give the latter the necessary fillip, whereas 10 to 15 degrees lower will suit narcissi better. Hyacinths are also now well started and if kept in a warm, dark place until four inches high will give satisfactory results. Be sure to give sufficient water to all bulbs being forced, for remember the pots are full of roots and dryness will quickly spoil your chances of a good crop of flowers.

Freesias.

You will now have cut some of your earliest batch, if the bulbs were planted early and the plants were treated as advised in previous issues. Freesia flowers are very welcome at midwinter. They make a pleasing change from the always present roses and carnations. In a cut state they last well and all the flower buds open. Certainly no bulbous plant has a more delicious fragrance. As you finish cutting your crop do not neglect the plants, as you will want to use your bulbs again. Give them a shelf, if possible, for a few weeks and keep well watered until the bulbs are matured; then gradually reduce the supply. We have frequently seen the boxes and pans stood under the benches out of the way as soon as the flowers were cut. Here they became soddened and what might have been fine bulbs for another season were simply ruined. Keep successional batches well supplied with water, not forgetting a little liquid manure. The nearer they are to the light, the better they will do, and the more substance the flowers will have.

John Young.

Brief Reminders.

Keep the antirrhinums in benches securely staked and do not forget to disbud the flowering shoots.

If you have forgotten to make a sowing of ten weeks' stock, do so now. Remember the best quality seed is always the cheapest in the long run.

A batch of spiræas can be placed in heat at any time now. The newer and dense flowering forms require a couple of weeks longer to come into bloom than the old S. Japonica.

Shamrocks for March 17 sales should now be placed in little pots or pans. Grow in a cool house.

Have you an ample supply of loam under cover or within reach when zero temperatures arrive? Do not be deceived by prevailing Indian summer conditions.

It is much too early to propagate chrysanthemums for benching, but if there are any kinds in which you want to increase your stock it is time to make a start.

Put a few azaleas in heat from time to time where you have a demand for flowering plants. Keep stock for Easter just clear of freezing.

Keep stevia in flower in a cold house. If not allowed to go below 32 degrees, it will be all right.

Sow schizanthus for late spring flowering. There is no better sort than S. Wisetonensis.

HAIL STORM AT NEW ORLEANS.

Sunday morning, December 22, at about 3:30, there was a record breaking rain and hail storm in New Orleans. Really the hailstones were chunks of ice as large as hens' eggs and rough, some weighing half a pound, and breaking glass a quarter of an inch thick. They went through hotbed sash piled up six deep. The downpour of rain was general in and around New Orleans, but the hail fell over a narrow strip along the upper section and Metairie Ridge.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. seems to have been in the thickest of it and suffered most. The probable damage to glass and plants at this nursery is estimated at from $4,000 to $5,000, with no insurance. Harry Papworth, having carried insurance since he established the place nine years ago and never suffered any loss, decided in the early part of the year to discontinue the insurance.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Winter Airing or Ventilating.

Did you ever notice the peculiar state of the atmosphere in a house early in the morning, after a night of hard firing? While this cannot be said to be the result of wrong treatment, it is nevertheless a condition which needs correcting by a change of air.

Do not make it one of the night fireman's duties to do this. Get around yourself by sunrise and, as soon as the inside temperature begins to rise, put on a very small crack of air at the ridge, if only for three or four minutes, but long enough to make a noticeable change in the character of the atmosphere. Weather conditions may require this crack of air to be left on, gradually increasing the amount of ventilation as occasion demands.

Never allow the temperature to run several degrees above the desired point before raising the ventilators. Begin early, proceed moderately and do not indulge in ventilation of the explosive sort.

It may as well be admitted that my object in the foregoing remarks is to call particular attention to the fact that the ventilators are not solely for the purpose of controlling temperature, at the same time endeavoring to make apparent the importance of personal attention early in the day. Anyone having sufficient strength can manipulate a ventilator and can be taught to rely on a thermometer for guidance, but that is not all there is to ventilation. We must avoid extreme temperature in either direction, or sudden fluctuations. In the early morning instance referred to above, when we understand where airing leaves off and control of temperature begins, then we shall have begun to grasp the subject. Geo S. Osborn.

RUST ON CARDINALS.

Please tell me what disease has affected the enclosed carnation leaves. The plants were affected when I got them. The leaves are from the Cardinal. Will you tell me how best to destroy the disease? E. S. R.

Your Cardinal plants are troubled with a bad case of the common carnation rust. This is one of the most common and yet one of the least feared diseases of the many which attack the carnations. There are few varieties which are entirely free from its attacks unless handled carefully, but yet there are few varieties which suffer serious harm unless the culture is decidedly bad. Cardinal is one which seems to be subject to this disease more than the average and is seldom seen without it, especially if the plants suffer much of a check at any time. To get rid of it, pick off all the rusty leaves and burn them. Then dust the plants with sulphur and lime in equal portions, or dust them with grape dust. Keep the water off the foliage as much as possible and reduce the syringing down to a minimum as long as no signs of red spider are visible. Keep the atmosphere dry and crisp and slightly charged with sulphur fumes. Keep the plants growing as vigorously as possible and they will soon fight off the disease. A. F. J. B.

TOADSTOOLS IN BENCH SOILS.

I am having trouble with the soil on my raised benches, carnation soil especially, as numbers of toadstools, some as large as the palm of my hand, are continually springing up. I keep pulling them out, but in a night they pop out again somewhere else. What is the cause of this and what shall I do to prevent it? The houses run east and west and the sun has full play upon the benches. My soil is one-third clay and two-thirds rich black soil. When filling the benches we put in first a thin layer of rotted cow manure, as we always have done. The only feed we have given them is lime and manure water and we have only been giving that about a month, while we have been fighting the toadstools for three months. My plants are not doing well for some reason, and I think these toadstools are the reason. I have been particular as to temperature and ventilation. My plants were housed about September 1 to 8. M. E. H.

If the toadstools, as you call them, are the same as we often have come up in our benches between the carnations, the best and most profitable way of getting rid of them is to eat them. Ours are a variety of mushrooms and most likely yours are the same. Be sure to ascertain to a certainty, however, from some expert, before you use them, else you might suffer severe ill effects. We never thought they did any serious damage to the growing crop and your troubles most likely spring from some other source. These mushrooms, or toadstools, whichever they are, grow from spawn which was in your soil before it was put into the benches, and do not form from any improper condition of the soil, as you imagined. I cannot tell you how to kill this spawn, but if they are mushrooms, as they likely are, I would consider them as an extra crop and would make good use of them. To the initiated there are few things more toothsome than a mess of mushrooms, etc. A. F. J. B.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The rate of a fare and one-third has been again secured for the annual meeting of this society, to be held in Washington, January 28 to 30.

This is on the certificate plan. All you have to do is to be on hand about fifteen or twenty minutes before your train is due, ask the agent for a certificate for the meeting of the American Carnation Society, pay full fare going and you can then return for one-third of a full fare.

As the 2-cent rate is in effect in quite a number of states, this will make a very cheap rate for this meeting and no carnation grower who consults his own interests can afford to miss it.

Premium lists have been mailed to all of the members. Any one who wishes a copy can obtain one by applying.

FUNERAL WORK.

Wreaths of Galax Leaves.

The wreaths described in my notes, page 5 of the Review for December 26, by no means completes the variety of wreaths that can be made up of all flowers, but we will drop these for a time and learn something about some of the other styles of the more common wreaths.

First we will consider those commonly known as galax wreaths. These have several redeeming features. In the first place, there is no funeral design that will net the florist a better profit or give more universal satisfaction. When stock is scarce you can often fall back on galax leaves and with a few dozen flowers make up a pretty wreath. Another good feature is the short notice upon which such a wreath can be made up.

The most simple form is a wreath of all leaves. Every florist has his own style for a galax wreath, or any other wreath, for that matter, and naturally each thinks his the best and most artistic. Some are the best only as far as the money made on one is concerned, but if you care to hold your trade, then do not be too stingy with the leaves. To make a nice wreath of galax leaves, but of a small size, say a 14-inch to 16-inch frame, first pick out some of the largest leaves and fasten them to the moss with fern pins; then stem about 100 to 150 leaves, each one to a toothpick, leaving the stem of the leaf about two inches and a half long. Begin by running around the outer and inner edges of the wreath, and then fill in between these, giving your design a nice round shape, and be careful to leave an opening in the center of the wreath. A bow of ribbon of white, dark red or lavender color will add much to the appearance of the whole.

The wreath just described is suitable to use in place of or with door-crape, or to lay upon a grave, and often it may even be sent to a funeral house.

When it is desired to make a large wreath, say an 18-inch frame or larger, then it is a good plan to wire two leaves to one pick. Pick up two leaves, preferably of different sizes, place the small leaf upon the larger, but of course projecting out over it several inches; then with your knife cut the stems off evenly about one inch long, or below the large leaf, and wire the two to the toothpick. By making the wreath of leaves stemmed in this manner you will procure a much more airy effect. Many florists shine the galax leaves with oil, but in my estimation this gives them too much of an artificial appearance.

Galax and Flowers.

When your order calls for a galax wreath with flowers you make the wreath in about the same way, leaving a space for the flowers at one side. A good plan is to start the leaves at one place and work in each direction and, as you draw near to the side opposite your starting point, leave a space about one-quarter the size of the wreath. Of course, the moss must be covered with leaves laid flat.

Before going any farther, let us just size up the different flowers that will go well with galax leaves. We will consider the bronze leaves first, as these are used most. With these lavender or purple flowers, red roses or crimson carnations, roses of the Sunrise type, white flowers of any kind, or the brown or bronze types of mums, go nicely. With the green, of course, almost any flower will harmonize nicely, but I prefer pink or white. You can also use a combination of flowers to good advantage. Richmond roses and valley, for instance, make a very pleasing combination, with Asparagus plumosus or adiantum for green.

When the leaves are in place, first pin a few sprays of the green on the space left for the flowers; have an extra fine spray lying over the leaves on each side. Then stem some of the more open roses and stick them in between the green; the tighter flowers should be on longer stems and should extend a little over the tops of the leaves. The valley should be stemmed and arranged loosely in between the roses, along with some of the valley foliage. Now, there are many ways of arranging these same flowers on a galax wreath. For instance, instead of arranging the lily of the valley in between the roses, have each flower separate; that is, the roses on one side and the valley on the other; this makes a very pretty effect. Another pretty scheme is to face the flowers all to one end. Beginning with a few flowers at one end of the space, you keep spreading out until you end up in a bunch at the other end; then tie a bow of ribbon at the finish, tying the bow crosswise. The galax wreath in the illustration is of this style.

You can elaborate on these wreaths by using some cycas in between the flowers, but I prefer the galax alone with the flowers.

Ivy leaves are used in much the same way as the galax leaves; in fact, they make a more artistic wreath, but, of course, would cost more. The ivy leaves should be cleaned with a piece of cotton batting and a little sweet oil before using. Use just enough of the oil to procure a dull gloss. H. S.

THE SHOW WINDOW.

Of all the means of advertising which lie at the hand of the retail florist, none is more effective than the proper use of the show window. An attractive display frequently changed is an asset for any florist who is located on a generally traveled thoroughfare. Not only should artistic displays be made, but also seasonable and special ones, which will prove probably the most effective of them all, as in the illustration on page 6, which is from the photograph of the Hallowe'en window at the store of Joseph H. Seaman & Co., Washington, Pa. Oak leaves, cornstalks, pumpkins and apples were used, with mums and roses. The little faces in the front were light with small electric globes and altogether it made not only an attractive but a business-getting window. Mr. Philips, the decorator, who is a member of the firm, is shown in the picture.

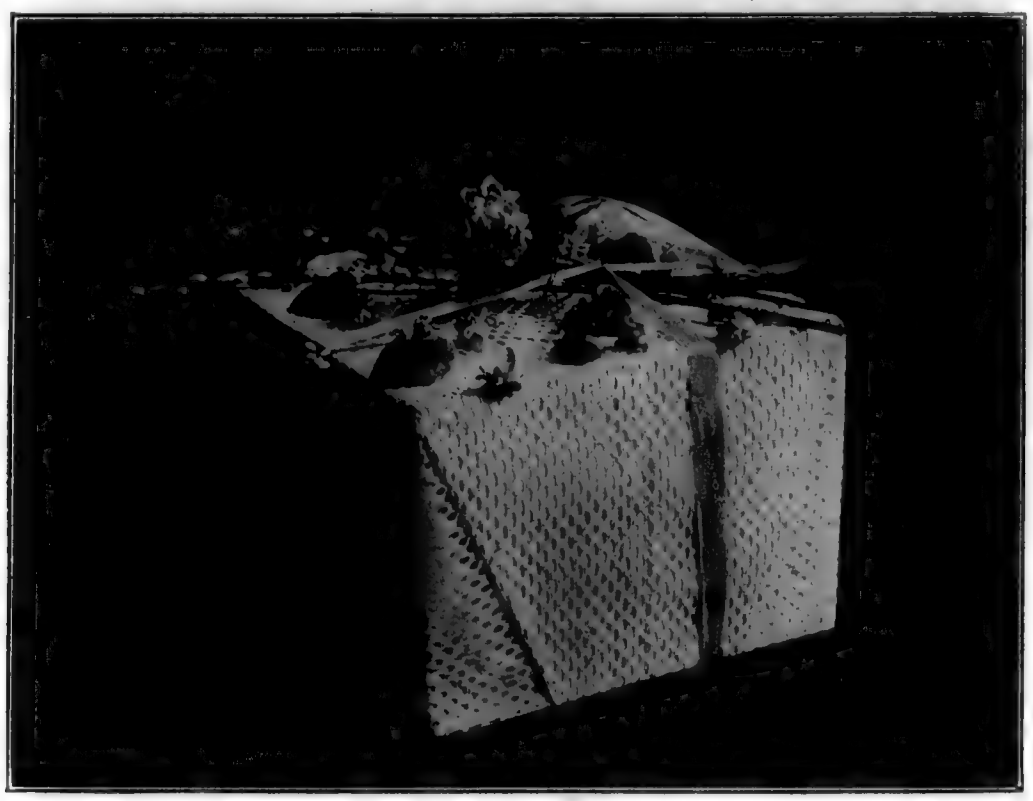
GREEN GOODS IN CALIFORNIA.

The demand that has been created by the public love for green goods in and around San Francisco has induced many of the retailers to devote a considerable space of their stores and a goodly portion of their time to handling the various phases of it. Several years ago no dealer would think of handling some of the articles that are now looked on as perfectly consistent with a well regulated business.



Even Christmas trees, long looked on as a rather cheap adjunct, are now regularly enrolled among the Christmas assets and these furnish not a little to the pecuniary success of the season.

Redwood wreaths in large bunches, sold by the out-of-town green goods men, are largely bought up by the public, who until the last year or two only expected to find them on sale by the hucksters or in some vacant store improvised for the holiday trade. Garland of the same material has been used lavishly in the decoration of stores and homes and the florists have been called on to supply the bulk of it, either directly or through some of the country dealers.

But the California redberry is the kingpin of all the Christmas goods and it is almost incredible what quantities are disposed of. Ten years ago such an article was never thought of and when one of our leading dealers told me that he had handled over forty tons during one week of this winter's holidays, it gave an idea of what this trade amounts to. Formerly these were also handled by small boys and hucksters, but all the dealers now devote considerable space and time to them. They are of extra quality this season and the public taste has become so well educated even with reference to this article that only the largest and brightest colored are considered worth handling.

Madrone berries have been used to a certain extent in large decorations, where they can be used to some advantage, but for small bunches they have to take second place. They do not keep as well as the ordinary redberry.

Huckleberry has taken the place of almost everything in the way of a cheap green decoration in the vicinity of San Francisco and thousands of bunches of it are sold daily by the wholesale dealers. It is in season all the year and is as popular at one time as at another.

The common marsh or fango grass is another decorative article that has come to stay, and no dealer pretends to do business without it. It is cheap, lasting and graceful and can be used in any number of ways.

Some good English holly from Washington and British Columbia was seen in San Francisco during the holidays, but there is practically none of it grown there and it is expensive for the retailer to handle. It has usually been picked such a long time that the leaves fall off it after it is exposed for a short while and then it ceases to be a thing of beauty. There is some California grown holly, but our trees are usually not old enough to produce many berries and, on account of our dry summers, the leaves are usually not up to the bright, green, glossy color to be had from those localities where an abundance of moisture insures a healthy, vigorous growth. ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Surprise Gift Box.

The patent suprise gift box, designed by Charles Henry Fox, is one of the most unique arrangements ever conceived for flowers and has met with the greatest success in novel creations in flower art, for which the Sign of the Rose is gaining an enviable reputation. It was patented in October, 1905, and is now shown for the first time. Mr. Fox expects to put it on the market and give the trade the benefit of this novel invention early in 1908.

The first view shows the box as delivered, unopened; in the second view the box is half opened, showing how perfectly the sides fall in place and display the flowers; and the third view pictures a perfect table decoration. The groundwork is a point-lace doily. In the center is a crushed hat filled with Liberty roses. A more expensive one may be filled with cattleyas or gardenias. The four bunches of violets are so arranged that they can be taken off and worn, used as favors. This bit of arrangement is charming for a theater party dinner or a card party, and can be shipped anywhere in perfect safety.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Christmas, 1907, is now ancient history, but it is history that is gratifying, better than was anticipated and generally satisfactory to all concerned from the florists' standpoint, grower, retailer and wholesaler all having had occasion to make merry, and all are ready to declare they had much to be thankful for. There never was grander Christmas weather; the productions of the plantsmen never were more perfect; the prices for cut flowers never were more reasonable for the holiday, and the majority of the retailers never cleaned up so thoroughly and satisfactorily. So what better memory than this with which to begin the Happy New Year? May its happiness and prosperity make for floriculture the greatest year in all its history.

For Christmas there was not much pickling. Everything that was good sold rapidly and satisfactorily to the wholesalers. The all-night session was never uninteresting, and by noon on Christmas day there floated up into the sunny sky a song of jubilee. Everything was sold in the wholesale cut flower markets, the plantsmen were depleted, and even the retailers had disposed of every handsome plant and flower. The prices estimated in the letter of a week ago were realized; occasionally for the selected stock a little higher figure was obtained. But a fair average top for the popular flowers was: $1 for Beauties, 10 cents for carnations, $1 for violets, 75 cents for orchids, and 25 cents for Maid, Killarney, Chatenay and Richmond.

Since Christmas the warm and unseasonable weather has continued. Sunday reminded one of May. Everybody has the grippe, or will have it, if the promised cold snap does not soon arrive. We are ready for winter and we have not had a breath of it to date. Before we are wide awake Easter will be here. In less than twelve weeks the plantsmen will commence their deliveries. Already they are planning and the new plant market brings together the best of the experts in friendly rivalry and mutually beneficial consultation.

This market proved a great convenience to retailers the week before Christmas, especially when journeys to headquarters became impossible. Many a load was sold and all the exhibitors seemed to be doing their share in the general distribution. The veteran growers believe the plant market will be more and more appreciated as the season advances and that it has come to stay.

Cut flower prices retrograded December 21, as was expected. The supplies became again normal and the usual dullness of the waning holiday season prevailed. Beauties fell to 60 cents, carnations to 8 cents, Maids to 12 cents, orchids to 60 cents, and violets to 75 cents and under. Reductions were in order all along the line, and the usual level of midwinter prices was established.

Various Notes.

W. F. Kasting was a guest of President Traendly December 22. They devoted a part of the day to fraternal and pastoral visitation, giving the carnation specialists, Dailledouze Bros., and the Cottage Gardens Co. their special consideration.

The wholesale houses were as usual generous in their Christmas remembrances to their employees, the majority of bequests being made in cash. Mr. Reidel seems to have drawn the high number, however, his employer, A. J. Guttman, putting in his stocking a trip to Europe. Mr. Guttman has issued a handsome Christmas calendar.

Among the happy retailers of the city was John J. Foley, of the Bowery, who tells me the Christmas trade was good on that ancient thoroughfare and that the demand for his floral album, containing photographs of his unique and artistic handiwork, is coming from every state in the Union.

W. H. Bostwick, of Staten Island, one of the leading members of the Richmond County Agricultural Society, died at his home last week of heart failure. He was an enthusiastic horticulturist and enjoyed the respect of all. The funeral was largely attended.

The sincere sympathy of the trade and of his many friends is tendered W. H. Gunther in the loss of his wife December 24. Mrs. Gunther was universally beloved and a wealth of floral tributes from Mr. Gunther's wholesale associates and friends attested the great regret felt by all. Mrs. Gunther leaves a daughter of seventeen and a baby girl. The funeral took place at Woodlawn cemetery, December 27.

James McDonnell, formerly with Scallen, has graduated into business on his own account, with headquarters at 44 West Twenty-eighth street.

Twin A. Smith, of Woodside, displayed the early tulips of the season, at the Cut Flower Exchange, for Christmas. Incidentally he won the 20-pound turkey at the yearly raffle, which his father, Charles Smith, of Bound Brook, N. J., claimed, the twins not yet being of age. The second turkey was won by another Schmitt, so that one may safely say the Smiths are the people. The rumor that Mr. Smith had distributed the big turkey to his patrons in sandwich form proved unfounded.

W. N. Rudd, of Chicago, secretary of the S. A. F., was in the city December 21 on his way home from the Philadelphia meeting, where gathered a notable assembly, including Messrs. Stewart, Traendly, Kasting, Beatty, Elliott, Farquhar, Hallock, Westcott, Craig and Harris. The new directors, Messrs. John Young, of New York, and George Asmus, of Chicago, represent the highest type of the young, loyal, aggressive and experienced element of the national society and their appointment will give universal satisfaction.

January 13 is the first meeting night of the New York Florists' Club for 1908. President Weathered will be in the chair and a night of great interest and appropriate celebration is anticipated. Exhibits will be welcome and this early notice should give ample time to prepare them.

Mackintosh, the well known Broadway retailer, is in bankruptcy. The liabilities are $8,000 and the assets $5,000. The business will be continued by Mrs. Mackintosh, James Meehan, manager. Mr. Mackintosh is ill in a sanitarium.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOSTON.

The Christmas Market.

While it cannot be said that Christmas trade once more broke all records, business was satisfactory, much better than could have been expected, and both wholesalers, growers and retailers seem well satisfied with business transacted, and it was only to be expected that there would be considerable stock unsold on Christmas eve. The quantity was less, however, than seemed probable early in the day. Some retailers state that their business was better than a year ago, one claiming that he did fifty per cent more.

The demand for good flowering plants was excellent. Azaleas were not in heavy supply except in the case of the bright little Hexe, or Firefly, as it is locally known, as it sold well. Lorraine begonias were abundant. Many of the plants were quite poor and were left over, but good stock cleaned out well. Poinsettias seemed to be overdone, many of the plants being almost minus foliage. Berried hollies, ardisias, solanums and well fruited Otaheite oranges took well. Cyclamens found a good sale and there was a fair call for pans of bulbous stock. Nephrolepis ferns had a good call and fern dishes sold well.

Some special Beauties got up to the dollar mark, but the demand for this rose did not equal that of former years. On the other hand, Richmond and Liberty sold splendidly, the best making $50 per hundred. Killarney was also popular, some making $4 per dozen, at which price a number of Chatenay, Bride and Maid changed hands. Roses were not overabundant and sold quite satisfactorily. There was a tremendous output of carnations, in spite of talk about their being off crop. The highest price heard of was $14 per hundred. Beacon, Victory, Robert Craig, Fenn, Octoroon and other scarlets and crimsons made $10 to $12. If of good quality, Enchantress and other pink sorts made from $6 to $10, while whites dropped as low as $4. Of course, many flowers were sold at lower prices, but these were not first-class flowers. Violets did uncommonly well. The majority made $1.50, a few reaching $2. Ordinary flowers cleared at $1.

Lily of the valley, Roman hyacinths, Paper Whites and yellow narcissi were all rather druggy. Poinsettias were plentiful enough, but many were small. They did not sell as well as usual. Easter lilies and callas were in fair supply and advanced but little. The demand for greenery was unprecedented and all dealers in it had a heavy trade.

Since Christmas the market has been rather quiet. Prices have weakened somewhat, due in large measure to so many flowers arriving, owing to the warm weather. Carnations vary from $3 to $6. Violets have dropped back to 75 cents and $1. Bulbous stock goes slowly. Roses are not in heavy supply and are selling quite well. Poinsettias are now almost unsalable.

Various Notes.

The sad tragedy in which Mr. and Mrs. John Clark and family of three children perished December 26 has excited much sympathetic interest among the trade, in which Mr. Clark was widely and favorably known. There was a large representation of seedsmen and florists at the funeral services.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, is one of the largest growers of Queen carnations for the Boston market, having over 25,000 plants of that popular white variety. Beacon, Winsor and other novelties are all doing well with Mr. Christensen.

Both Welch Bros. and H. M. Robinson & Co. report Christmas trade as beyond their expectations in volume.

S. J. Goddard, E. Sutermeister and one or two other growers are bringing a little freesia into the market.

From present indications there will be an excellent delegation from Boston and vicinity to the carnation convention in Washington.

The annual inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will take place January 4. The early winter exhibition will be held January 25.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, as usual, is sending in some extra fine carnations, to the sale of which Mrs. Ward devotes part of her time.

The week ending December 28 was an abnormally mild one and the daily press contains numerous references to dandelions, lilacs bursting their buds and other premature signs of spring.

A feeling of optimism pervades the trade here and all look forward to 1908 being their banner year.

CLEVELAND.

Christmas Trade.

Reports from the different retailers on holiday trade are far more gratifying than expected, nearly all of them being more than satisfied. The wholesalers also did a fine business, cleaning up everything in color with the exception of a few poinsettias. White carnations and Roman hyacinths went rather slowly, but found a stronger market the day after Christmas. Roses were short in supply and sold at from 6 cents to 20 cents. Carnations were received in large quantities, bringing from 4 cents to 10 cents. The demand for violets was exceptionally heavy, a larger quantity being moved than ever before. Quantities of fine lilies were to be had, and sold well at $2.50 per dozen. Sweet peas, stevias, Paper Whites and valley were all in heavy supply and were moved at good prices. There seemed to be a heavy call for all kinds of fine potted plants, among which there were a great many azaleas, Lorraine begonias, decorated araucarias and different varieties of ferns.

Various Notes.

C. M. Wagner, of Euclid avenue, reports Christmas trade as very gratifying in his new store, having had a heavy call for fine decorative plants of all kinds. He also says holiday trade wanted a fine grade of stock this season.

Westman & Getz report a fifty per cent increase in trade for the holidays, having moved quantities of made up baskets, consisting of dracænas, crotons and different varieties of ferns.

Milford Parks has been on the sick list the last week, with a siege of the grippe.

John Kirchner, of Quincy avenue, has been very busy with a heavy run of funeral work.

The J. M. Gasser Co. reports both wholesale and retail trade as good for the holidays.

Andrews Bros., of Lakewood, are sending in a fine cut of carnations to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.

A. Graham made a specialty of large boxwood wreaths that were very beautiful and sold well. He also had a fine lot of poinsettias in pans.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. handled over 25,000 carnations for Christmas, as well as the same quantity of violets.

Knoble Bros. had a fine Christmas trade, with a heavy call for the best of everything in the cut flower line. B.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was good. Prices were high and the weather for delivery was grand. Carnations were none too plentiful. They brought from $1 to $1.25 per dozen retail. Violets were at a premium. They sold for $2 and $3 per hundred retail and the demand was good. Roses brought $3 per dozen retail; Paper White narcissi, 60 cents per dozen.

The funeral of a prominent mill man Christmas week called for a large quantity of flowers. Add to this a coming out party, and the florists were taxed to the limit.

There was a good assortment of holiday plants, such as azaleas, primroses, cyclamens, begonias, etc. E. H. Chamberlain had some nice Firefly azaleas, also a magnificent display of Lorraine begonias, which sold like hot cakes. There was a good demand for wreaths, etc., prices ranging from 25 cents to $2. Well berried holly was rather scarce.

Various Notes.

S. S. Peckham, of Fairhaven, had a heavy cut for Christmas. Cleary, the Pleasant street florist, handled the entire cut. Mr. Peckham is a carnation specialist. He grows some 12,000 plants. He will root heavily for the trade the coming season. He thinks a great deal of Jahn's new white, Lloyd. Speaking of Mr. Jahn reminds me that he has two or three third-year seedlings which are promising. One, a white, is a cross of Lawson and Queen and looks to be a winner. He has about 1,000 plants of these. Another, a dark one, is a magnificent variety both in size, stem and habit. This is also in its third year. Another is a bright red, a grand color, and easily goes ahead of Victory, besides being a much freer bloomer than that variety. Growers around here intend to give his new white, Lloyd, a good test. Many of them have bought heavily of it.

We are having mild weather of late, which is very good for the coal bill.

H. T. Reynolds & Co. will go out of business.

A. B. Hathaway had a good cut of violets for Christmas and realized good prices for them.

J. H. Cleary had some nice pans of Roman hyacinths and a big display of Christmas plants. W. L.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Alfred Plant.

Alfred Plant, the head of the Plant Seed Co., St. Louis, doing business for the last fifty years at 814 North Fourth street, died at his home in Webster Groves, Saturday evening, December 28, at six o'clock. He was ill eight months. The funeral took place Tuesday, December 31, from his late residence, to Bellefontaine cemetery.

Mr. Plant was 87 years old and was born in Lancaster, now Clinton, Mass. He attended Yale from 1843 to 1847, being one of the oldest of Yale's alumni. He was in Europe in 1850, when he visited the first world's fair in London. In 1853 he returned to St. Louis and in 1856 he entered the employ of Plant Bros., seedsmen, eventually becoming the head of the firm.

One son survives, Frederick S. Plant, for some years the active manager of the Plant Seed Co., and a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Everett B. Clark.

Everett B. Clark, president of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., died at noon December 23 at Darlington, S. C., where his wife and he had stopped for a month previous to going to Florida for the winter. He was 64 years of age and a kinder, more generous or more considerate man never lived. He was of stanch New England stock and served his country well during the civil war. He returned to start his career with a capital which consisted of debts. For thirty years he worked as few men have worked, days leading the best of his men in the heaviest toil on his seed farms, nights doing all of his own office work. In this way he paid debts, acquired surrounding farms and built up a reputation as a seed grower. His sons, Frederick M. and Arthur B., have taken up his work, for during the last few years he has chosen to withdraw from active participation in the business, and many are the times they have heard: "You young men will have to strive hard to live up to the reputation established by your father," or "If you use us as well as your father always has, we shall be well pleased." Another incentive the sons have had was the pleasure given their father by the growth and development of the business. Many are the bits of advice he has given since withdrawing from active business, such words of caution as, "Now, boys, don't go in farther than you can wade," or more often the homely expression, "Don't bite off more than you can chew." This was not to hinder growth but to safeguard it, for never did a man love a business more than Mr. Clark loved the business which he built up. To the last day of his life he kept in close touch with every transaction of importance and had a deep living interest in every detail of the business.

He was one of the charter members of the American Seed Trade Association, was once its president and always up to within recent years active in its work. He served the Union honorably; he served his town and state conscientiously, both in private and in public whenever public responsibility was placed upon him; he served his wife and family always in a most exemplary manner as a devoted husband and a fond father.

Mrs. W. H. Gunther.

Mrs. Gunther, wife of W. H. Gunther, well known wholesale florist in New York city, died December 24, leaving a daughter only a few hours old. Mr. Gunther has the sympathy of a wide circle of acquaintances in the trade.

Arthur B. Howard.

Arthur B. Howard, one of the best known seed and fruit growers in central Massachusetts, died at his home in Belchertown, December 20, in his seventieth year. He had been in poor health and confined to his bed by spells for a year or more, but able to be around on his place and do light work at other times. He was born in Belchertown, June, 1838, and lived practically all his life on the place where he died. He was married September 1, 1874, to Miss Minnie Chandler, of his native town, who died about eight years ago. He leaves a son, Everett C., who has been in company with his father, and a daughter, Naomi, who also always lived at home.

Arthur B. Howard was a man of strong personality, strict integrity, untiring energy and an enthusiastic horticulturist. While in his late teens he lived for about two years in the Oneida community, at Oneida, N. Y., and it was there that he got his brief horticultural education, which served him well in later years. He was much more than a mere commercial grower, for he was the originator of many fine varieties of flowers and fruits. His new verbenas and zinnias have become popular, while his new Star petunia, introduced seven years ago, is now catalogued by nearly all seedsmen in this country and Europe and is one of the best of bedding petunias.

His ideals were high and he was never satisfied with a new variety until it was worked up to as near perfection as it was possible to make it, which took many years of time. The Star petunia is a good example of what can be done in producing new and improved varieties by selection and breeding and should be an incentive to others in like lines of work. His object at the outset was to produce a first-class bedding variety of a dark crimson color, with a distinct white star in the center, with the undesirable purple entirely eliminated. Taking the common purple and white variety, he worked on it twenty years before these characteristics were fixed so as to come true.

Mr. Howard was one of the oldest and most successful fruit growers in his section, being the first to grow the strawberry for market, over fifty years ago, when the Wilson was young. During the last twenty-five years he grew and fruited over 10,000 seedling strawberries from crosses of the best sorts, striving to produce the ideal berry. Some of these proved so much more profitable with him than any of the named varieties that he grew them almost exclusively for market. More of them were being disseminated, as he prepared to keep them for his own use. He also grew the apple, pear and peach largely. He was a regular exhibitor of his products at fairs and his exhibits were awarded about 2,000 premiums during the last thirty years. He often served as judge at other fairs. He was a frequent contributor to agricultural and horticultural papers. The business will be continued by his son, Everett C., who is also an expert and enthusiastic horticulturist. L. W. G.

R. H. Warder.

Reuben H. Warder, superintendent of Lincoln park, Chicago, and secretary of the park board, died December 26 in his apartments at 50 St. James' place. Mr. Warder had been ill for the last eight months, but performed the duties of his office until December 24, when he was compelled to take to his bed.

Mr. Warder was born in Cincinnati in 1843. He was the son of J. H. Warder, himself a famous horticulturist. He came to Chicago to accept the position in the park in June, 1901. He had filled the same position in the parks of Cincinnati and other cities. He became active in the affairs of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and was one of its vice-presidents at the time of his death. Mr. Warder is survived by a brother, John H. Warder, secretary of the Western Society of Engineers, and one sister. The body was taken to Cincinnati for interment.

John Clark.

John Clark, salesman and traveler for H. E. Fiske Co., Boston, lost his life in a particularly sad tragedy early on the morning of December 26. Mr. Clark, who resided in a new house somewhat recently purchased in Watertown, with his wife and three children, aged respectively 7 years, 4 years and 12 months, retired moderately early on Christmas night. Neighbors noticed volumes of smoke coming from the roof about one o'clock. The Belmont and Watertown fire brigades were hurriedly summoned and responded as speedily as possible, and firemen forced their way into the sleeping rooms in spite of the dense smoke. The whole family were found to be dead from suffocation. The police believe that a cat upset a lighted lamp and started the blaze and as all the windows were tightly closed, there was no egress for the smoke.

Mr. Clark was 44 years of age, hailing from near Glasgow, and came to America about twelve years ago, working successively for Peter Henderson & Co., New York, and Joseph Breck & Son, T. J. Grey & Co., W. W. Rawson & Co., and the H. E. Fiske Co., by all of whom he was held in high esteem. He was well known at the Boston flower markets and was acquainted with a large proportion of the florists of New England, among whom his geniality won many friends. Mr. Clark belonged to the Masonic fraternity among other fraternal bodies. He had been for some years a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, attending and speaking at the last October meeting. His father, John T. Clark, has been for many years at the Botanic Gardens, Washington. A brother is with the H. A. Dreer Co. and one is in business at Philadelphia. The sincere sympathy of a wide circle of friends goes out to them in their sad bereavement.

Funeral services for Mr. and Mrs. Clark and family were held at the Watertown cemetery December 29. There was an immense attendance and the services were most impressive and pathetic. There were large delegations from the seed trade, Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and other bodies with which Mr. Clark was identified, and all sent beautiful floral pieces. The pathetic tragedy cast a gloom over the trade in Boston, especially coming, as it did, at a season when it could least have been expected.

W. N. CRAIG.

Myrtle Rosenfield.

Myrtle Rosenfield, eldest daughter of J. F. Rosenfield, of West Point, Neb., died in Bethany hospital, Omaha, December 16, of typhoid fever. She was born February 8, 1887, and had taken charge of the household affairs since her mother's death. The bereaved family has the sympathy of a host of friends.

DENVER.

The Market.

Christmas business was satisfactory, and with few exceptions every florist reports a larger volume of business than for the corresponding period last year.

Weather conditions were good, with the exception of a high wind on Monday, which kept a few shoppers at home. The stores were never more attractive than this season. Plants always are a prominent holiday feature, and this year they were better than ever. Perhaps a reservation might be made by excepting poinsettias. Those, though good, were not as generally excellent as they were last year, not in color or in size of bracts. There were exceptions, of course, and some elegant plants were seen, but to take them as a whole, they were not up to last year's standard. Azaleas were fairly plentiful and were finely flowered, but there was perhaps a scarcity of medium sized and priced plants. They sold well and not many were left except in large sizes. Cyclamens were everywhere. On the whole, this stock was excellent. White and crimson were the favorite colors. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine as offered was a fine plant. Take it all in all, the plant trade was the best of any season yet.

Carnations were plentiful enough to fill all orders except in scarlet. The ruling price the retailer received for carnations was from $1 to $1.50 and $2 per dozen and was the most called for flower of any.

The quality and supply of roses were good, the demand for red, of course, being in excess of the supply. The prices ranged from $2 to $4 per dozen for pink and white, with a few selects at $5. American Beauties were scarce. The prices were not prohibitive, $5 to $20 per dozen.

Violets were another popular seller and the quality was good, the supply equaling the demand, retailing at $3 and $4 per hundred. Narcissi were somewhat sought after on account of fragrance and cheapness. E. S. K.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

HAPPY New Year!

Now, let's all get busy.

AN English firm has a white sport of Dorothy Perkins rose.

"As the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen." How is the coal pile?

THE twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis now have a florists' and gardeners' club and in due season will be ready to entertain the S. A. F.

WM. CUTHBERTSON, the new president of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain, wants to add Americans to membership at $1 per annum.

IT is worth while bearing in mind that a business can advance only on its own merits; the "other fellow's" demerits have nothing to do with the case.

ADVERTISERS should promptly discontinue an advertisement when it has done its work. Use a telegram, if necessary, to head off an insertion of your advertisement after you have sold out of stock.

THE retail florists have advertised in their local papers more liberally this season than ever before and the whole trade will profit by it, for only a small percentage of the population appreciates how appropriate flowers are as gifts.

AN attractive Christmas specialty in some of the first-class retail stores was Biota aurea nana, usually shown in a red receptacle, either a Porto Rican mat or, in one instance, in bouquet boxes brightly colored. The biota was best with some red ribbon caught through the branches.

A GREAT deal of the complaint which arises over differences of opinion between buyer and seller as to what constitutes "first-class stock" would be obviated if the buyers would cease to be guided by price cheapness in placing orders. You never could, cannot, and probably never will be able to get something for nothing.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The postponed meeting of the board of directors of the Society of American Florists was held at Philadelphia December 20. Among those present were: President Wm. J. Stewart, Boston; President-elect F. H. Traendly, New York; Treasurer H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg; Secretary pro tem W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; W. F. Kasting, William H. Elliott, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, E. V. Hallock, and those of the Philadelphia contingent.

The business for 1907 was wound up and unfinished business put in shape for President Traendly, who became the official head of the society on New Year's day. Mr. Traendly announced that two appointments to the board of directors would be John Young, of New York city, and George Asmus, Chicago. The society has had a successful year and looks forward to great things under the leadership of President Traendly, with the convention at Niagara Falls in August and the national flower show at Chicago in November.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Since Christmas there has been a fairly steady demand and the total of sales has been satisfactory, but the supplies of stock have been so heavy that prices were not as well maintained as they usually are between Christmas and New Year's. Several large growers have good crops of Beauty, especially long, and Richmond and Killarney are in heavy crop with several houses. Bride and Maid are of splendid quality, but not in particularly large supply. Other roses are to be had on all early orders.

The carnations seem to be catching their stride and the long delayed crops appear to be on. Carnations are abundant and of splendid quality. Prices are fair. Unless we get too much dark weather, there will be no complaint of shortage of carnations from now on.

Violets sold well for New Year's and are of fine quality. All requirements can be met with lilies, valley and bulbous stock in general. Paper Whites are a glut and selling even cheaper than last year. Only a few tulips are seen as yet. Sweet peas sell well, but the stems are not yet long. An item which moves with disappointing slowness is mignonette. Stevia does fairly well, for the retailers all use it in boxes and bouquets.

There continues to be an excellent demand for green goods of all kinds, but the market is well supplied.

The special demand for New Year's did not develop to the extent that had been hoped after the brilliant finish at Christmas; in fact, it looks as though the New Year's business will be quite a little less than a year ago, when it was particularly good, however.

Christmas Aftermath.

After the wholesalers had rested up from the Christmas rush and had a little time for figuring, a general appearance of satisfaction pervaded the market. While there are some exceptions, most houses report greater aggregate sales, money value, than in the banner Christmas of last year, and nearly everyone says that the clean-up was exceptionally good, even such little sought items as Paper Whites selling out well.

NOW FOR 1908

The "good old year," 1907, made a fine finish with us, for the Christmas business was the "best ever." And the growers whose fine stock made it possible for us to fill our heavy orders for Christmas are in full crop to give us a good start for 1908.

BEAUTIES

Fine stock in all lengths of stem, but especially strong on long. Can fill all orders, large or small.

Mention The Review when you write.

There is one point on which all agree, and that is that, quality for quality and flower for flower, prices were considerably lower than last year. This appears to have been especially true of carnations and violets. At first it appeared that there might be a shortage of carnations and then, December 23, it looked like a glut, but the next day courage had returned and better prices were demanded.

It is estimated that at least twice as many violets were offered in this market this year as were sent here in 1906. One wholesaler contends that the supply was four times as great. The market was from $2 down, with the bulk of the receipts bringing $1.50. At least a quarter of the receipts were in such condition that the first-class stores would not touch them at any price and they went to the cheap stores at from 30 cents to 60 cents per hundred. Even at that, some Christmas violets were dumped the following Saturday.

The rose market was the strongest feature at Christmas. It comes hard to a big grower to wire that he cannot fill an order for 200 long Beauties at $1 each, but it had to be done where nothing but the best quality would answer. Richmond reaped a harvest for its growers, selling up to 35 cents and 50 cents each, and in a good many cases long Richmond were substituted for medium Beauties without complaint. There was a big crop of Richmond on.

Poinsettias were the item that suffered worst. The supply was large and they proved to be almost a drug, even where the quality was all that could be asked. The retailers simply could not be induced to buy cut poinsettias in any quantity. Red berries also were a glut and many are still on hand.

The wholesalers who look back to 1893 say that this Christmas was a repetition of that one; quiet business in December up to Christmas, then a great rush occasioned by well-to-do people who had passed up the diamonds for that year, having eleventh hour recourse to cut flowers, and then quiet business again for a while. However, there is general satisfaction. The shipping rush was heavy, but the local buying quiet, although steady, retailers declining to stock up on cut flowers, but having nevertheless to come back to the sources of supply time after time when they began to get their orders out. It is seldom a holiday market is so steady and prices so even from end to end of the period.

POLLWORTH MILWAUKEE BETTER TIMES

Christmas at Retail.

The retailers report general satisfaction with this year's business. It was about up to last year in total of sales and those retailers who were able to get last year's prices made more money than a year ago. Both cut flowers and plants were cheaper at wholesale. Most of the retailers cleaned up on plants as closely as could be expected and hardly anyone was stuck with cut flowers, because no one bought any great quantity of stock until after orders had been taken for it. A few retailers could not get rid of all the plants they had bought. Some azaleas were left, but the principal overstock was the poinsettia. This city never has seen so many poinsettias as were offered this Christmas and a great many of them had nothing to brag about as to quality. Quite a few of these still are to be seen.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling says Christmas was not only the best on record, but was notable for the even balance between supply and demand. He cleaned up as closely as he ever did and at the same time says he filled every order, even those calling for red.

The George Wittbold Co. is rigging up an electric pump to return the condensation to the boilers, to take the place of a Bundy steam trap.

The A. Dietsch Co. says that it cannot supply the demand for Washington red cedar, although that material costs a little more than the best grade of cypress greenhouse material.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says that the first twenty-eight days of December, 1907, gave the same sales record, almost dollar for dollar, as the whole month of December in 1906.

C. M. Dickinson is again on duty every day at E. H. Hunt's after a fortnight's illness, covering the Christmas rush, during which he managed to be on deck part of the time.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports that the four days of Christmas business were the largest in the history of the house, but they concur in the general report that prices averaged less than last year.

Percy Jones, manager of the Flower Growers' market, says the Christmas business was notable in that there was no great rush for stock, but a good steady business that cleaned everything up.

Vaughan & Sperry say they had violets at Christmas that the city buyers took at $2 without stopping to ask the price of other grades.

E. Fransen, of Scheiden & Schoos, says his firm is ready to ship carnation cuttings.

Bassett & Washburn are still cutting large quantities of longiflorum giganteum lilies.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports that on the Christmas business they filled many more orders than last year, but the orders did not average so large. At the same time they were short 500 to 600 dollar Beauties. Since Christmas business has been good with them.

The E. F. Winterson Co. had freesias for Christmas, and every day since. Cattleyas are among their receipts. They report having secured better prices for carnations than at any previous Christmas. E. F. Winterson began a term in the criminal court December 30, serving as juryman for Judge Wright.

White Perfection continues to give splendid results at J. A. Budlong's. They think it leaves little to be desired of white carnations.

Weiland & Risch are beginning to cut heavily of Killarney once more.

Orchid receipts at C. W. McKellar's are the heaviest of the season. Quality is fine and a large number of varieties now are available.

At Peter Reinberg's, Leonard Kill reports that December 23 was the biggest day thus far recorded in their business.

I. C. Silliman is now with Gus Lange. Mr. Lange says business has been better right along this fall than it was last year and that Christmas was somewhat ahead of a year ago, in spite of the fact that trade was late in starting. He says they had no trouble in waiting on every customer except between two o'clock and five on the afternoon of December 24, when the rush was past all possibilities of handling.

George Reinberg is planning to do considerable rebuilding in the early spring, to put his entire place in the best possible condition.

George Walther is recovering from an attack of quinsy, which kept him out of the store during the Christmas rush.

John Kruchten says 1908 looks good to him, as he starts the year with a new carnation grower and a new rose grower.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. are so well satisfied with 1907 that they will not add to their range of glass for 1908, feeling content with the extent of the business now done. They are cutting heavily at present.

L. Coatsworth made a flying trip this week to the establishment of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. at New Castle.

George Weiland says Christmas at Evanston proved to be the best to date, but that for New Year's the demand up to Monday had not been as strong as a year ago.

Zech & Mann report the total of December business about as last year, the last week of the month running about as it did a year ago, with Christmas a little better, and the middle of the month a little slow.

Peter Reinberg has put in an extension telephone in the Beauty department to save Archie Spencer's legs and his time. The Beauty crop is heavy, and the time saving is of special consequence.

H. M. Hooker Co. has leased from the Witbeck estate 116½ feet frontage on the south side of West Washington street, for ninety-nine years at annual rental of $4,660, or five per cent on $93,660, or practically $800 a foot, a record price for that neighborhood. The Hooker Co. will improve with a six-story warehouse costing $200,000.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has dropped the Golden Gate rose.

The epidemic of grippe, which has seized the city, has caused many absentees to be noted in the market. Among them were: A. C. Kohlbrand, of E. C. Amling's; W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's; Mrs. W. E. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's; John Degnan, of the E. F. Winterson Co.

The Market.

The calamity howlers seem to have been lost in the Christmas rush. It is business again on all sides, just at present writing, and all are confident that it will remain so. Several good weddings, debutantes' parties and numerous receptions are helping things along. There has also been considerable funeral work of late.

Never before were orchids in such demand in this city as this year. B. Schroeter is one of the largest growers in this vicinity and besides supplying his retail trade he helps out some of the other florists from time to time. Valley is in big demand at all times. This favorite, used alone and with orchids, is taking the place of many a violet corsage.

Roses are hardly equal to the demand. Many large shipments arrive, but the demand is large. Carnations are plentiful and still the price is away up. Considerable bulbous stock is arriving daily. Romans and Paper Whites are almost too plentiful.

Green stock, such as asparagus, is plentiful. There seems to be a tendency among the growers to hold green for the holidays. This is poor policy. This year much of it went to waste.

Christmas Trade.

Alexander Common, who is located in the northern end of the city, said his Christmas business was somewhat ahead of last year. He is running his place on a sort of a cash store plan and his charges for Christmas could be counted on one's fingers.

W. B. Brown, of course, was busy. His business is still young, but is growing nicely. Being on the avenue, he catches a large transient trade. Mr. Brown did a good cut flower business as well as a plant business.

Sullivan's window was prettily decorated for the holidays. A latticework of white ribbon, studded with poinsettias, formed a pretty background for an assortment of plants and baskets. Mr. Sullivan did not think much of the outlook for Christmas, but the writer is of the opinion that he is satisfied now.

Herman Klagge, the hustling manager at Breitmeyer's, spoke well of the holiday trade. Among other things, the cut poinsettias and lilies sold exceptionally well. Many made up baskets and prettily trimmed plants were disposed of. Scotch heather was in good demand. A number of large decorations have kept this firm busy and another large one was booked for New Year's eve.

Walter Taepke is more than pleased with the holiday business. He had a large cut of elegant roses and carnations from his own houses and disposed of the same at a good profit. He is of the same opinion as many others, that the fabulous prices charged by some of the growers at the time when there is a good demand for stock is a detriment to our business. People are willing to pay a fair price, but when it comes to daylight robbery they will not stand for it. Taepke's sold many medium-sized palms during Christmas.

The Bemb Floral Co. had an unusually brisk trade. Several decorations helped to occupy this firm's time. Many wreaths made of green moss and trimmed with various colored cape flowers were disposed of.

E. A. Scribner, away out on the east side, did not anticipate much business and therefore was not prepared for the rush. He picks up a nice lot of business in the residence section. His auto is still doing business. Mr. Scribner is the only florist in town who uses an auto for delivery purposes.

Things were humming at Schroeter's. This firm makes a specialty of plants and the large assortment this year was second to none. Poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, Bostons, palms, etc., went like hot cakes. Begonia Agatha was a good seller. A fine lot of azaleas was also disposed of. Over 1,000 deliveries were made for Christmas, as the receipts in the route books will show, and this means some hustling. Small ferns were in good demand, showing that fern dishes are becoming more popular as gifts.

Asman & Dunn were well satisfied with holiday trade. Mr. Dunn is also of the opinion that the wholesale prices were too high and drove many prospective buyers away.

Summing up the whole, we find satisfaction on all sides. Beauties sold fairly well, but the price was too high. Plants of all kinds are becoming more in demand and some day it will be a plant business almost entirely. The violets on this market were good and met with a ready sale. There was a scarcity of roses. Carnations were enough to go around. Holly could hardly be bought at any price December 24. Ground pine also was quite scarce.

Various Notes.

Fred Cychion, foreman for B. Schroeter, has been in the employ of Mr. Schroeter for twenty-five years and December 28, in remembrance of his years of faithful service, he was presented with a large arm chair.

The Lohrman Seed Co. disposed of a lot of holly at a good price during the rush. This firm is soon to move into more spacious quarters.

ST. LOUIS.

The Christmas Trade.

Reports from all over the city, from the large as well as the small florists, indicate nothing but satisfaction with the amount of business done for Christmas. In spite of the high prices, cut flowers sold as well as ever. Some of the uptown retailers say that business increased nearly ten per cent on the sale of blooming plants and that in cut flowers it was about the same as last year. The downtown florists depended on cut flower sales alone and report a satisfactory business. From up north and from the southern part of the city, we also hear splendid reports as to Christmas business. The weather was all that could have been asked for, clear and cool, just right for delivering plants and cut stock without extra wrapping, which saved a great deal of time.

Our wholesalers, Messrs. Kuehn, Smith, Berning and Angermueller, report that this Christmas was as good as any they have had. Everything sold well, except poinsettias. Of these, too many were on the market to bring a good price. Shipping trade, too, was as good as usual at this time of the year.

Since Christmas, business has kept up pretty well, with a great deal of funeral work to help out. Not much stock is coming in just now and the wholesalers are cleaning up almost every day, in everything except bulbous stock, which is quite plentiful. Violets, too, have taken a drop in price since Christmas. They are down to 50 cents per hundred.

For New Year's nothing like Christmas business is looked for; still an increase over last year is expected, as quite a few advance orders have been booked and prices will not be as high as last week. We are having spring-like weather and this should make stock more plentiful.

A good many of our florists got left this year on holly. Those who had not ordered in advance were greatly surprised when the price went up to from $7 to $14 a case. Then they expected, as usual, to buy from the Third street commission men at $3 to $4 per case. The holly and lycopodium sent here by W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, were the best in the market. Those who had ordered in advance made good money.

Various Notes.

James Dunford, proprietor of the Gallagher Flower Shop, on Page avenue, reports that his first Christmas in the retail business was a good one, much better than he expected.

Henry C. Vogel, foreman for Adolph Brix, had a fine crop of Enchantress for Christmas, in spite of the dark weather. He has also a fine crop of sweet peas coming on; in fact, the whole place has been in fine shape since Mr. Vogel took hold.

The funeral of Mrs. J. E. Schray took place December 26, from the family residence, 4100 Pennsylvania avenue. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by the local trade. Among the florists who attended were Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kruse, C. A. Kuehn, O. G. Koenig, F. H. Meinhardt, F. J. Fillmore and J. J. Beneke.

George Ostertag received his Christmas present in the shape of a four-year reappointment as superintendent of parks. The appointment was signed by Philip Scanlan, park commissioner, and Rolla Wells, mayor. Mr. Ostertag's appointment is not a political one, but because he has made good with the department.

Arthur Ellison, who is here for the holidays, says the Ellison Floral Co. had a fine Christmas trade. Everything sold well and at good prices.

George Waldbart and Mrs. M. M. Ayers, at Grand avenue and Olive street, as usual, did a rushing business. Their show houses were empty Thursday, where crowded two days before.

Fred H. Weber reported a big increase over last year's business in both plants and cut flowers. He also had quite a few orders from outside of the city.

The attractive store front of C. Young & Sons Co. brought them a great deal of extra trade. The whole force was kept busy filling orders. The trade was very satisfactory all through.

Fred C. Weber did his usual large Christmas business. His window and showhouse display was of the best, with everything in season.

The new firm of Kelley & Petschonek, on Kings highway, reports its first Christmas beyond expectations.

NEBRASKA CITY, NEB.—H. H. Cotton says that Christmas trade showed an increase of thirty-five per cent over that of last season. Liberal display advertising in a local paper played an important part in stimulating new business and encouraging his regular customers.

BROCKTON, MASS.

W. W. Hathaway reports Christmas trade as a little better than a year ago in spite of some business depression. Among flowering plants, azaleas, Lorraine begonias, cyclamens, primulas and poinsettias sold well. Nephrolepis Whitmani was easily the leader in the foliage class, there being a heavy demand for this fine fern.

Carnations, as usual, led in popularity among cut flowers; roses, violets, sweet peas and bulbous stock being next in popularity.

Mountain laurel took the lead in wreathing and roping, going far ahead of 1906 in spite of the fact that there were never more street and house to house venders of the same.

The prevailing high prices have cleaned out the flower sellers who have had stands in some of the large dry goods stores.

F. J. Dodd, late manager to H. F. Crawford, is now with N. F. Comley, of Lexington.

H. H. Barrows & Son, over in Whitman, had a big holiday call for nephrolepis ferns, their new Whitmani being the favorite. W. N. C.

The Market.

There seemed to be plenty of flowers in every store for Christmas and blooming plants sold well. They are becoming more in demand every year. There were plenty of azaleas, but they sold well. Medium sized ones sold at from $2.50 to $3.50, larger ones selling at $5 and up. Narcissi in pans at from 75 cents to $1.50 sold well for smaller gifts. Roman hyacinths and primroses, poinsettias and Lorraine begonias and fancy baskets of mixed plants also sold better than last year.

Green was plentiful. Christmas trees were a glut and everyone who handled them had some left.

There were plenty of violets. Some of the stores were overstocked on them and were ready to wholesale to the rest the next day. The weather was delightful. Palms for decorating were taken out in open wagons. Such fine weather made all delivering easy, so that but little wrapping of plants was necessary.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell says that he had a splendid trade and sold out entirely on green and holly. Everything else went well and he is much pleased.

Mr. Freudenthal had a fine trade during Christmas. He sold mostly cut flowers.

The William L. Rock Flower Co. reports trade as good for Christmas and they had all they could handle.

Miss J. E. Murray reports a splendid trade and could have sold more in blooming plants. Her supply of plants ran out early in the day. She now has her store back into good shape, it having gone through much repair since the fire.

W. H. Humfeld says that he was surprised at the amount of business he had, especially the last two days, it being much greater than he had expected. He is satisfied that he had his share of the business.

We believe that everybody is well satisfied with the Christmas trade. There does not seem to be any complaint.

Adolph Goldenberg, of Ralph M. Ward & Co., was a visitor last week.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Christmas this year was looked forward to with much doubt by many of the retailers, the stringency in the money market causing many to think trade would be short. However, if the reports being given out by the various dealers are correct, it has been the best this city has ever seen.

Plants, of course, were more conspicuous than ever before and many storemen said they would not handle cut flowers at the prices at which they were sold, but the last two days settled that matter and without doubt they handled just as many as ever.

The commission men seemed to find the stock somewhere to fill orders, notwithstanding the fact that a short cut was reported all along the line, and prices were about the same as any other Christmas. In fact, for several years there has been but a slight difference in the price lists. Beauties doubled in price and Richmond roses soared away up, but there was enough of everything to more than satisfy the demand, including violets.

The out-of-town dealers, however, do not speak so well of their business and much complaint comes from the small towns surrounding us, especially where they depend on the mills, which were shut down, and with no information when they will start again.

Various Notes.

It is reported that one of our wholesalers speculated in the western market, buying carnations in quantities which were not justified. The result was that on the day before Christmas the street stands on Fifth avenue were offering carnations at 50 cents per dozen, and it is said even as low as 25 cents per dozen. This made it look bad for the storemen when they were asking very high prices, having paid more themselves for their stock than the stands were selling for.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. reports its sales considerably in advance of last year and one-half their help, including Mr. Langhans, had been suffering with grip, just getting out Monday. Mr. Langhans found by the time the rush was over that he had gotten out too soon and has been confined to his room ever since Christmas morning.

Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Neff have the sympathy of their friends in the death of Mrs. Neff's mother, December 27.

There were few cases of good holly in this market. Many Christmas trees went to the dump. Boxwood was very scarce toward the last and sold at 25 cents per pound. Red bells were not in it this

The Christmas Trade.

Christmas is over and, after reckoning up, the florists are looking like breakfast food advertisements. They are wearing the smile that will not come off. With one or two exceptions, they report business from twenty-five to fifty per cent better than last year. There was a much larger cash business. Plants sold well; that is, all except the very large ones and there was little large stuff in the plant line this year. Plant baskets sold well, but cut flowers sold better than last year. There was enough to go around. Violets were short on Christmas morning, but a good many pickled violets were to be seen. This was about the only real complaint. Gude Bros. had one order of twenty-one armadillo baskets of growing plants to ship out of town. They had a fine lot of 2,000 Beauties for their Christmas trade.

J. J. Harty & Co. cleaned up and made good. They are receiving some fine carnations at present.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The Christmas business began in earnest on Sunday, December 22, when shipping was heavy. The commission men found it necessary to work all day Sunday to get their out of town orders packed, as the shipping business was unusually large. The supply of roses was fine and by Christmas morning had sold up clean. Beauties were never better and while they did not bring $15 for the best, there was quite a nice lot of them sold for $10 and $12 per dozen. The short and medium grades sold up clean at a good average price, anywhere from $4 to $9 per dozen, as the supply on these grades was decidedly short. Richmond and Liberty were especially fine and sold splendidly. The prices ranged from 8 cents for the short ones to 35 cents and 50 cents for the best, of which there were not quite enough to meet the demand. Brides and Bridesmaids in the fancy grades were in good demand and sold up clean where the stock was fresh. The salted stock, of which there was quite a lot, did not sell at any price, the growers having held them too long before sending them to the market. Killarney was at its best. The weather, which has a good bit to do with the color in this rose, was bright and warm and the flowers were exceptionally well colored. The specials, which had 3-foot stems, brought from 35 cents to 40 cents each, which was a good price for a tea rose.

Carnations were in good shape and sold up clean on the better grades. There were a few of the new red carnation Beacon which sold for $16 per hundred. Winsor, which cut quite a good figure, while not so long in stem, was fine in color and is a good shipper. The best of these brought 12 cents. Enchantress and a few of the other larger varieties sold for 10 cents and 12 cents. The smaller kinds cleaned up well at a good average price.

Cattleyas were plentiful and were in good demand, the prices ranging from 60 cents to 75 cents each. Cypripediums were a little bit scarce. The main crop will be in about two weeks later. They sold well at $15 per hundred. There were entirely two many Harrisii lilies and they sold poorly, as did plumosus and adiantum, with which the market was overstocked. The shipments of valley were heavy, while the demand was light and the prices did not advance.

Poinsettias were fine, but there were too many of them and the market would not take them all. Fancy single and double violets were in demand and brought a fair price, 75 cents and $1 per hundred. The smaller ones did not sell so well, no reasonable offer being refused. Mignonette in the fancy grades brought 6 cents and 8 cents. Bouvardia, which is always in good demand at this time of year, sold up clean at from 3 cents to 6 cents.

Plants for Christmas, which a few years ago were scarcely known, were a big factor and the sale of them was heavy.

The general impression of the business done at Christmas this year is that it was as heavy as any year previous.

A Magnificent Ball.

Horticultural hall, the home of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, and which last summer was the headquarters of the convention of the Society of American Florists, was on the evening of December 26 the scene of probably the most brilliant ball ever given in Philadelphia. The host was James W. Paul, a member of the well known banking firm of Drexel & Co., and the ball was given in honor of his daughter, Miss Paul, and his niece, Miss Drexel. The entire responsibility for the decorations and furnishings was placed in the able hands of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, who have two retail stores in Philadelphia, one located in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, and the other at the corner of Twenty-second and Diamond streets.

On entering the first floor of Horticultural hall, the eye was at once attracted by a wealth of smilax and ferns, which tastefully adorned the marble balustrades on either side of the grand stairway. The lower hall itself was banked with palms, Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemums, pink roses and large bunches of Easter lilies. At the turn of the stairway the pillars were decked with pink azaleas, and everywhere in the lower hall and on the stairway miniature electric lights of various colors added to the picturesque scene.

On reaching the main ball room the eye was charmed by the great beauty of the picture. The color scheme, which was carried out in every detail, was pink. Along each side of the hall a raised promenade had been constructed, made to resemble white marble, and about three or four feet in height. This was an original idea of the decorators. Toward the front of the promenade were numerous small boxes, each seating four or five people, which could be used by those who did not desire to dance. This was a welcome innovation and was much appreciated. The front of the boxes was decorated with pink roses, lilies, and Lorraine begonias. Begonias were also seen in great profusion in every direction throughout the ball room, some in hanging baskets suspended from the ceiling, others in pots at various points. The crowning beauty of the decoration, however, was the huge bunches of the new pink rose, Wyndmoor, grown by Myers & Samtman, the well-known rose growers, whose houses are at Wyndmoor, a suburb of Philadelphia. This rose is of a most delicate pink, and the firm has been developing it for the last nine years. This is the first time that it has been used in any quantity in a decoration. It somewhat resembles the Bridesmaid and Killarney, but is richer in color than the former, and not as deep a pink as the latter. Great quantities of smilax and laurel were used in every direction, streamers from each window forming the roof of this attractive and unique garden. As in the hallway, small electric lights were used in profusion, and gave forth a soft glow. Another feature, entirely new, was having hundreds of butterflies which were released during the evening and which added to the effect. Fountains also had been installed, and by the use of electric lights the scented water from the fountains took on various hues. The musicians were on the stage at one end of the hall and were hidden by palms and other greens, while large candelabra, the lights shaded with pink shades, completed the effect. The table decorations were of pink roses, hyacinths and orchids.

Various Notes.

Robert Craig Co. reports a good business in plants for the holidays, such as poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens, azaleas and everything of a bright color. Green plants, such as palms and ferns, sold slowly.

Alphonse Pericat, the well known orchid grower, had a pretty novelty in cattleyas in fancy wooden baskets, which was much admired and sold remarkably well.

Edward Reid reports the holiday business as better than any year previous.

The first single daffodils and pussy willows were seen at the store of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.; the first sign of spring.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. say business for the last year was the largest in their experience. Their fancy baskets for Easter are arriving in great variety.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, and the Gude brothers were among the visitors seen in town.

The shipments out of town of natural cotton and boxwood sprays were exceptionally heavy.

Last year, with zero weather from one end of the week to the other, no end of trouble was caused, with freezing and later replacing the frozen goods.

That it was a good year no one can deny, for everybody was busy and, though cut stock was a trifle high, it went well. Trade opened a little slowly, but came fast at the end, and before the day was over we were all busy. The sale of mixed baskets was not up to the standard, for all had these left over. Poinsettias sold well, especially the pans running from $1.50 to $5. The cheaper plants were more in evidence, and they seemed to fit the occasion.

Cut flowers seemed to be as scarce as ever, with prices a trifle higher. Killarney and Richmond were the leaders in the rose line. The former rose, though pink, sold about as well as the red, while the other pinks were not so much in demand. Violets sold well at $3 and $3.50 per hundred.

Holly was the disappointment of the year. "Both scarce and poor" was the cry and the result was an advance in price. To add to this, the cases were lightly packed and short weight. A few of the shops gave up the attempt and sold boxwood and pine wreaths. Pine roping seemed to be losing favor to the laurel. All the big stores were using the laurel in preference to other greens.

Statice wreaths, which were such a big seller last year, did not take this year, for some reason or other.

R. A. S.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business last week was in a rushing state. The ideal weather we are having brought out large crowds of busy buyers and stock of all kinds sold well. The retail florists had a big week and some tried to close a half day on Christmas, but the trade still sought flowers up to a late hour. One of our new florists reports he had several extra wagons and hands making deliveries of flowers and had little Christmas for himself. The markets had a rushing trade and nearly sold out entirely. Christmas trees this year were a glut and thousands went to waste. The nursery trees sold only fairly well. Holly was scarce and was easy to dispose of. Mistletoe was plentiful and sold reasonably. Yarding and various decorating greens had a good demand. Wreaths of all kinds moved nicely. Roses were not so plentiful. Carnations were scarce, sold at a high figure and some growers sold their entire blooms in their houses, as the stock stood for 4 cents each. Paper White narcissi were plentiful and one grower had about 1,000 blooms that he said he would sell at 1 cent each to work them off.

There was quite a demand for funeral work and at present writing our city is in the clutches of the dreaded grippe and the disease has become epidemic here and the death rate is telling. The thermometer registered 72 degrees December 28.

Various Notes.

F. N. Powell, of Fullerton, has retired from the florists' business.

James Hamilton, Mount Washington, Md., had a fine house of carnations ready for Christmas and is still making extensive improvements.

J. Bartell, Radnor avenue, Govanstown, has erected a number of new houses and will improve his place.

N. Terry, Owings Mills, reports a heavy trade during the holiday week.

N. O. Strand reports trade at his new store in good condition.

R. L. Graham, Waverly, Md., had a fine collection of cyclamens, which found ready sale.

E. Holden, Catonsville, reports he had a large crop of Lorillard tomatoes and picked 1,000 pounds of the fruit, and he is growing a large quantity of lettuce and radish.

J. L. T.

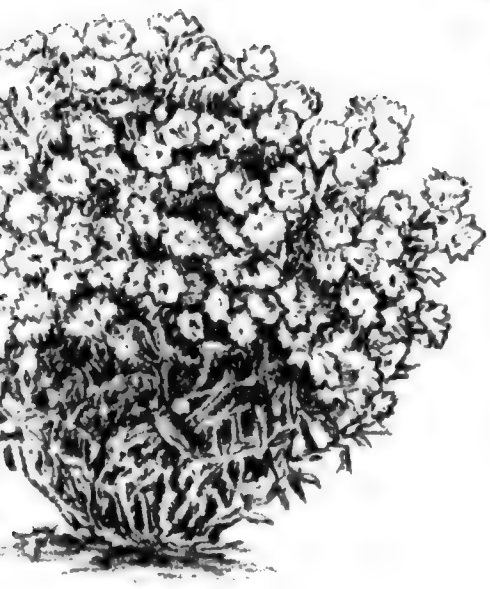
INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Christmas has come and gone and it proved to be a happy one for most florists, as the prices were higher than ever before and the business done was above the average. Both cut flowers and plants went like hot cakes. Poinsettias in any form sold at sight and late mums held their own. Christmas trees and greens seemed to be a little overdone. Toward the close of December 24, trees could be bought at your own price and there were lots to be hauled away the day after. Every street corner had its vendor and while the business done must have been immense, there was too much stock laid in. The stores did not decorate as much as usual.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. J. Baur spent Christmas at Richmond. While there Mr. Baur visited the various growers and all report a fine holiday trade.



Homer Wiegand is going after the rabbits, now that the rush is over. He believes in the strenuous life and makes things "git" wherever he is, rabbits included.

The next meeting of the City Florists' Club will be held at the South Side Turners' hall, January 8. A good social time will be had.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana will hold its annual meeting at the Commercial Club rooms, Wednesday, January 15, in the afternoon and evening. Parties concerned will please take notice of change in date. There will be the usual trade display and all members are requested to bring an exhibit of some kind. The election of officers will also take place in the afternoon. There will be a supper in the evening.

S.

PEKIN, ILL.—Holiday trade was fully up to last year. One of George A. Kuhl's specials was cutting Trumpet Majors on Christmas morning. Mr. Hansen, formerly with Long Island growers, now has charge of his roses.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

SOME varieties of sweet corn are being offered freely. Country Gentleman is not among them, however, and Evergreen only in small quantity.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has issued its market gardeners' price list. It has Evergreen corn at $5 per bushel and the early sorts at $4; Longfellow beans at $3.50; Gradus peas at $6; Red Wethersfield onion seed at $1.75 and the flat yellows at $1.50; globes at $2.00, except white at $4.

ONION sets for January shipment are being aired up and sorted at Chicago. The two months' storage has put a different appearance upon many of the lots. On the whole they are not keeping as well as the holders would wish. It looks now as though onion sets the coming spring will be high and scarce. The whites are shrinking badly and the yellows and reds are showing more of a shrink than any of the growers anticipated.

BEANS are still being received from the farmers at the different growing stations and the crop on the whole is satisfactory enough as to quantity. Many of the wax varieties are badly speckled from the dampness which was in the straw at the time of stacking. Considerable hand picking will have to be done to put these stocks into merchantable shape. This will add to the cost of the beans and, although there seems to be enough to make contract deliveries in full in most cases, it will nevertheless work a hardship on many of the growers when they do this at the low contract price.

JAMES VICK'S SONS

Rochester, N. Y.

The Leading Specialists and Largest Growers of High-Grade Asters in the World.

TWO NEW VARIETIES FOR 1908.

Vick's Imperial Sunrise

A novelty of extraordinary merit. Seedling from Vick's Daybreak, but distinct in form of flower, each petal being perfectly quilled. Color, delicate pink. Plant a robust grower, upright branches, each crowned with magnificent double flowers, three to five inches in diameter. Type securely fixed. Sure to be a winner. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each.

Vick's Early Branching

Developed from Vick's Late Branching. Flowers of this new variety can be placed on the market ten days ahead of Late Branching sorts. Plants have few branches which are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of large, perfectly double flowers. Long stems. Two colors, White and Rose. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each. For prices in quantity see our "Aster Book for Florists."

W. F. DREER, Philadelphia, passed through Chicago December 28, en route to California.

THE death of A. B. Howard, originator of the Star petunia, is recorded in the obituary column this week.

ONION seed is still too high to meet the view of the onion-set growers. It is hoped that they will come to see it differently soon.

ROGERS & Co., Leamington Spa, England, offer an onion competition open to all gardeners, with first premium of £100 and sixty other prizes.

NOTICE of the death of Alfred Plant, head of the Plant Seed Co., St. Louis, will be found in the obituary column this week. He was 87 years of age and had been in the seed trade over half a century.

SEEDSMEN will be interested in the outcome of a legal battle, reported in this issue of the REVIEW, whereby the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., has fixed upon the Cold Storage Co. responsibility for the loss of valley pips which started in the warehouse.

CARL SONDEREGGER made a hit with the people of Beatrice, Neb., when he opened a seed department as an adjunct to his nursery business, for one of their favorite themes is the amount of advertising he will do for Beatrice and the amount of business he will bring to the town. A. Luck, formerly of Des Moines, is in charge of the department. The catalogue will have 104 pages and 80,000 copies will be sent out.

THERE are few prize offers in the 1908 seed catalogues.

THERE is no equity in the average claim for damages because of a crop failure; for instance, in the latest lawsuit $3,600 was asked because seed for which $2.45 was paid failed to give the results expected. The two amounts are out of all proportion to each other.

THIS year it is found that the seed stocks of the market gardeners' quality all through the list are scarce. There will not be enough of them to go around. It is likely that when the first call has been met other stocks, which heretofore have not been classed as entirely suitable for market gardeners, will be given out and if the result is satisfactory a change of opinion regarding sources of supply for reliable market gardeners' quality may occur.

THE man who buys the cheapest seeds he can find is not infrequently the one who puts up the loudest "holler" when the results are not to his liking.

The privilege of mailing catalogues in bulk, without affixing stamps, will be taken advantage of by seedsmen more generally this season than in the past.

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says that there is absolutely no chance for a parcels post bill to get through at this session of Congress.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, have two new asters for 1908, a quilled variety called Imperial Sunrise and an early strain of their well-known Vick's Late Branching.

A British writer has counted up the sweet pea novelties for 1908 and finds that not less than four dozen so-called new sorts are to be introduced. Only three are from America.

Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago, will this season change the form of their seed catalogue, using a page rather larger than the standard size, instead of long and narrow, as in the first two editions.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has recently issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 313, "Harvesting and Storing Corn," by C. P. Hartley, physiologist in charge of corn investigations, which will be of interest to seedsmen.

The Burpee's Farm Annual for 1908 lists Prizetaker, Yellow Globe Danvers and Red Globe onions at $2.50 per pound; Southport Yellow Globe at $2.75 and White Globe at $4.50; Evergreen sweet corn at $1.75 per peck; Country Gentleman, $2.25.

John Clark and his family were suffocated in a fire at Watertown, Mass., December 26. Mr. Clark was a salesman for the H. E. Fiske Co., Boston, and had previously worked for Peter Henderson & Co., Joseph Breck & Son, T. J. Grey & Co. and W. W. Rawson & Co. An account of the tragedy appears in the obituary column this week.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending Dec. 21 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Anise	60	$ 589	Poppy ...	1,584	$15,538
Caraway ..	8	48	Rape	22	49

A BUSHEL OF CORN.

The laws of the majority of states recognize seventy pounds of ears as a bushel of corn. Some few states specify that previous to January a bushel of ears shall weigh seventy-two pounds. Almost without exception the state laws specify that fifty-six pounds of shelled corn shall constitute a legal bushel. Unless the strain of corn has exceedingly large cobs and short kernels the legal bushel of seventy pounds of ears will yield when shelled fifty-six pounds of grain, or the legal bushel of shelled corn. A struck bushel of kernels of different strains of corn will vary in weight from fifty to sixty-four pounds.

STORAGE COMPANY MUST PAY.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., will celebrate the present holiday season with a check for over $5,000 recovered through its attorneys, Hatch & Clute, of 100 Broadway, New York, in a suit which involved points of great importance to florists and cold storage men.

The decision in favor of the Roehrs Co. has just been unanimously affirmed on appeal by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York, and the substantial sum turned over by the storage house to make good the loss caused by the sprouting of the pips.

It appears, from the record on the appeal in the case, that in the winter of 1903-04, the Roehrs Co. received about a million lily of the valley pips from

NOVELTIES FOR 1908

Godetia Dwarf Compact

CRIMSON GLOW

(Our Own Raising.)

This splendid new Godetia will be eagerly sought after when once known. It forms a compact little bush about 9 inches in height, completely smothered with flowers of the most dazzling, intense crimson. A bed of this variety produces a vivid effect, the intensity of which it is impossible to describe. To be fully appreciated it must be seen growing.

The color of Crimson Glow is many shades deeper, more vivid and intense, and quite as compact in habit as Sunset, which we introduced three years ago.

$15.00 per 100 pkts. $2.00 per doz.
(25 cents retail.) (See Colored Plate.)

Eschscholtzia Erecta Compacta

DAINTY QUEEN

We have the greatest pleasure in being able to introduce this exquisite new color in Eschscholtzias. It is so delicate and striking that we are certain it will excite universal admiration, and become one of the greatest favorites of this charming race of our new improved compact Californian Poppies. It is almost impossible to adequately describe its soft and delicate shade of color.

The color is a tender blush or pale coral pink, slightly deeper toward the edges, with a groundwork of delicate cream, and like Intus Rosea, which we introduced in 1905, is quite the same color inside the flower as outside, so that the effect in color is the same when the flower is open as when closed, which is quite unusual in all other Eschscholtzias.

$15.00 per 100 pkts. $2.00 per doz.
(25 cents retail.) (See Colored Plate.)

PEA, THE PILOT (Re-selected)

We have no hesitation in saying that of all the Peas introduced for many years past, there has not been one to equal the PILOT in merit or usefulness. Unfortunately when this Pea was first introduced it was not perfectly fixed. However, even in its unfixed state it was considered the best early hardy Pea, but it showed too much variation. Ever since it was first brought out we have been carefully selecting it, and have at length succeeded in obtaining what we consider a really first-class stock, which we have now pleasure in offering.

We are quite sure that eventually this now re-selected variety will take the place of Bountiful and Ameer, as it is practically as early as Eclipse and as hardy, while it possesses a pod of the Gradus type.

We have but a limited quantity of this fine stock to dispose of. $18.00 per 100 lbs.

OUR RECENT NOVELTIES

selected and introduced by us during the last one or two years are certainly among the most fixed and distinct of any, and comprise, together with many others, the following EXTRA GOOD ONES:

Beet Early Model Red Globe, very early, perfect globe shape, very small top, and rich deep color.

Beet drooping crimson willow-leaved for ornamental bedding purposes only; about size and habit of Dactylis glomerata variegata grass, with which it contrasts well.

Alyssum maritimum compactum Little Dorrit forms a perfect little bush, with miniature white rocket flowers. A gem for bedding.

Chrysanthemum coronarium Tom Thumb Golden Gem; height 15 inches, very double, very free, very compact.

Chrysanthemum inodorum Snowball; very large, very double, very pure white flowers.

Eschscholtzia erecta compacta intus rosea; compact habit, intense rose or rosy carmine inside and outside of petals; we introduced this one year before Burbank's Crimson was put on the market.

Nasturtium (Tropaeolum) Queen of Tom Thumb. The elegant and distinct new race of variegated leaved sorts which we were the originators of and introduced in 1903. We have now a few more colors and a very fine mixture; also a tall section in grand mixtures, which we have named Tall Queen Hybrids.

Sweet Peas. In these we have introduced the last year or two some of the very finest large flowered varieties, and certainly the most fixed, viz.: Gladys Unwin, Phyllis Unwin, Evelyn Byatt; Nora Unwin, today the finest and purest white. Mrs. Alfred Watkins; Frank Dolby, the most fixed large flowered blue. E. J. Castle and A. J. Cook, a large flowered Mrs. Walter Wright.

Wallflower. Annual varieties in five distinct colors, all originated and selected in our own grounds.

For these and other Novelties see our Novelty List published last October. Free on application well known German growers. About half of the pips in question were used at Rutherford during the winter of 1903, and about the middle of March, 1904, the Roehrs Co. stored the remaining half million pips with the Manhattan Cold Storage Co., New York. The following summer the Roehrs Co. discovered that the pips, while in the storage warehouse, had sprouted and were growing. An investigation was at once made by lawyers who represent a number of local florists and who have given special attention to the legal rights of the trade in the matter of the very heavy losses which have been sustained through the careless storage of goods. As a result of this investigation a demand was made upon the storage company to reimburse the Roehrs Co. for the loss of the pips, and this demand brought about a test of the respective rights of the florist and the storage house, under the circumstances disclosed.

It was claimed, on behalf of the storage company, that its legal obligation was not to "preserve the goods," in the absence of a special agreement for a specific temperature, and that, as the Roehrs Co. could not establish what occurred in the storage warehouse, it could not recover.

It was also claimed that the condition of the goods at the time they were received from Europe, as well as their condition at the time they were stored, was in doubt, because not all of the boxes were examined at the greenhouses of the Roehrs Co.

So important were these points to the trade generally, that the Roehrs Co. determined to fight the case to the end, and at the trial many well-known florists and growers of lily of the valley appeared as witnesses. Attorneys for the Roehrs Co. succeeded in getting before the jury the temperature records of the storage company, which contained some damaging evidence in the way of temperatures which experts said were too high to preserve the pips. It was also shown that the goods of several other dealers stored there during the same period were found to have sprouted.

Expert storage men were brought from Philadelphia and other cities, who testified that the storage plant of the defendant was constructed according to the most modern plans and was equipped with approved refrigerating machinery; but there was strong evidence offered to establish some special carelessness and oversight on the part of the storage company, during the spring of the year in question. A sufficient rise in temperature was indicated to start the bulbs from their dormant state, and it was proved by the testimony of experts that when once the pips had sprouted, their growth could not be stopped or retarded without destroying them. The court ruled against the storage company on the point which was made by its lawyers, that all of the boxes of the goods should have been opened and examined by the florist before the goods were placed on storage. The court sustained the contention that only a reasonable examination, in ordinary course of business, is necessary. The jury gave judgment for the full value of the stock lost.

It is needless to say that the defendant storage company, and other companies in the same line, will take special notice of this case in the future conduct of their business, and it is also apparent that the decision will attract much attention from florists, who cannot fail to benefit largely by the protection which this decision affords them.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Christmas business turned out to be all that we hoped it would be, and then some. Of course there are reports here and there that the trade fell away short, but taking the reports as an average there can be no question but that the business done this year was well up with last year—which was a banner year—if it did not go it some points better. For one thing, there were more flowers this year than last, as a rule, and this alone would point to a larger business, for, with the exception of poinsettias, there was not a flower of any kind left over. So, taking everything into consideration, we can say that the business done this year was highly satisfactory from every point of view and the florists as a whole have good cause to rejoice in the fact that their business, even with the poorest of prospects, has made good and proved that it is being done on a good, sound basis; for even though there was a financial panic on, the people had to have their flowers for Christmas, as they have now become a necessity.

As stated above, the poinsettia was the only flower that did not sell out clean, and this was only because the wholesale men held the price right up to the top line. They considered the stock on hand to be good even after the Christmas business was over and would not lower the price to sell out. Roses and carnations sold out to the last flower and the prices have never been higher. The quality of the carnations was fine and the roses showed less salting than for many years, which is a good thing. Violets sold well and narcissi and Romans went out clean. Valley also did well.

Holly continued to be scarce throughout the week and when, December 24, it was seen that the wholesale price was not going to drop this year as it always had done before, owing to a surplus, the retailers doubled their prices and sold out at a handsome profit. Those who

THE FORDHOOK MUSK MELON.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, are this season to introduce a new musk melon, to which they have given the name Fordhook and which was originated in 1900 as a cross of Emerald Gem and the Improved Jennie Lind. It was raised by A. P. Owen, at Mickleton, N. J., who has agreed to sell seeds to no other seedsmen for a period of three years.

The Fordhook melon is the subject for a colored plate in the thirty-second edition of Burpee's Farm Annual and the way in which it is exploited is characteristic of the Burpee establishment. An extract from the novelty sheets of the Burpee catalogue will be of interest, not only as showing the character of the melon, but as indicating the selling talk which abounds throughout the Burpee book.

"The Fordhook melon resembles Improved Jennie Lind in form; it is equally roughly netted, while the skin, showing between the netting, is emerald green. The flesh is very thick, of an attractive deep salmon color and surpassingly sweet to the very rind. It is fully equal in flavor to Emerald Gem. Many who have been so fortunate as to taste the new Fordhook say that it is even better—'the most delicious of all melons.' The beautiful salmon flesh, while so surpassingly luscious, is not only very thick but also extremely solid. The rind, although thin, is unusually firm, so that the fruits carry well to market. There are no musk melons that are better shippers.

"The Fordhook melon is most vigorous in growth, very early and extremely prolific. The fruits are ready for market fully as early as the green fleshed Early Jennie Lind. The vines grow vigorously and each vine sets from five to nine melons immediately around the stem; frequently the fruits touch each other. The melons are remarkably even in size, weighing from a pound and a half to two pounds each. Fordhook is so 'thoroughbred' that there are practically no fruits unfit for market."

Certainly any melon grower would want to try Fordhook after reading that, and a lot more like it, but for fear it may be considered the description is only the word of the enthusiast, there is this paragraph:

"Twenty-seven years ago (in 1881) we first named and introduced Burpee's Netted Gem, now the most popular musk melon in cultivation and the variety that, under the market name of Rocky Ford, has made Colorado famous. Twenty-two years ago (in 1886) we introduced the celebrated Emerald Gem, which has been recognized ever since as the sweetest of all melons, the standard by which all others must be judged as to quality. Of our other introductions which have become standard varieties we would mention Bayview, Montreal, Champion Market, Golden Eagle and Burpee's Matchless. We have been equally successful in the introduction of water melons. The above record of musk melons, however, will suffice to show that we know melons."

BANCROFTVILLE.

The fame of Cedar Falls, in Iowa, rests upon the wide extent of the business of Joseph Bancroft & Son. At the date of the last census the count of noses showed Cedar Falls had 7,000 people. The annual pay roll at the Bancroft greenhouses is over $5,000, or almost a dollar apiece for every man, woman and child Uncle Sam found in the town at the date of his last count.

The business was established in 1876, thirty-two years ago, by Bishop & Bancroft, in connection with their nursery, but the greenhouse department was soon after purchased by Joseph Bancroft, whose son, George, is now the active manager of the business. The first greenhouse was 30x50 feet and it was not until 1892 that additional glass was erected. Since then new houses have been added almost yearly, until now practically half a city square is covered and the establishment is one of the largest and best equipped in Iowa.

Besides the local trade of the town, a general mail order business is done, covering practically every department of the trade and extending not only throughout Iowa but over adjoining states. A portion of the glass is devoted to the growing of cut flowers, but a large part is given to the production of plants for the catalogue trade. Besides wholesaling cut flowers and plants, the retail business includes the shipment of cut flowers and designs to adjoining towns and a general mail order catalogue business in plants and seeds. The spring catalogue for 1907 was an edition of 10,000, which will be somewhat increased for 1908, as the firm looks forward to one of the best seasons in its history. A fall bulb catalogue also is issued and at the Christmas season a large business is done in Christmas greens and Christmas supplies, such as bells, wreaths, etc.

The accompanying illustration shows the Bancroft establishment with the exception of two greenhouses, which are obscured by the dwelling. These two houses contain 4,000 feet of glass.

EVERETT, WASH. — The Broadway Floral Co. says that business has never been better than at present. The firm is planning to extend its glass area and expand its business in 1908.

FREEPORT, ILL.—Louis Bauscher says the Christmas trade was exceptionally good and gave no indication of any money shortage. But, he says, the florists are in need of these lively holiday seasons to spur them up after the lulls so often experienced.

TITUSVILLE, PA.—W. Bay says that Christmas business in this city was satisfactory. The volume of trade was larger, but the value less, than last year. There was an increase in the demand for cheap potted plants and absolutely no call for fancy price stock.

were fortunate enough to have good holly this year made a very good thing out of it.

It has been many years since we have had such warm weather during the holidays. It has been close to 50 degrees here every day, and scarcely low enough at night to freeze. While this is very bad on the flowers in the greenhouses, it was ideal weather in which to deliver goods. As a consequence the plant business has never been better. It was so easy to deliver them that the stores made extra effort to sell plants.

Various Notes.

The Carnation Society meeting at Washington, D. C., January 28 to 30, is now fast approaching and will soon be upon us. As we have several carnation enthusiasts in this city, Cincinnati ought to send a pretty good delegation. E. G. Gillett is laying his plans to go and of course Richard Witterstaetter will be on hand. A rate of one fare and a third has been made on the certificate plan. From all indications, this meeting will be the best ever this year.

A new park superintendent will likely be appointed this week. A new possibility for the position is Ben George. He was called before the new board of public service yesterday. Carl Schweitzer has also put in an application. J. W. Rodgers, the present superintendent, is not saying much, but has some hopes of holding the place. There are many, though, who would not be surprised to see B. P. Critchell, who held the position prior to Mr. Rodgers, get the appointment.

The Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar had three of the best decorations of the season during the last week. They were all elaborate affairs and the work was done in the high class manner for which this firm is noted.

On Christmas day Nick Weber held a reunion of his large family at his home. Some twenty members were present and all enjoyed the occasion greatly.

C. J. OHMER.

WEBB CITY, MO.—S. S. Brenneman says that Christmas trade was fine and everything was sold. The weather also was fine.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—P. R. Quinlan & Co. are operating two stores this season, one at 417 South Salina street and one at 133 East Washington street. The Christmas stock was especially strong on blooming plants and many baskets and hamper arrangements were sold. The Christmas trade was as good as ever.

BOSTON, Dec. 30.—The unseasonable warm weather the past week has hurt trade, which is rather quiet. Cucumbers, $5 to $7 box; tomatoes, 15c to 18c lb.; romaine, 75c doz.; escarolle, 75c doz.; lettuce, 25c to 40c box; mushrooms, 30c to 50c lb.; parsley, $1 to $1.50 box.

VEGETABLES AS A SIDE LINE.

There are probably no readers of the REVIEW who could be more benefited by reading the articles on vegetables indoors than the small growers who do a retail trade with at least a part of the stock grown. Such places we find in every city and in many small towns. We have met some growers who grow both flowers and vegetables and who make use of every foot of space in their houses at all times, but such places are seldom found, and more often the visitor will see empty benches and half filled houses, or houses partly or completely filled with worthless stock because there does not seem to be any need of the room at the moment. Such a condition is more likely to be noticed by the traveling salesman or the visitor than by the proprietor, because the one who is in charge often permits his houses to get into such shape gradually and unnoticed, with his mind intent on funeral work and retail sales, or planning on bedding stock, etc., for the coming spring; and before he is aware of it his place looks as if it was very much mismanaged.

Whether it is mismanagement or lack of knowledge, it would be well for us all to shake ourselves occasionally and look around. Perhaps some one else has been learning all the time we were dreaming. Suppose we go out and visit our competitors and others and see how they are doing; read the REVIEW carefully, and ask ourselves if after all it might not pay better to throw out a lot of rubbish and get something growing that will bring in some money.

It takes no more rent or interest, no more coal and little more expense to have the houses full, and full of something that will sell, than to be wasting fuel, time, etc., on half-filled houses or poor stock.

Vegetables as a side crop would actually double the profits on many greenhouse establishments, and it would be well for all growers to get posted on vegetable forcing and then get experience. How often we see the mum house standing with the last remnants of the crop hanging on the strings for weeks after it has ceased to pay for the fuel it takes to keep the frost out, when a fine crop of radishes or lettuce could be had in a few weeks if the grower had only looked ahead and planned what to put in as soon as he could possibly cut the last of the bench of blooms.

It takes only a little work to get a nice batch of lettuce plants up and transplanted into flats, or on a bench like young carnations, and have them just right when the house or bench will be ready to clean out. The soil could be manured and forked over and the plants all transplanted the second time in a day. Or radishes could be planted and in a month sold and cleaned up before the room is needed for the bulb stock or bedding plants which are being potted up, and toward spring, when the violets are about done, the room could all be used for something. G. H.

NORTH GERMANTOWN, N. Y.—H. W. Albrecht and S. W. Albrecht have started a violet house here.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—H. W. Koerner says that his business in 1907 was more than double what it was in 1906, and there is every indication of a further increase in 1908.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—The Pioneer Floral Co. has just completed an addition of 6,000 feet of glass, which will be devoted especially to the growing of carnations. Christmas trade here was brisk. Nearly every florist cleaned out at good prices.

WILTON JUNCTION, IA.—E. Friederichsen & Sons, whose houses include 12,000 square feet of glass, had an excellent business in flowering plants and cut flowers during the last year. Trade in vegetables, they say, has been a little slow the first part of this winter.

ADRIAN, MICH.

It is announced that on January 1 the old firm of Nathan Smith & Son passed out of existence, all its assets being taken over by the new firm of Elmer D. Smith & Co. As fast as Mr. Smith can close them out, several lines will be discontinued and in the future his attention will be given exclusively to chrysanthemums and growing asters for seeds.

FAIRMONT, W. VA.—E. M. Hall has moved into his new store, adjoining his former place.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—S. B. Stern & Co. say: "The future of the florists' business, and also, we think, of the nursery business, is very encouraging over the entire south. The country is developing with wonderful rapidity and people are growing rich enough to want the beautiful things of life as well as the useful. Wherever a love for the beautiful takes firm hold, there flowers will be sold."

The Christmas Trade.

Christmas has passed and gone and is now only a memory. From conversations with the retailers around town I find that business on the whole was almost up to that of last year. I must qualify this statement, however, and remark that the demand was for the cheaper grades of stock, and those florists catering especially to this class of trade had all the business they could handle.

There was quite a difference in this year's trade as compared with that of last season. The public generally were in quest of bargains and it was not until the last day that the buying public got reckless and to a certain extent bought almost everything in sight.

To begin with, December trade had been very dull and until the twentieth of the month the retailers had been buying very sparingly. The growers and wholesalers had been importuning the stores to fill up on everything grown, but with poor results. Growers of poinsettias, begonias, ferns and other Christmas stock began to think they were doomed to a quiet year, and prices were correspondingly lowered. About a week before that time, however, the buying public began to get busy and inquiries for stock were noticeable. The universal cry of hard times had its effect on the florists, as well as all the other lines of trade, and as a result the storemen commenced to buy very cautiously. But about Saturday, the weather being warm and bright and hordes of shoppers on the streets, the indications were that the holiday trade would be heavy and the retailers commenced to double and treble their orders to the growers. Monday witnessed the shops full to overflowing with everything in the flower line and the demand only fair. Late in the afternoon the crowds began to besiege the stores and, as I remarked before, the cheaper grades of stock were soon sold out. Then began a scramble to replenish for Tuesday and stock jumped up in value fully 100 per cent in a few hours. Growers that had anything pickled on hand reaped a harvest and it was impossible to satisfy the demand. With the possible exception of valley, cut poinsettias and Roman hyacinths, everything went skyward, and the retailers commenced to reap a harvest. The demand was principally for the cheaper classes of stock, and any dealer who could not get fancy Beauties had no difficulty in satisfying his customers with fancy carnations. For flowering plants poinsettias seemed to be all that was necessary to keep on hand to fill the wants of the buyers.

Palms sold poorly, but there was a great demand for Nephrolepis elegantissima and other potted ferns. Potted hyacinths and valley sold fairly well.

The Tuesday before Christmas was a record-breaker and the demand for all classes of stock was exceptionally heavy. Some of the dealers closed their doors early in the afternoon and put placards on the doors announcing that no more orders would be taken for delivery. The weather up to this time had been all that could be desired from a shopper's standpoint, but too cloudy to suit the growers. As a result, the cut of flowers just before Christmas was light and this greatly added to the troubles of the retailer. But little stock was delivered to the stores between Tuesday and Wednesday mornings and many orders went unfilled in consequence.

Violets, which were of slow sale until Tuesday evening, all of a sudden began to be among the most sought for flowers in the category and they were quickly cleaned up. On Wednesday morning some of the larger stores offered $2.50 per dozen bunches to the growers for an additional supply and, although this was twice the usual price, they were not forthcoming. There is such a close bond between the Italian violet growers and they have such a monopoly of the business that it was impossible to get them to deliver any more than the ordinary quantities, and the retailers lost many dollars on this item, as there were practically no violets in town on Wednesday and the demand was enormous.

Sales in general in San Francisco averaged about twenty-five per cent less than the sales of one year ago, but, as I stated before, the higher class stores felt the stringency of money more than the cheaper class of stores. A well-known jeweler remarked to me after Christmas that it was a frequent remark among his customers when they were inclined to send an article of jewelry as a present and felt that the price was more than they could afford, that "a nice fern in a pot or a bunch of flowers would make more show for the money." To this, in a great measure, is due the fact that Christmas of 1907 was to the florists of San Francisco one of the most satisfactory ever experienced.

Various Notes.

Miss Grace Roberts, of Piedmont avenue, Berkeley, reports several big decorations for the early winter and spring.

J. G. Hudson has returned from a trip to San Diego and Los Angeles.

The Whittlesey Floral Co., of Los Angeles, supplied many of the local florists with cut poinsettias for Christmas.

Chas. Stoppenbach reports a record breaking business for the holidays. The floral trade is apparently centering again in the neighborhood of Polk and Sutter streets.

James Skinner has returned to Portland, Ore.

The California Evergreen Co. handled over fifty tons of red berries and 1,000 bales of huckleberry during the holidays.

L. F. Bamber is in town for a few days. He is a well-known collector of moss and green goods. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.: Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester. N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE Chase Nursery, at Geneva, N. Y., has been incorporated with $6,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are George N. Chase, Thomas H. Chew and Lansing D. Hoskins.

ONE of the commendable practices of the German emperor when he goes a visiting is to plant memorial trees. On his recent visit to England he dotted that country with Cedrus Libani and C. Atlantica glauca, and oaks. The best trees of local nurseries were used.

HYBRID tea and tea roses are now planted outdoors in larger numbers than formerly, because there is a more widespread knowledge of their merits than was formerly the case. Hybrid perpetual roses are still popular and always will be, but rose plants that will go on giving flowers for a much longer time cannot fail to appeal to a class of flower lovers not so much in evidence years ago as today, and not nearly so much today as they will be a decade or so hence.

THE American gooseberry mildew has become so serious a pest in England, and has been the subject of so much agitation, that "the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, by virtue and in exercise of the powers vested in them under the Destructive Insects and Pests Acts, 1877 and 1907, do order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows: The landing in Great Britain of any gooseberry bush or currant bush brought from any place out of Great Britain is strictly prohibited" after January 31, 1908.

PLANTING FOR TIMBER.

The numerous inquiries and other evidence go far to prove that there is nowadays much earnest consideration given to the question of what is suitable, and in the future will be profitable, to plant on large areas for timber where hitherto very little if anything in the tree line has grown.

Of course almost everyone knows that every kind of tree will not succeed or even grow in any one locality. It stands to reason, then, that it has to be ascertained what kind or kinds thrive in the neighborhood, either after being planted by the hand of man or otherwise. That fact being established, the next move is to raise from seed in that same locality, or somewhere else where climatic conditions are much similar, trees of the kinds favorably disposed to the soil and climate where the planting is eventually intended to be made.

These remarks are, though perhaps in a somewhat less degree by reason of greater resources for protection and limited area, applicable to the planting of trees for ornamental purposes, on grounds surrounding private residences. The person who is planting on private grounds has the advantage usually of being allowed to plant nurse or protection trees at the same time those intended for permanency are planted.

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure gilt-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.
Strong established pot-grown plants, $9.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

NEW CARNATION DEFIANCE

Mr. W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.

Dear Sir:--I wish to congratulate you on your splendid red carnation, Defiance. I have for three seasons been using part of the cut at my two retail stores and it has made for me customers and money. Its keeping qualities are wonderful, its color pleasing and its form and fragrance are in keeping with its other good merits; its only drawback being the inability to secure enough blooms, as the local retailers all seem to want this particular variety.

Yours truly, GEORGE ASMUS.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

The day after Christmas found busy Mrs. E. Suder rushing out a big wedding order. She said she had not let up for a week, all hands working all day and into the night. Everything that was salable went at good prices.

Chas. A. Schramm says he has no kick coming. He was cleaned out of all flowering plants and wished he had more, as cut flowers hung fire at the high prices asked.

John Barrow was taking a siesta after a thirty-six-hour almost continuous pegging away. There was nothing left but a few fine poinsettias and these will be used up during the next few days in some good orders for decorations.

O. B. Wisner says he did the proper thing when he took the store he occupies in the Ohio building. Holiday business was all he could wish.

Geo. A. Heinl hardly knew where he stood until he had got straightened out after the rush. He had plenty of stock and good orders.

The Henry Phillips Seed Co. is getting in its usual supply of seed. Fall business was good and the firm sees no reason why spring demand will not come up to the most sanguine expectations.

Chas. Phillips, of the Perennial Gardens Co., says the firm has about five acres planted with excellent stock and looks for big business, as the demand for herbaceous and perennial plants is steadily increasing. W.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The Springfield Florists' Club was well represented at the meeting of the Commercial Club held on the evening of December 19, to which the florists had been specially invited. J. H. McFarland, of Harrisburg, Pa., was the principal speaker. The movement in behalf of civic improvement inaugurated at the November banquet of the Florists' Club has been taken up and is being energetically agitated by the Commercial Club, and will undoubtedly be forcibly presented to our new city council, which comes into power with the beginning of the new year. Grand New Double Daisy

A sport from that great money-making single variety, QUEEN ALEXANDRA, that everybody grows to a good profit. You can do better with this. The flowers are large, averaging three inches in diameter, and none of the flowers come single at any time of the year. It blooms freely, either under glass or outdoors. Young stock, out of 2¼-inch pots, ready for delivery January 1. $25.00 per 100.

CARNATION SARAH HILL, ACTUAL SIZE.

SARAH HILL

The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

Either variety at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

At the time of my visit to the Vesey establishment a big wagon-load of empty shipping boxes was being unloaded. "Our business was never better," remarked Mrs. Vesey, "and from the reports received from our customers, they all did well. In fact, the holiday season generally is ahead here of previous years."

Mrs. Vesey had just received an important communication from the secretary of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the S. A. F., Mrs. Maynard. This branch bids fair to become a strong supporter of the parent body. Very interesting subjects will be broached at the next convention and the male members of the craft will have to be on the qui vive not to be caught napping. Mrs. Vesey feels proud of the presidency and is working hard to add another century to the roll of membership before August next.

Miss C. B. Flick reports a most satisfactory business. Her large and beautiful store was completely filled and emptied several times around the holidays. The demand for flowering plants was very satisfactory.

Geo. Doswell & Son had a good business. Being at the cemetery, they do considerable decorating on graves and they notice a tendency toward permanent decoration, in the form of shrubbery.

Lanternier & Sons cleaned out all blooming stock. W.

WAUSAU, WIS.

Chris. Lund has just completed two fine greenhouses, which make a large addition to his already extensive institution on Grand avenue. Each house covers 25x100 feet. He has now 17,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Lund superintended the work himself and it has taken two months of his time. The new houses will be used this winter to raise vegetables. Next June American Beauty and other roses will be started in them. Besides this work, Mr. Lund has changed his heating throughout from hot water to steam.

Mr. Lund is the inventor and manufacturer of the Common-sense carnation support.

RICHMOND, IND.—G. R. Gause's Christmas business was a record breaker. The demand for carnations was very strong; roses sold well and there was an increasing call for flowering and foliage plants as compared with former years. Prices were as good as last year.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The sales of plants and flowers for Christmas were fully equal, in number and in the amount realized therefrom, to those of former occasions. Flowering plants of all the kinds were in far greater demand than foliage plants. Palms were especially hard to move. Ferns went much easier, but were in no way to be compared with Lorraine begonias, cyclamens and various other flowering plants. Poinsettias were on hand in goodly numbers and of fair quality. They sold readily at prices that in some cities would be considered good for much better stock. Ardisias were of much better quality, relatively, than poinsettias, but the latter were favorites. Primulas were, on the whole, the poorest lot of stuff ever seen here or perhaps anywhere else.

Roses were plentiful up to Christmas eve, when it was found that the demand for Beauties was in excess of the supply, and that at a good stiff price. Carnations were plentiful all along, but good holiday prices were maintained. All the other staples in cut flowers were in stock in large quantities, but little if any was left over.

The business was evenly distributed, perhaps more so than usual, with the result that everybody is fairly well satisfied with the outcome. R. R.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Callister-Smith Co. now conduct a business, under the name of The Flower Shop, at 462 West avenue.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Buffalo Cut Flower Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $25,000. The directors are John H. Gould, Louis H. Gould and George R. Sheldon, of Middleport, N. Y.

BRIDGEPORT, IND.—William Hack has returned from a visit which he paid to his son on board the United States warship New Jersey, in Hampton Roads, before the vessel started on its way to the Pacific Ocean along with the rest of the fleet.

Pelargonium Purity

Why not grow PELARGONIUM PURITY as an EASTER PLANT? They can be had in splendid shape. They are as easy to grow as a geranium, bloom early and continue blooming for two months; make dwarf, bushy plants as pretty as an azalea, and can be sold more readily because cheaper. We have a few thousand in fine shape, 3-inch stock which we offer at $1.50 per doz; $6.00 per 100. We also have other good varieties, such as Galatea, Countess of Crew, Gloriosa, Countess of Warwick, Tommy Dodd, etc., $1.50 per doz.; $6.00 per 100.

GERANIUMS

NEW VARIETIES—We will send a collection of one each of one hundred varieties 1905-6 introduction, for $10.00; fifty for $5.00.

STANDARD VARIETIES—We have an immense stock in fine shape, ready for immediate shipment, including the very best varieties:

WAYSIDE NOTES.

I found Chris Winterich, of Defiance, O., busy building a concrete bench. Its formation is as follows: It has ¾-inch piping for support, with crosspieces placed four feet apart. Upon a wooden frame and bottom a layer of sand is placed, just the height, or rather the depth, of the crosspiece. Upon this is placed a layer of newspaper, then 1-inch mesh poultry wire, three feet wide, upon which is placed the cement. When this is thoroughly dry, the wooden frame is taken away and you have a bench that will last for years. Judging by the amount of concrete being put in, both here and elsewhere, we are living in a concrete age. Here may be seen one of the largest stocks of cyclamen grown. By actual count there are 32,000 in seed boxes ready to transplant and 15,000 transplanted, so that there will be a few for next season. The sale was good this year. Stock was shipped to extreme points east and west.

W. Ullrich, of the Ullrich Floral Co., Tiffin, O., expressed himself as more than pleased with holiday business. There was a fine stock, which went well. Flowering plants took the lead. By making a big display just previous to the holidays, the firm seemed to get the people in the mood for buying.

E. R. Sackett, of the Fostoria Floral Co., Fostoria, O., says holiday business cleaned them out completely. They do quite a little shipping and it kept them guessing to satisfy their patrons both at home and abroad.

Charles Warncke, of Woodmere, Mich., had a heavy run on poinsettias and ferns. He made up combination baskets to order.

A. Steineke & Son, of Detroit, Mich., sold out of flowering plants and had a good run on palms and Boston ferns.

Robert Flowerday, of the Detroit Floral Co., says there is nothing to beat poinsettias and Lorraine for combination work. He had one order of fifty pans, to be made up on a rush for Christmas morning, but was equal to it. All their business is retail and kept everyone on the rush. I noted a pretty lot of small crotons and dracænas from the Robt. Craig Co. They made up handsomely and were not expensive. W.

The Season's Business.

Now that Christmas is over and we have had a few days for reflection, and also time for a little figuring, we are in a position to compare this season's business with that of other seasons. From general reports and personal observation, we think that from a point of net profits this year will surpass other years. One reason of this is that the quality of stock was better and there was not so much of it, and consequently business was done on a more profitable basis. When there are great quantities of stock shipped after the greater part of it has been held in vaults for a week or so, there is sure to be a great amount of waste, both to the wholesaler and retailer. This year we found little pickled stock on the market. The supply did not come near to the demand; especially was the shortage noticeable in white roses. In fact, roses of all kinds were scarce, and many of our retail men had nothing to offer the public after 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, with the probable exception of a few palms or azaleas. However, the quality was so uniformly good that those who received only half their order were able to handle that half to good advantage. Plants sold extremely well. This made a big run on mats and baskets for plant decoration. It is, in fact, noticeable that plants are becoming more popular every year. It is not a long stretch of memory to the time when Toronto was known as "the great cut flower city of Canada," while today plants are taking their place along with the cut flowers.

Miller & Son, Bracondale, had a magnificent cut of Richmond roses, which were without exception the best on the market. George Allen, Toronto Junction, had a splendid cut of Beauties, Killarney roses and carnations. H. L. Janzen, Berlin, sent in some very fine violets.

It might be mentioned that this is the first season that the retailers cleaned up all kinds of bulbous stock. In fact, I do not think that there was a retailer in Toronto who had any cut stock left over. D. J.

MILWAUKEE.

Christmas Trade.

Trade for Christmas was somewhat spasmodic. Buyers hesitated about placing advance orders, causing stock to accumulate pretty heavily on Monday, but at the last minute buyers came in strong on Tuesday and the market was pretty well cleaned up. Red, as usual, was scarce and brought top prices in both roses and carnations. Enchantress were more numerous than ever and took a slight slump, but sales will average up pretty well on them. White stock was plentiful in all lines. Romans, Paper Whites, valley, lilies and stevia were plentiful enough to meet all demands. Violets were also plentiful and sold below the average of former years. In plants, poinsettias in pans, about three bracts to a pot, sold well and none were left over. Good azaleas and cyclamens were short of demand. There was an abundance of primroses, primulas, peppers and mignonette. The retailers report a good business. Taking it all in all, this Christmas will balance up favorably with former years. C. C. P.

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN MICHIGAN.

Please inform me as to the proper method of piping a greenhouse 20x60 feet, with hot water. The house is exposed on three sides. The height from floor to ridge is ten feet four inches. The walls consist of sixteen inches of glass and two feet of concrete. My idea is to use fifteen lines of 2-inch pipe. Three feeders, connecting with a 3-inch pipe from the boiler, would run to the farther end of the building and there drop into twelve returns, which would gradually slope back and connect with a 3-inch pipe leading into the boiler. The bottom of the boiler is four feet below the greenhouse floor. If the foregoing plan is correct, should manifolds be used or return bends? Should the returns run directly under the benches or at the sides? Should the benches be placed first or should pipes be laid and benches built over them? F. D.

The house in question should be maintained at 65 to 70 degrees by using a single 3-inch flow from the boiler directly to the far end of the house, where it should divide to feed ten 2-inch returns, connected by manifolds and not return bends. At the end near the boiler the returns should be collected by manifolds and lead into a 3-inch return back to the boiler. It will be more convenient and economical to do the piping before the benches are constructed. L. C. C.

STEAM WITHOUT NIGHT MAN.

Will you kindly tell me if it would be advisable to run a low pressure steam system without a night man, with natural gas as fuel? It seems to me that by putting a regulator on the gas at the boiler, a good safety valve on the boiler, and thermostats in the houses, I could go to bed and sleep without dreaming of being blown up or frozen out. I have at present about 3,500 feet of glass and am adding some each year, and would like to change to steam if I can do it safely without keeping a night man. L. C. B.

By the use of automatic valves on the gas main, to be controlled by the boiler pressure or by thermostats in the houses, both or either of which is perfectly practicable, you should be able to maintain almost ideal conditions in the greenhouses by means of steam installation. It will be wise to install an alarm thermometer, to give a signal in case anything should happen to throw the gas off or on too heavily during the night. This is simply a precautionary measure and not an absolute necessity. L. C. C.

PIPING IN NORTH DAKOTA.

I should like to know if a 24x42 Wilks hot water boiler would be large enough to heat my two greenhouses and residence. The greenhouses are built end to end, and run east and west, with the residence at the east end. The east house, which is protected on the east by the residence, is 20x31 and nine feet to the ridge. The side walls are four feet high, triple boarded, with two feet of glass in the south side. The required temperature is 60 degrees. The west house is 20x32, and requires a temperature of 50 degrees; the other dimensions and the construction are alike in the two houses. There is glass between the two houses and in the west end. In the residence we heat only three rooms, one 16x16 and the other two 8x16 each. The outside temperature is often 20 degrees below zero, and sometimes 30 degrees below for a short time. Would a Kroeschell boiler, No. 1, be altogether too large for this work? A. D. S.

The house to be carried at 60 degrees should have sixteen 2-inch pipes installed in it. The house to be heated to 50 degrees, which is more exposed, should have fifteen 2-inch pipes. If an independent flow is carried from the boiler to each house and to the dwelling, a 2-inch pipe will serve in each case. If all are to be carried on one riser, then a 3-inch pipe will be necessary up to the second greenhouse, beyond which a 2-inch pipe can be carried. An independent flow to each is preferable, however. The 24x42 boiler is just about large enough, when working at its highest rated capacity, to heat the two greenhouses, without the dwelling. It would be wise to get a larger boiler, one rated to carry at least 1,000 feet of radiation.

THREE CONNECTED HOUSES.

It is our intention in the spring to erect a range of three connected greenhouses, each 28½x100 feet, running north and south, with a potting-shed and engine-room, fourteen feet wide, all along the north end. The side walls will be four feet and a half high, with double thick boards. The houses will measure twelve feet to the ridge. They are to be used for the growing of carnations and pot plants. In this New Jersey climate, how many runs of steam pipes will be required to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees? The engine room is at the northwest corner.

Where would be a good place to arrange a propagating bench of about 800 square feet? A. J. B.

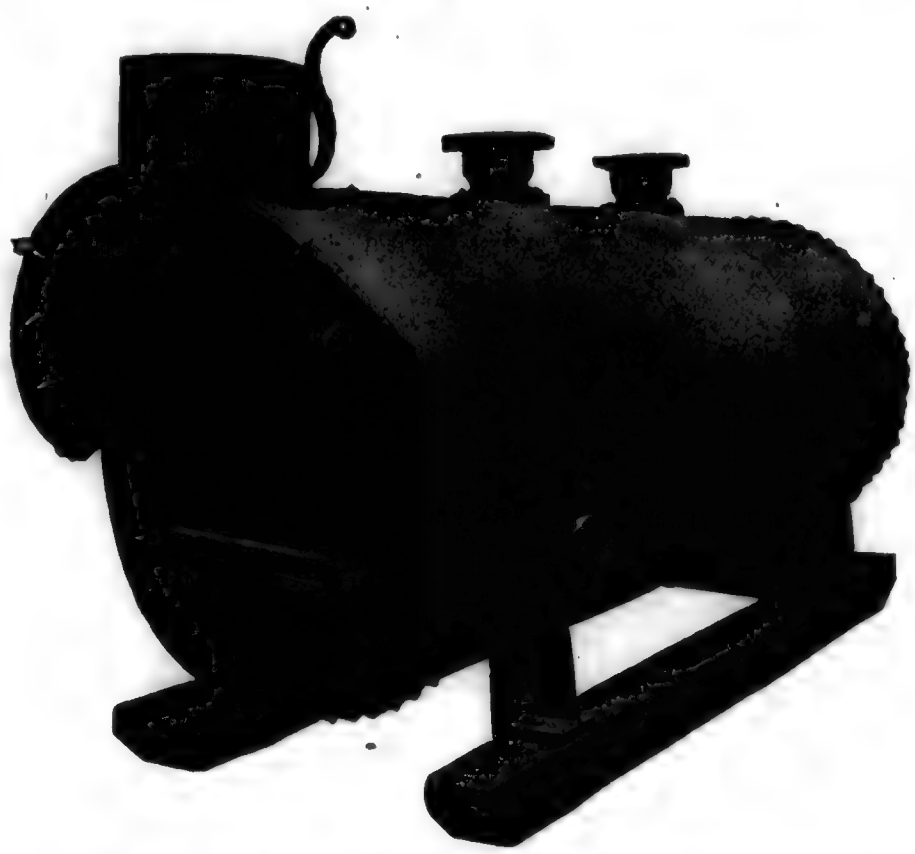
Each house can be piped by using a 3-inch flow under the ridge and sixteen 1¼-inch pipes or returns arranged along the side walls or under the benches, according to the amount of bottom heat desired in the houses.

A lean-to house built along the north wall of the potting shed would make a very satisfactory propagating house. If space in the other houses is to be used, I see little preference except as regards convenience, in which event I should choose a portion of a side bench near the potting shed. L. C. C.

ST. PAUL.

"The best ever" is the way everyone in the trade speaks of the Christmas trade. Weather conditions for ten days preceding Christmas were ideal and that alone accounts for the big trade. Stocks on the whole were good and enough for demands, except that more red roses and red carnations could have been sold.

In the plant line well grown poinsettias sold at sight. Palms and ferns were in good demand. Cyclamen were in favor and Lorraine begonias also sold well, as did azaleas, primroses and other blooming stock. In cut flowers the only item that lagged was Beauties and while there was a demand for them the leading stores had left over stocks of them.



In the green line, holly was of indifferent quality and in short supply. All the dealers were cleaned out of it early. Bouquet green wreathing sold well and was plentiful.

An abundance of funeral work since Christmas has kept stocks normal.

NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans seems to be coming in line with other cities for old Saxon customs, judging from the observance of Christmas, which is now different from what it was a few years ago. Christmas greens and holly have been sold in large quantity all over the streets and the florists have disposed of all the flowers they had on hand.

James A. Newsham says he had a big rush.

M. Cook & Son never did so well. They managed to have a large specimen plant of rhododendron in full bloom. It was certainly a great curiosity for this time of the year and they were well paid for it.

The hail storm December 22 passed over only a part of the city, but did considerable damage to a few florists. The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. loss will amount to $1,000. J. A. Newsham will have about 600 panes of glass to renew. M. M. de Lapouyade's place was touched to the amount of 100 glasses.

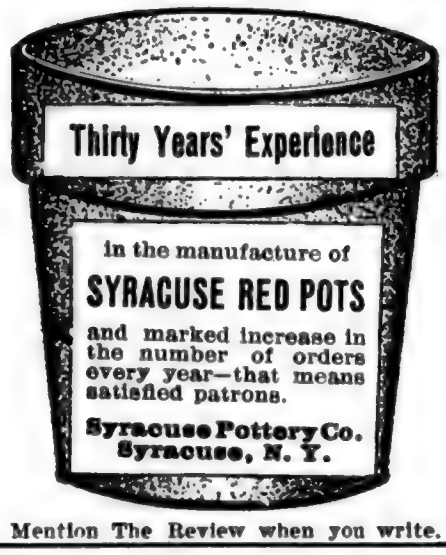
MANCHESTER, MASS.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its regular meeting December 20, with President McGregor in the chair. A. E. Parsons, gardener to E. S. Grew, read a paper on carnations, covering the subject in a very able manner. Commencing with the propagating bench and the cutting, Mr. Parsons took his audience through the successive stages of the growth of the plant until he turned out the finished flower. He referred briefly to watering, ventilating, feeding and the various diseases and insect enemies which menace the existence of the plant and which the successful grower must overcome. Mr. Parsons well merited the vote of thanks which the society extended to him for his paper.

James Salter followed Mr. Parsons with a few extempore remarks on the same subject. Both men produce first-class blooms, though they differ in their treatment of the growing plants. Mr. Parsons plants his young stock out in the garden or field, and plants out in the benches about August 1 to 15, while Mr. Salter plants his young stock in boxes until well rooted and transplants from the boxes to the flowering bench about May 1. The results in both cases are first-class blooms. There is a reason for Mr. Salter's treatment and its name is stem-rot; if the two gentlemen should exchange locations and soils, they would also exchange ideas.

Mr. Parsons had on exhibition a vase each of Beacon, Enchantress and Lady Bountiful, for which the society awarded him a certificate of merit.



At the next meeting, January 3, 1908, the officers for the ensuing year will be elected. W. T.

GALESBURG, ILL.—I. L. Pillsbury, proprietor of the Galesburg Greenhouses, says that Christmas trade was very satisfactory, but the supply of cheap plants, and of carnations, roses and violets, was not sufficient to meet the demand.

FUNERAL WORK.

Wreath of Magnolia Leaves.

When it is desired to make a wreath of magnolia leaves the leaves should all face in one direction, or, rather, in two directions. An empire shape of frame makes the nicest magnolia wreath, in my estimation. To make one of this style, moss the frame up quite high, especially at the large part of the frame; then begin with small leaves at the smallest part of the frame, fastening the leaves to the moss with fern pins. You can use the broken up leaves for this purpose, as they serve but as a background. Now wire up a lot of leaves to toothpicks and commence at the small end of the wreath, as before. Stick the leaves quite close to the moss, and work toward the wide part of the frame, using larger leaves as you proceed. The leaves should be placed close together, so as to give the effect of a wreath hewn out of stone. Spread out as you work along, making the piece larger and larger. Both sides should be made in the same way, leaving a fair-sized place for the flowers at the large end; here the leaves should, of course, cover the moss, as in the galax wreath.

The flowers on a wreath of this kind should, of course, be of a rich kind. Valley, orchids, roses or some of the finer flowers should be used; otherwise you cheapen the appearance of the leaves. Arrange the flowers in a cluster, using some suitable green between. Several cycas leaves also go well with magnolia leaves.

In the magnolia wreath in the illustration shown December 26, with the first of these notes, the leaves were arranged as in the foregoing description. Four cycas leaves were used. The arrangement of the valley, orchids and lilies you can see for yourself. The large bow of ribbon is of the orchid shade.

Formal Wreaths.

Another and decidedly different style of wreath is one which has about two-thirds of its surface made solidly of white, either carnations, or asters, or small mums, etc. In filling the frame, give the moss a rounding shape; this will aid you in securing a nice, round, solid effect. The balance of the piece can be made up in many ways. A loose bunch of flowers, laid diagonally across the one side of the wreath and tied with a bow, makes a very pretty piece.

Many Styles of Wreaths.

Of course, there are numerous other ways of making wreaths; so many, in fact, that they are almost beyond description.

For instance, a large wreath of all lilies gives a very rich effect. Or a large wreath may be made up loosely of, say, one-third roses, one-third carnations and the balance of lilies, orchids, valley, etc. The whole should be fastened to an easel, as is the wreath in the illustration, and tied with a bow with long streamers. In a wreath of this style I would have the roses and carnations slanting a little downward or toward the center of the lowest part of the frame.

Easels or Stands.

The question as to the placing of the wreath on an easel or stand, of course, depends to a large extent on how the customer desires it to be. Some wreaths look out of place on an easel or stand, as, for instance, a small wreath of violets or lily of the valley; in fact, any small wreath is better lying flat. A large wreath, on the other hand, never shows up to as good advantage as when placed on an easel. In many cases where wreaths are ordered by the family or a near relative of the deceased, the customer wants them lying flat.

The Use of Ribbons.

The matter of ribbons on wreaths also depends largely on the wishes of the purchaser. In many instances a bow greatly improves the piece, as in a large wreath on an easel or a wreath of all galax or magnolia.

There is much more that could be told about the subject of this article, but as there really would be no limit to the discussion, we will leave the rest to the artistic taste and imagination of the designer.

HUGO SCHROETER.

FUNERAL WORK IN CALIFORNIA.

The craving of the public for something novel and different from the usual forms is manifest in the line of funeral designs, as well as in other things. The people of California take kindly to a few innovations that have originated with the San Francisco florists and there is always a demand for something out of the ordinary. For the last few seasons the so-called Oregon grape, or Mahonia Aquifolium, has been largely used in funeral designs, either as a solid mass or for trimming, in place of smilax or some other green. This beautiful shrub attains its best condition after it has been touched by the frost and its color changes to a rich, glossy brown and green. It is very graceful and is easy to handle. It is very lasting and makes a beautiful design when worked in this way. A few minutes will suffice to make a large design and it has helped many a florist to cover up a good quantity of moss when flowers were very scarce. It has to a great extent taken the place of galax leaves in California and is a much more durable and graceful article.

Galax leaves are apparently not used as much this season as formerly, but they are yet much in evidence, especially in the cheaper classes of work. Green ivy leaves have been practically superseded by them, as they are easier to keep on hand in a good condition and are a much more glossy color.

Laurel leaves are occasionally seen. The variety used is the well-known Laurus cerasus. Magnolia grandiflora leaves are used sometimes in the same way, but not to any great extent. Wreaths of wild huckleberry are made sometimes, but it is a rather stiff proposition to break up to advantage and much of it has to be wasted before a sufficient quantity can be had to provide graceful stems.

Maidenhair wreaths are still much used. Either solid or with a bunch of carnations on the side, they make a beautiful design. The finer sorts of maidenhair can be used to advantage, but they are not good keepers and are only of value for immediate effect.

There has been quite a run on violet designs. The Princess of Wales is the only variety used, and for a great portion of the season it is by far the cheapest article in the cut flower line for the florist to use. With a sprinkling of ferns and violet leaves a very acceptable design can be made at a very slight cost.

Orchids in combination with ferns and asparagus make very acceptable high-class wreaths, but unfortunately our supply of orchid blooms is very short on the Pacific coast and all the dealers complain that they are afraid to recommend them very highly to their customers, as the chances are not always good of being able to secure the stock after it has been ordered.

The Pacific coast is young yet in the flower growing industries, and probably before many years there will be enough orchids and other expensive stock grown to supply the demand. G.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Hampers of Flowering Plants.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a rough wicker hamper filled with flowering plants by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. The hamper is filled with daisies, hydrangeas, genistas, pansies and daffodils, a variety of color most pleasing in the early springtime.

A Hamper of Spring Flowers.

J. E. JENSEN.

If there is any officer of a trade organization as important as the president it is the financial secretary, for, while the interest taken in the society's affairs is largely dependent upon the personality of the leader in the chair, the man who collects the coin is the one who provides the means of club activity; his tact has much to do with the maintenance of the membership list among those who do not attend the meetings.

J. E. Jensen.

J. E. Jensen will be the next financial secretary of the Chicago Florists' Club. He is popular and widely known in the trade and his selection for this important office was a happy choice of the nominating committee. Mr. Jensen was born in Viborg, Denmark, August 23, 1878. At 14 he entered upon a four years' apprenticeship embracing all branches of horticulture, after which he started out to see a little of the world. After a short experience in Germany he landed in London and spent a few months each in a number of the leading establishments, arriving at New York March 17, 1899. His first employment in this country was with Hugo Book, Worcester, Mass.

After a brief time he decided to make carnation growing a specialty, and secured a position with Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., where he remained for nearly two years and a half, making such good progress in the art that the last year and a half was spent in the capacity of foreman. This was at the time Enchantress was disseminated, and Mr. Jensen went west to enter the employ of the Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, of which establishment he was in full charge for almost three years, leaving there February 1, 1905. After a trip to the Pacific coast Mr. Jensen formed his present partnership with J. S. Dekema, as Jensen & Dekema, growing carnations exclusively. Mr. Dekema has been on the Pacific coast for his health for some months, so that the whole responsibility for the firm's success rests with Mr. Jensen. He is a member of the American Carnation Society, the Society of American Florists, is a Mason and an Elk.

MARGUERITES FOR EASTER.

Can Queen Alexandra daisies, which are in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots now, be had in bloom for Easter, say in 5-inch or 6-inch pots? H. C. O.

Queen Alexandra marguerites, if shifted into 5-inch pots now, grown along carefully and given a further shift into 7-inch pots later, will make excellent plants and be in good season for Easter. These can be grown in a comparatively cool house. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night is sufficient. C. W.

NAME OF BEGONIA.

I send by this mail leaves of a begonia for name. It has pink flowers and grows twelve to eighteen inches high. I think it is a scarce variety. Is it a good or valuable commercial variety?

S. J. G.

As nearly as I can tell, the leaves are those of Begonia Gloire de Sceaux, a rather scarce variety in America. It is well spoken of as a winter bloomer in Europe and promises to become a useful commercial sort here. I do not believe it will compare with B. Gloire de Lorraine or even B. incarnata as a Christmas variety, as its blooming period is a little later; still, it is well worthy of a good trial. C. W.

LIQUID FEEDING.

From now on during the remainder of the season, where the plants are in a vigorous condition and the benches full of roots, stimulants in a liquid form can be used with great benefit.

For this purpose there is nothing better and safer than fresh cow manure from well fed stock, as this contains nearly all the elements necessary to plant life, and in the proper proportions, and possesses few of those caustic properties so prevalent in chemical preparations.

To prepare this properly, the manure should be placed in a tank with sufficient water added to cause speedy fermentation. After fermentation, the liquid should be drained off into another tank and water added to reduce it to the required strength. The first applications should always be weak. After applications can be made gradually stronger without incurring much danger.

The correct time to apply this is when the young wood is from three to five inches long and it should be continued at least every alternate week until the buds are well developed, and should be discontinued when the buds show color.

As liquid food is so quickly and easily assimilated, great care should be exercised regarding its strength, especially where any chemical preparations are added. The use of ammonia and nitrate of soda at certain stages of growth is very beneficial, but being powerful and immediate in their effect they should be used with great caution.

During dark weather it is safer to refrain from strong and frequent feeding.

RIBES.

VARIETIES IN SAME HOUSE.

I expect to grow in the same house next year, for retail trade, Bride, Maid, Chatenay, Killarney, Richmond and Rhea Reid roses. After benching, should the different varieties receive different treatment as to feeding, pruning, etc., and if so, in what respects? My Killarneys this year drop their bottom leaves badly.

F. D. B.

Brides, Bridesmaids, Chatenay and Richmond do well at the same temperature and with the same kind of treatment. Killarney has done better with me, and with many others, at a temperature of 60 degrees and can stand a lot of feeding. As Rhea Reid is a new rose and has never been under my care, I can say little about it. Being of the Beauty type and of a good constitution, it ought to succeed at a temperature of 58 degrees. Whether it requires feeding or not, will be a question of the future.

RIBES.

PROPAGATING COCHET ROSES.

What is the proper method of propagating Cochet roses? I tried two batches in sand in September and October, with no success.

J. P. K.

Cochet roses, when grown outside, should have an abundance of half-ripened wood in August and September, which will root readily if the proper conditions are complied with.

Prepare a frame with the lower side at least ten inches deep. Place six inches of clean sand in it; this must be six inches deep after being made firm enough to receive the cuttings. The cuttings should be inserted at least two inches and a half in the sand. Water thoroughly and shade with some light material for three or four weeks. Some growers are very successful with only lath shades as protectors. Water and syringe very sparingly.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Spring Exhibition.

The comments received by the secretary of the American Rose Society from the life members of the society who have received their certificates, show that these handsome parchments are highly appreciated.

The Chicago exhibition of the American Rose Society will open on the fourth Wednesday in Lent, that is, March 25, and will run three days.

The Chicago Florists' Club advises that the show will be held at Marshall Field's or at the Auditorium.

The Rose Society has the schedule of prizes about ready for mailing. In Division F, the special prizes are thrown open for support from all Americans who have a good word or wish for roses.

There will be some fine papers offered at the annual meeting.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

ENGLAND'S ROSE SOCIETY.

It will be of interest to note that during the last year the National Rose Society of Great Britain gained 575 members and that the total membership is now 2,484, having increased from 880 since 1902. The income and expenditures were practically $10,000 in 1907. Arrangements for 1908 include three exhibitions, two in July and one in September. One of the July shows is to be at Manchester and the others in London.

WILLISTON, N. D.—M. Bartholomew is building two houses, each 20x75, to be ready for the spring trade. He also intends to put in a complete line of nursery stock. The prospects for the coming season are good.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Begonia Incarnata.

Many commercial growers do not grow Begonia incarnata and probably not a few have never seen it. While it will never equal Gloire de Lorraine in popularity, it is nevertheless a splendid variety, erect and more robust in habit than Lorraine, but equally floriferous, the flowers being a trifle paler in color, a beautiful soft pink shade. This begonia is hardly at its best for Christmas, but for decorative effects in January and February it is hard to beat. There is a much improved form of B. incarnata, which we believe originated near Boston. The flowers in this case are double the size of those in the old type. This begonia is much more easily propagated than Lorraine. After the flowering season has passed, prune back the plants, which will soon send up a crop of fleshy shoots. These will root readily in bottom heat. Potted off and grown along, they will make bushy stock in 6-inch pots for winter flowering. Some pinching will be necessary to keep the plants shapely. This begonia grows well stood outdoors during July and August, being, in fact, benefited by such treatment. It is a plant well worthy the increased attention of florists.

Begonia Rex.

There is a fair call for plants of those handsome, ornamental-leaved begonias, the Rex section. They make good house plants and have the advantage of being almost free from insect pests. Now is a good time to increase the stock of the best selling varieties. Propagation is very simple and the merest novice can hardly fail in rooting Rex begonias. Cut well matured leaves in pieces an inch square, discarding the thin outer edges as being least likely to root. Set these on edge close together, as you would carnations, in a brisk bottom heat. Give a good soaking of water; afterward water more sparingly until the little plants appear, when more moisture can be afforded. Place in 2½-inch pots of leaf-mold and sand, and keep in a warm, moist house until established, after which somewhat cooler quarters will be suitable. If a propagating bed is not at liberty, you can root Rex begonias by merely laying the old leaves on a layer of moss below the benches in a warm house. Make a few cuts in the leaves and you will get plenty of young plants. These begonias are very useful for planting outdoors in summer under trees, where flowering plants fail, and are also quite effective in piazza or window boxes where there is but little sunshine.

Lorraine Begonias.

It is time to make a start with the propagation of that most popular of all winter-flowering begonias, Lorraine. Probably you have sold the major portion of your best plants, and sales from now onward will be more limited. Leaf cuttings must be depended upon now, as it will be some time before the plants have suitable cuttings. Our experience has been that stock propagated from leaves gives more vigorous plants, carrying heavier foliage and larger flowers, but the latter are produced less densely on the plants, which is a decided advantage, the great objection made by many to Lorraine begonias being that they carry too many flowers in proportion to the foliage. A propagating bench where a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees can be maintained, with a slightly lower atmospheric reading, will be very suitable. The sand should not be too fine, or it may prove hardly porous enough, with a consequent loss from damping of the leaves. Add some fine charcoal to sand inclined to be too close. It will sweeten it and give it porosity. Select strong leaves and leave an inch or more of the stem attached. Let the leaves merely touch the sand. Avoid an oversupply of water, to prevent decaying of the leaves, and in from four to six weeks little plants should make their appearance, several on the best leaves. These can be potted off singly and kept growing in a close, warm atmosphere.

Fuchsias.

It is pleasing to note the coming again of those old-time favorites, the fuchsias. Rarely now do we see the specimens which some of the old practitioners used to pride themselves in growing. In Europe they are not infrequently striking features at the summer shows. In the west of England plants eight to ten feet high are sometimes exhibited. Our hot summers make it difficult to produce such plants here and, as the flowering period is shorter, the general plan is to root cuttings each year, carry a few over for stock and discard the balance. Plants which have been kept somewhat dry in a cool house, if brought into moderate warmth—55 degrees at night is sufficiently high—will soon produce a crop of strong cuttings, which, if rooted in sand, potted and grown along, will make nice plants for Memorial day trade. Fuchsias work in very nicely for filling vases, standing in moderate shade. They also make excellent plants for window boxes. They may be had in bloom over a long period by pinching the shoots and removing all flower buds until a week or two before they are wanted in bloom.

Heliotropes.

That popular, sweet-scented plant, the heliotrope, is always in good demand. As a bedding plant it is hard to beat, being always in bloom, and neither dry weather nor excess of moisture seems to affect it in the least. A good batch of cuttings should be gotten in now. None will fail to root in a warm house, if well watered. These, when potted off, will soon yield a further lot of shoots for propagating purposes and it will be found easy to get an ample stock in readiness for spring sales.

Verbenas.

If you have carried over a number of verbenas for propagating purposes, they will now give you a good crop of suitable cuttings. Get these into a propagating bed without delay. It may seem early to root verbenas, but these little plants can themselves furnish considerable additional cuttings before long. Do not grow them in a warm house; 50 degrees at night is quite high enough. Many growers do not trouble themselves with cuttings at all, preferring seedlings. As separate shades of color can be had from all reliable seed firms, this is really the better method of propagation. Buy the best quality seed and sow a good batch of it sometime during the month of January.

Geraniums.

The little geraniums are now growing fast and will require more space almost every week. Any still remaining in sand should be potted at once. Do not water too freely the plants which have been newly potted, and be sure to have the foliage dry at night, to prevent damping off. Continue to take cuttings from any old stock plants you have. They will root very easily just now, while firing is heavy and before there are any wide fluctuations in temperature.

Cyclamens.

Seedlings of cyclamens potted off when advised a few weeks ago will now be rooting nicely in their receptacles. Keep the surface soil stirred and let the little plants have the fullest light. If you fumigate the houses once a week, there will be no probability of aphis or any other pests troubling them. Plants coming along for late winter or early spring flowering must be grown cool; 45 degrees at night is ample. The sun is not yet powerful enough to be harmful and therefore no shade is necessary. Manure water once a week will now be found very beneficial. An occasional dose of soot water will keep the foliage up to the mark and help to add intensity to the flowers.

Foliage Plants.

Take advantage of wintry weather, when other work is not so pressing, to overhaul these and clean the foliage thoroughly. This is especially beneficial to palms, which should never be allowed to have dirty leaves. Ficus, pandanus, crotons, dracænas and other fine foliaged subjects will all be greatly improved by a sponging over. Little or no shade will be necessary for any of these plants during the present month. Use the sprayer on all bright days, to keep insect pests in check.

Edwin A. Seidewitz.

Washington Court House, O.—Poole & Purliant, who sold out their establishment at Bellefontaine, O., to R. S. McMurray, have decided to start in business at this place.

Kearney, Neb.—The Green Seed & Plant Co. has just completed two carnation houses, each 12x80, and a new office, 12x24. In the spring the firm will rebuild, with cement, three houses, each 12x80. The benches, also, will be of cement construction. Christmas trade was good and everything was cleaned up. Prospects are good for spring trade.

THE BALTIMORE EXCHANGE.

One of the most successful of the many efforts made by growers to place the marketing of their product on a coöperative basis is that made by the growers in the vicinity of Baltimore. It was in 1890 that the Baltimore Florists' Exchange was incorporated and it has therefore entered upon its eighteenth year, which places it among the most venerable of these florists' organizations.

Business was begun on Liberty street, Baltimore, in a small basement, which later was abandoned for a location across the way, where a street floor was available. For a time the market was located on Park avenue and later, when larger quarters again were in need, the exchange was removed to Eutaw street. After the several removals, when greater facilities once more became necessary the management concluded that the best thing to do was to erect a suitable building and one which should anticipate the needs of the future. The plan finally bore fruit last year in the erection of the building shown in the pictures on pages 8 and 9, which was put up at a cost of $30,000. It is paid for and the corporation on a dividend basis.

While the business has grown steadily throughout the life of the exchange, the increase in the last few years was particularly rapid and since occupying its new building a still greater increase has been noted. A large number of both growers and retailers in the Baltimore district are stockholders and in addition to providing ample facilities for handling the business in cut flowers, plants and supplies, a hall was provided for the use of the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club in the second story. The pictures show the salesroom. The basement contains a storage vault 20x33 and there is a cool room of half this size on the main floor for cut flowers.

The officers of the corporation are: President, E. A. Seidewitz; vice-president, F. C. Bauer; treasurer, W. G. Lehr; secretary, C. E. Akehurst; directors, I. H. Moss, William Feast, J. M. Rider; manager, John J. Perry.

Nearly all these officials are well known to the trade, the president of the corporation having been mayor of Annapolis, Md., where his greenhouses and nursery are located. He has a retail flower store at 323 North Charles street in Baltimore, and is in addition one of Baltimore's enthusiastic bowlers, so he is identified with practically every branch of trade activity. Manager Perry, upon whom much of the success of the exchange depends, has devoted all his time to its interests for many years, and is capable of holding up his end in any company of wholesalers.

THRIPS ON BEDDING PLANTS.

Please advise me as to the best remedy for thrips on bedding plants, what to use to get rid of them and how to use it. My house is 18x100 feet. F. T.

Fumigation with tobacco smoke is the sovereign remedy for thrips. If they have secured a good foothold on your plants I would advise fumigating on alternate days for a week, not giving too strong doses. This should clean the pests out pretty well, but it will be necessary to give fumigations once a week or you will soon be in trouble again. Diluted tobacco extracts used through a force pump are effective and in the case of a batch of badly affected plants it may be well to adopt this remedy. Fir tree oil, seal oil and whale oil soap may all be used for the same purpose. Clear water from the hose applied through a spray nozzle is also one of the best preventives of thrips. Attend to the fumigations, ply the hose freely among your plants during favorable weather and avoid a dry atmosphere and thrips will soon cease troubling you. C. W.

COMPETITION, FAIR AND FOUL.

[A paper by S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club January 7, 1908.]

Competition, it is claimed, is the life of trade, and so perhaps it is, providing, of course, that the "live and let live" principle is not lost sight of.

It is an axiomatic truth, and we are beginning to realize it, to some extent at least, that success in its broader sense hinges not upon the failure of others but upon the general welfare and prosperity of the community.

The idea that one man's failure constitutes another man's success, or vice versa, as we have been led to believe by those whose vision is circumscribed by the ramifications of their pocketbooks, has long since been relegated, in theory at least, to the rubbish heap of similar fallacies, having no foundation in fact. The infamous financier, for example, who attempted to corner the gold market and succeeded in plunging the country into a panic, was no more of a success in life than the savage in the jungle who strangles his antagonist in order to possess himself of a few brass trinkets. Both are dismal failures, notwithstanding the apparent ascendency of might over right.

The progressive business man of today is inclined to take a broader and more rational view of business conditions and business opportunities. It begins to dawn upon him that the fundamental principle underlying the success of any enterprise, great or small, must first of all be sound in itself, else no enterprise can possibly endure.

Power of Public Opinion.

Go where one may and look where we choose, the signs of the times point clearly to a general awakening of public conscience, to a general revival of that spirit of justice which, since times immemorial and throughout the whole range of history, both ancient and modern, was never known to fail in its struggle for a worthy cause.

The Standard Oil Co., well-nigh a kingdom and a law unto itself; the tobacco trust, the beef trust, and many another corporation of questionable repute, whose colossal fortunes were amassed at the expense of an indifferent and patient people, and who defied public opinion and strangled competition by means that were foul and methods that were adverse to the public welfare—all these are called to account at last. Their day of reckoning seems to have come. A mighty avalanche of public opprobrium, which has been gathering momentum for some time, bids fair to sweep down and hurl itself upon the heads of the malefactors with a force that will be crushing in its effect. "Fair play" and "a square deal" seem to be the cry of the hour.

We seem to realize at last that the "corrupt man of business," to quote President Roosevelt, "is as great a foe to the country as the corrupt politician." We hear it also from the pulpit, at the bankers' banquet table, in the corner grocery store.

We seem to realize that the time has come to call a halt to iniquities, that God Almighty had never intended to concentrate all the privileges and all the opportunities in the hands of the few, that the world is broad enough for all willing to try their chances in it.

The Reign of Selfishness.

It is claimed—and not without good reason, perhaps—that the wave of materialism which has swept our country is gradually expending its force and that the succeeding generation will witness a complete transformation in our ideals and in our moral make-up. Be that as it may, the fact is patent that our tendencies and aspirations are still steeped in the mire of greed, that we still resemble our brothers in the jungle, one arrayed against the other, the strong preying upon the weak, the mighty crushing the small fry.

That green monster, Jealousy, prompted by the inexorable dictator, the Almighty Dollar, not only rules amid us, but it rules us with an iron rod which, at times, and to many of us, is well-nigh unbearable.

"Peace on earth and good will toward men" is a beautiful injunction, having the right ring to it—in church, but nowhere else. In our daily intercourse with our fellow men, some of us think, we cannot possibly be governed by such obsolete rules. "Business is business" bears a more practical sound to our ears. It is our favorite slogan and, in our estimation, it is broad and powerful enough to cover up a multitude of sins.

It is not my object, however, to deal in platitudes, nor do I wish to assume the role of the preacher, whose business it is to exhort his audience.

Fair and Foul Contrasted.

The subject I have chosen for my paper need not necessarily take me into a labyrinth of figures and data in order to prove that two multiplied by two make four. Nor need I depart far from my course in quest of examples in order to illustrate the striking contrast between the methods of fair and those of foul competition. Examples of both are at our very doors. We behold the one with a feeling of satisfaction and we become inspired with confidence in our fellow man; the sight of the other fills us with disgust and suspicion.

Fair competition courts the light of day. Having nothing to fear and nothing to conceal, it stands upon a pedestal of its own creation, firm and indestructible, in full view of an exacting multitude. It is eager to prove and to convince, striving to achieve its success not by the circuitous way of fraud and deception, but by the straighter path of honorable means and honest business methods. Fair competition believes in the "live and let live" principle. Having learned that lesson in its own school of experience, it is eager to promulgate its truth to the world at large, fearing no detriment to its own interests, no ill results to its own pocketbook. It is like an open book, accessible to all wishing to peruse its pages.

Merit Wins in the End.

Fair competition goes into the open market, firmly convinced that merit must and will win in the end, that success, if it is to be permanent, must rest not upon the quicksand of uncertainty, but upon the bed rock of stability.

It makes no rash promises; it shuns reckless statements; it abhors falsifications and adulterations of all sorts, ever aiming to improve rather than to cheapen quality, ever striving to win and to hold public confidence, without which success is impossible.

Fair competition does not cringe, does not fawn and does not sham, such despicable methods being foreign to its business policy. Nor does it concern itself with the affairs of its rivals for the purpose of ascertaining their methods in order to underbid and to undersell them.

If John sees fit to peddle his 4-inch geraniums at 60 cents or 75 cents per dozen, heralding that fact for months in advance in the "locals," with a view to cornering the geranium market and incidentally putting his rival out of business, it is John's own affair, of course. Fair competition does not attempt to follow his methods, much less to "go him one better," knowing full well that such prices do not cover the cost of production, let alone a living profit, and realizing that by attempting to corner the market John will inevitably get into a tight corner himself. And the final result generally confirms this opinion.

A Fundamental Principle.

Fair competition has mapped out its own way of doing things and it follows its own business methods. It reasons thus: The principle that the cost of production, plus the cost of marketing the product, plus a legitimate profit, equals the price to the consumer, is clearly defined and based upon strict business lines, and any deviation from this straight business course, either one way or the other, must inevitably result either in a loss of confidence and custom, if the quality of the product be cheapened, or in financial ruin to the concern itself if quality be maintained at the expense of its legitimate profit.

A sense of propriety deters me from citing examples of concerns that have gone to the wall because of such reasons, and other concerns that are heading that way by leaps and bounds.

Having arrived at this logical conclusion, fair competition becomes conscious of its own impregnable position. It has cast its anchor, as it were, in the harbor of safety, never fearing the assaults and calumnies of the numerous cheap Johns who would fain see a tidal wave engulf their successful competitor.

I doubt if any of the gentlemen present here will take exception to my assertion that foul competition is a curse to the business world.

The Bait of Cheapness.

Being utterly devoid of business principles or any other sort of principles, foul competition works on the assumption that there are fools—a plenty—eager to swallow the tempting bait, hook and all, called "Cheap."

Cheap! The very word has a sinister meaning if considered in its proper light. Cheap bulbs, like cheap clothes, yield but cheap results. Cheap plants come dear in the end. A cheap design, a floral monstrosity at so many nickels or dimes per foot, is a veritable sore to the eye, as well as an insult to the dead, and so all along the line.

Foul competition does not end here, however. There is a type of it which is so low and degraded, so vile and treacherous, that the wonder is how any respectable and self-respecting business man can tolerate the moral stench of its very presence. Conceived in iniquity and fostered in an atmosphere of fraud and corruption, unscrupulous, morally distorted, suave and cunning, foul competition has but one object in view and that to attain its ignoble end, regardless of means.

In its anxiety to grasp everything within sight, it is by no means content with the "purse" only, which the greatest poet of all times characterizes as "trash" and the slave of thousands. It goes a step or two farther, considering it good business tactics to reflect upon the name and the honor and to attack the reputation of a rival in business. It never occurs to these fellows that "he who steals my purse steals trash, but he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him and makes me poor indeed."

New Building of the Baltimore Florists' Exchange.

Salesroom of the Florists' Exchange at Baltimore, Md.

Defaming a Competitor.

Honor and justice are empty sounds to their ears, and business ethics are an unknown quantity to them. They will not at all hesitate to tell you that the design or the decoration put up by Mr. Brown is not worth half the price paid for it, that the work is poor and that Mr. Brown is a foxy fellow anyway, one who will bear watching. On the road they will make it their business to sling dirt in every direction, in the hope of striking some competitor or other, leaving a trail of moral filth behind them which, to the fair-minded man, is nauseating in the extreme.

They will pick up a plant of a rival concern and will pass judgment upon it there and then. In their estimation it is a very poor specimen indeed, the price paid for it being most unreasonable, of course.

New varieties of carnations lend themselves especially to attacks and to "knock-out blows," and these are often dealt without mercy. "Don't touch it," you will hear them say; "it is a cropper, it has a weak constitution, it makes a measly growth, the calyx bursts, the blooms are ragged, the stem is short, and you had better leave it alone," and all this assault without having the faintest idea of the true merit or faults of the variety in question.

Some Ghoulish Work.

If it be a batch of lily bulbs going or gone to the bad, as often happens, here is a splendid opportunity to put in their ghoulish work. As a matter of course, they say, the concern that supplied these bulbs is to be blamed for the poor results. The concern in question, they will tell you, is a back number anyway and is losing prestige and ground every day. In fact, there are all sorts of rumors. Has not somebody told him of somebody somewhere in Missouri or Connecticut who had a similar experience with lily bulbs bought of this very unreliable concern? In fact, Mr. So and So had the same trouble during the past few seasons, "but now that he has our bulbs, you ought to see his lilies—perfect peaches and no mistake."

To be sure, men of this ilk soon show their true colors and, like all scamps, they will sooner or later defeat their own ends. Nevertheless, the mischief they create has, for the time being at least, a demoralizing effect upon an otherwise good business situation.

How to discourage such abominable practices and counteract such pernicious influences upon the trade is indeed a vital problem, which is well worth our serious consideration. If it be true, as somebody has aptly put it, that "no shady transaction can stand the limelight of publicity," it may be worthy of our effort to turn on that light in its full force.

Says Dr. Torrey, the evangelist, "A business man who says that every other business man is dishonest or a liar is a liar and a thief himself."

An evil that affects us all alike must not be ignored. A sneak at random, to say the least, is a troublesome creature.

CHEER UP.

The Richmond (Ind.) Item January 4 was a "Cheer Up" number and contained expressions of opinion from a large number of local concerns as to the outlook for 1908. The E. G. Hill Co. said:

"We believe that 1908 will be another prosperous year. In October we were a badly frightened firm; we saw little opportunity for materially curtailing our expenses without serious results, for a greenhouse plant cannot be shut down like a factory; fires and water and wages must go on, or the loss will be total; our collections stopped as short as if we had had no ledger accounts; as our only means of retrenchment we cut our time to eight hours. Early in November collections suddenly came back to normal, orders for spring delivery came in, an unusual number of interesting inquiries were received for quotations, cut flowers brought good prices in the wholesale market, and we at once went back not only to the ten-hour day, but considerable overtime, and were able to pay all current bills, greatly to our relief.

"The local cut flower trade has not had the full volume of 1905 and 1906, which we attribute largely to the number of workmen who have been laid off during the past months, but this has been fully offset by our wholesale returns.

"The administration has been severely criticised in many quarters for bringing on the panic, but in our opinion Secretary Taft's splendid exposition of the causes, effects, and his warrant of faith in a prosperous future, will do much toward setting the public mind squarely right and at ease again.

"Using our best judgment, after carefully going over conditions, both local and general, we believe that the financial storm is past and that we have fair sailing ahead for 1908."

G. R. Gause said: "The year 1907 has been a prosperous one, and I am confident that 1908 will be equally good if not better than the one just past. The demand for flowers is steadily on the increase, and I can see no reason for any other than a bright future for business."

The Advance Co. said: "We have had a remarkably good run of business the past year—at times taxing our ability to take care of the same. Although this is the dull season in our principal line of business, orders continue to drop in at frequent intervals, thus showing an optimistic feeling on the part of our customers. It is rather early, and at the same time too close to the holidays to say much as to the future. Our trade begins to figure in earnest and to order when the spring weather begins to swell the buds, etc. We anticipate a good trade for the year 1908, judging from the amount of inquiries, etc. Our collections have been very good and we have not seen any material difference in the last three or four months over that of previous years covering the same time."

Salesroom of the Florists' Exchange at Baltimore, Md.

LOCATION OF GREENHOUSES.

Would you kindly submit the following query to be answered by someone of experience, whose judgment can be relied upon? We contemplate enlarging our plant, situated on town lots where the front street runs northwest to southeast. We already have one house parallel with the street and two houses adjoining this one at right angles. We propose widening an 18-foot house, running northeast and southwest, to twenty-three feet, and continuing it seventy-five feet beyond its present length. This can be done with comparatively little expense in the changing of our heating apparatus and would be uniform with all streets and other buildings.

It has been suggested that we build a house of like dimensions (upon the same town lots) running straight north and south, and install an independent heating plant. The question is, would the development of plants in the house running north and south be enough better to warrant the necessary expense and general appearance of disorder? May we suggest that the above be answered, not by builders of greenhouses or makers of boilers, but by someone experienced in plant growing? K. C.

I fail to see any particular advantage in running the proposed house north and south. This is not the aspect chosen by the majority of practical plantsmen, east and west being almost invariably selected. The location of a house a little to the east of the south is perhaps the best possible one, for in such a case the morning sun strikes it more directly. Weather reports prove that we have more sunshine in the morning than in the afternoon, taking the year through.

I would certainly carry out your own proposed plan. Such a house would, in my opinion, be fully as good as the other one recommended, for general plant culture. The considerable additional outlay for the north and south house, and the fact that the aspect is not at all an ideal one, combine to condemn it, to say nothing of the element of disorder. C. W.

BUGS IN GLADIOLUS BULBS.

What remedy is there for mealy bugs in gladiolus bulbs? W. H.

We never have been troubled with mealy bugs among gladiolus bulbs. We have, however, been troubled with black aphis and these we have successfully fought and driven out by burning sulphur. I should judge the same remedy would be equally effective with the mealy bugs. Arthur Cowee.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Propagating.

During the next two months we will have the best weather for propagating and, in fact, there are several reasons why this is the best time to do this most important work. Atmospheric conditions are such that you can readily control heat, light and moisture, and if these are kept under control, there should be no trouble in striking practically a hundred per cent of the cuttings. From now on, too, the days begin to lengthen and the plants take on more vigor, and there can be no doubt as to a cutting being better if taken from a plant which is gaining in vigor than if taken from one which is losing in vigor.

If you propagate only for your own use, you can choose your own time for putting in the cuttings of such varieties as you have plenty of stock of, and you must be governed somewhat by your own local conditions and your methods of culture in order to get the very best results. In fact, this holds good in all things. If your local conditions differ somewhat from your neighbors', you must modify your course to suit those conditions. Indeed, you cannot follow any man's advice or recommendations to the letter, unless he is on the ground and thoroughly familiar with the case in hand.

There is no doubt that for the carnation specialist, who endeavors to grow his stock to the very highest perfection, early cuttings taken from the sand during February and even January are the best. But for the grower of a general line of stock, who will not take time to repot his young carnations in March when he is rushed with other work, cuttings taken from the sand early in March will prove most satisfactory. Such cuttings can be potted into 2½-inch pots and left until planted in the field in May. These will, of course, not make good-sized plants for July planting in the house, but this class of growers usually do not house carnations until August. The one thing to be borne in mind is that a young carnation, after it is once rooted, should be continually kept on a steady move. Large, soft growth is to be avoided strictly. Sturdy, well matured young plants transplant best and you will always find that the plant which suffers the least in transplanting will make the greatest gains later.

Selecting the Cuttings.

I have often preached cutting selection, etc., and I will say again that if the selection of cuttings were done more critically many varieties would stay in commerce longer than they do. No doubt the rooted cutting men are largely at fault here, but as long as the trade insists on buying carnation cuttings as cheap as they are frequently offered, nothing very choice need be expected. If choice stock is wanted, a fair price must be paid for it. You will usually find the two go together.

When selecting your own cuttings, there is all the more reason why you should select them well. There is no doubt but that the young shoots which spring from the lower part of the flower stem are the best. On some varieties they will be below where you cut the stem in gathering the blooms, while other varieties will make one to three good cuttings above that point. Avoid all cuttings which have much of a stem between the lowest leaves and the flower stem. They never make good, strong plants. These growths may appear before or after the bloom is cut and may be taken off any time they are in proper condition.

Avoid all diseased plants. If a plant shows disease, every shoot is likely to be tainted, even though it may not show any traces. If your stock is diseased, discard it, and procure healthy stock from someone whose stock is clean.

Select your cuttings of a uniform average size, avoiding abnormally large cuttings as well as the small, weak ones. A uniform lot of plants will be the result. If you cannot get as many cuttings that are right, in one batch, then take a second or third batch later. Do not make the mistake of putting into the sand a lot of soft shoots, which have no energy stored up within themselves. A week or ten days longer on the plants will make first-class cuttings of them.

Take no cuttings from the plants when the soil is very dry and the plants look wilted. The same holds good when the sun is shining strongly during midday. Take your cuttings in the morning of clear days, or on cloudy days. With proper foresight this can be managed very well. Cuttings taken from plants which have been highly fed will not root as satisfactorily as those taken from plants which have been growing on a moderate diet.

Inserting the Cuttings.

After the cuttings are taken from the plants they should be gotten into the sand as speedily as possible. While they are being prepared they should be kept cool and moist at all times. In preparing the cuttings, make a clean cut at the bottom and remove entirely from the stem all those short leaves which would sink below the surface of the sand. Cut back only the longest lower blades and leave all the upper blades intact.

The sand in your propagating bench should be about three inches deep after it is packed firmly. Set the cuttings into the sand about an inch deep and press the sand along each row after it is filled. Set the cuttings about three to every two inches and set the rows about an inch and a half to two inches apart. These distances may be modified according to the size of the cuttings, but they are a good average. Water in well after you have a number of rows set, and never allow the sand to become dry thereafter. Further instructions will follow in my next. A. F. J. BAUR.

A MODEL CARNATION PLANT.

Those who have an interest in carnation growing find it well worth their while, when visiting Chicago, to make the trip to a point two miles north of Wheaton, Ill., to see the model carnation growing establishment of E. T. Wanzer. Here are six houses, ridge and furrow plan, each 23x200, erected two years ago by William Reitmeier, of material supplied by the A. Dietsch Co. The heating is hot water supplied by a Kroeschell boiler, the pipes all being on the floor of the greenhouses.

Mr. Wanzer spent a number of years on the Chicago Board of Trade and went into carnation growing because of his interest in the work. He selected an ideal spot on a farm where the soil is the deep, rich, prairie loam and put up a thoroughly well built establishment, but without any frills. He then turned the work of carnation growing over to R. Scheffler and became that efficient grower's first assistant. The quality of the stock turned out from the beginning was an evidence that the needs of the carnation are thoroughly understood and provided for.

The range houses 35,000 plants, Lawson being grown in largest quantity, but with Enchantress a close second. Lawson occupies two houses and Enchantress one and one-half houses. Victory occupies a whole house and the remaining house and one-half provides space for Winsor, Aristocrat, White Lawson and Boston Market. Each of the varieties is in excellent shape and there is no sign about the place of any of the diseases the carnation is heir to. But the visitor invariably is first impressed with the splendid color in Lawson. It is much brighter than usually seen and Mr. Scheffler says it is due to the soil, which is a rather light, black, friable loam, quite different from that in use in many places around Chicago where good carnations are grown.

Winsor is well liked, but fault is found with the keeping qualities of Aristocrat, which Mr. Scheffler says has such hard wood that it does not draw up water with the freedom of the more fleshy-stemmed varieties. He thinks Winsor can be grown with profit by anyone who can make money on Lawson, but Victory is his especial favorite. The first season this was grown it was full of rust and obtained a poor start, but in the end gave a fair account of itself. This year it has done splendidly, there being no special difference in the plants which were benched early and those which were housed late in August. Mr. Scheffler says it will establish itself and give a cut of good quality quicker than any other variety of which he knows. Another point is that it gives a steady cut, the shoots being in all stages of growth—but this is a characteristic of all the varieties in the Wanzer place. They cut 1,500 Victory flowers December 22 and realized over 10 cents each for them. It pays them better than any other sort on the place and next year they will plant 10,000 of it. Mr. Wanzer says he has visited practically all the carnation growers around Chicago this season and has seen no place where either Craig or Beacon was good enough to compete with Victory.

While Enchantress is doing well with Mr. Wanzer, as with practically every grower, he is of the opinion that the variety is overdone and he will grow less of it next year. Part of the space will be given to White Enchantress, of which he already has some fine stock from John Reitmeier, brother of the man who built the greenhouses.

Visitors are interested in Mr. Scheffler's method of propagating. He uses about half sand and half soil and roots his cuttings with little moisture. Over the cutting bed he erects a frame of lath and wire on which he spreads newspapers for shade and says the cuttings get much better attention through the daily removal of the shade than where it is accomplished by simply winding up a long sheet; every spot in the bench comes directly under the propagator's eye. That his method is an excellent one is shown by the fact that no stronger lot of cuttings could be found anywhere than those now about ready for potting and to make room for which a fine bench of Enchantress has had to be thrown out. This year Mr. Wanzer is propagating more heavily than last year, it being his intention to make a specialty of rooted cuttings as soon as he can establish a reputation for his stock.

The store room for blooms is worth a moment's consideration. It has been fitted up with galvanized iron tanks for hardening the flowers. The tanks are deep enough to let the stems in almost up to the flower and are provided with racks dividing each tank into small squares for each handful of blooms. The tanks are emptied by merely pulling a plug as in a bathtub and are filled by opening a faucet, so that fresh water can always be had. Here the flowers stay twelve hours, before packing for shipment to the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, which has sold every flower the place has turned out, except a few which are retailed from the greenhouses.

Mr. Scheffler makes good use of every bit of space in the greenhouses. He has just finished cutting a crop of fine stevia grown in the walks and he has a box of sweet peas at each end of each bench. Chrysanthemums are grown as a catch crop in the propagating house and in the field there is a plantation of peonies. Gladioli will be added this season and it is expected they will do better than the 100,000 asters picked did last year, although asters still will be grown. Geraniums also are propagated for wholesaling as well as for retail trade.

CLYDE CARNATION HOUSES.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the carnation growing establishment of the Clyde Floral Co., at Clyde, Ohio, a few miles east of Bellevue. The range was built by Arlin & Arlin, but the business is now conducted under the former name. There are four houses 21x100, erected of material furnished by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago. The up-to-date varieties of carnations are grown and the season thus far has been an excellent one.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

THE present quotations on greenhouse glass are the lowest in many years.

SEND your 1908 catalogue to the REVIEW and see that the REVIEW is on your mailing list to receive your printed matter regularly.

CORRESPONDENTS will add greatly to the value and accuracy of their reports if they will state the day of the month on which an event occurred, instead of referring, as many do, to "last Monday" and leaving it open to question which Monday was meant.

REFERRING to the note on the hail storm at New Orleans in a recent issue of the REVIEW, John G. Esler says: "If Harry Papworth had heeded the teachings of the Good Book, and 'held fast to that which is good,' the Florists' Hail Association would have reimbursed the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. for its loss by hail."

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Directors Appointed.

As announced in last week's REVIEW, President Traendly on January 1 appointed John Young and George Asmus to membership on the executive board of the society. President Traendly now has appointed E. V. Hallock, of Queens, N. Y., as director to fill the vacancy on the executive board occasioned by Mr. Traendly's election as president.

Executive Board Proceedings.

As reported in last week's REVIEW, the executive board met at Philadelphia December 28 to close up the year's business. The following official report is now supplied by the secretary:

Pursuant to call by President Stewart, the executive committee met in special session at Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, December 28. There were present Messrs. Stewart, Elliott, Kasting, Westcott, Beatty, Farquhar, Traendly, Hallock and Rudd. The president appointed Messrs. Robert Craig and Wm. F. Gude to act in the place of Messrs. Wirth and Murray, who were not present. The president announced that he had appointed W. N. Rudd as secretary of the society, in accordance with the by-laws, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of P. J. Hauswirth, which action was approved by the committee.

President Stewart prefaced his formal announcements of the business before the meeting by a few words setting forth most feelingly the loss which had been suffered by the society, and by the trade at large, through the death of P. J. Hauswirth, and on motion a committee, consisting of W. F. Kasting, Frank H. Traendly and Wm. F. Gude, was appointed to draw up resolutions, and which committee later presented the following report, which was adopted:

Whereas, we, the executive committee of the S. A. F., in special session assembled in the city of Philadelphia, December 28, 1907, have learned of the sad death of our beloved secretary, which occurred in the city of Chicago, December 4, 1907.

Therefore, be it resolved by the executive committee of the S. A. F., that in the death of Mr. Hauswirth the society has lost a good worker and a loyal friend.

His motto always was the greatest good to the greatest number, and best interests of all concerned. For time and ability freely given to the best interest of our society, he stood without a peer. With him the common good was always first. He was ever ready to sacrifice his own interests for those of others. If he had a fault, it was that in his generosity, he sacrificed his own interests too much. For time freely given in the best interests of this society and for the welfare of horticulture at large, we are indebted beyond expression.

As an acknowledgment of this debt and as a token of grief we feel at his sad death, these resolutions are to be spread upon the records of this society and a copy sent to his bereaved family.

The secretary stated that there was a net balance of the society's funds in the hands of the estate of the late secretary amounting to approximately $1,500 and that the family were ready to turn this sum over, but under the advice of their attorney, had asked that a complete check of all society matters which had been in his hands should be made, in order that there should be no uncertainty. The secretary had deemed this also an eminently proper course to pursue, so that any fears on the part of members of the society, arising through groundless rumors which always are circulated in such unfortunate cases, might be set at rest beyond peradventure.

At the afternoon session Mr. Farquhar was unable to be present and the president appointed Edwin Lonsdale to take his place. On motion of Mr. Kasting the flower show committee was authorized to use for awards at the national flower show, to be held in Chicago, November, 1908, ten silver gilt medals, twenty-five silver medals, twenty-five bronze medals and as many certificates of merit as would be needed for worthy subjects there shown.

The thanks of the members of the committee were then formally tendered to President Stewart for his long service as secretary and president of the Society of American Florists.

W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

STARTLING REDUCTION.

A special telegram from New York to the Chicago Inter Ocean says:

"New York florists are facing great losses from lack of demand for their goods and are slashing prices right and left in the hope of disposing of a fair proportion of their stocks. Purchasers are reaping the benefit of the reductions, which in many cases are said to reach five per cent. This situation is different from that of previous years, when the florists reaped a harvest."

BEAUTIES!

We have no hesitation in saying that our Beauties are the Best in the Market, for none could be finer. A large crop on, all lengths of stem, but especially strong on long. Give us a call.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The feature of the market at the beginning of the new year has been the large crops of American Beauties. Practically every grower is cutting heavily and with several the crop is something enormous. At the same time, most of the houses report an excellent outlet for the stock, at prices which should be satisfactory to the growers, in consideration of the heavy supply. The quality is excellent and big retailers are buying long Beauties in hundred lots.

All other roses are equal to the present demand. The supply is not large, comparatively speaking, and the weather is exceptionally favorable for rose production. The year has started with a week of unusually warm, bright weather, far different from that usually experienced at this season, and a change to seasonable temperature and cloudy skies will mean a sharp change in market conditions, especially on roses. The quality of roses leaves nothing to be desired.

Carnations, too, show the effects of the bright weather in largely increased production. Many growers have been cutting lightly thus far this season, but it is the general report that crops in sight indicate that production soon will be averaged up and with a continuance of the bright weather we may look for exceptionally heavy supplies of carnations in the next few weeks. Any grade of carnations wanted can be had, but the low grade stuff is not so great a factor as it usually is at this season. Most of the stock grades as fancy.

There is an oversupply of Paper Whites and Romans. The short tulips coming in are not readily salable. The call for funeral work makes an outlet for whatever bulbous stock is sold and occasionally creates a flurry in longiflorums and callas. The death record last week set a new high mark for Chicago, there being 665 burials. Mignonette goes slowly. Stevia finds an outlet for funeral bunches. Some good sweet peas are quickly taken up, but the short stuff hangs fire.

The violet growers along the Hudson report excellent satisfaction with the returns from this market for Christmas and New Year's, and they are giving us all the violets we need. The price has steadily been weakening. This week it ranges from $1 down.

Cypripediums are abundant and slow sale.

THE WESTERN HOUSE FOR THE WESTERN TRADE

The market is somewhat overstocked with green goods, especially smilax and asparagus strings.

Changing Demand.

Referring to the prediction of an eastern visitor that the tendency in this market will be steadily in the direction of a demand for better grades of stock, and that the market for short roses will grow steadily poorer and poorer, as it has done in large eastern markets, A. L. Randall had this to say: "We have for some time noted that our customers are ordering the best grade of stock more largely than ever, with less demand for the low grades. I refer particularly to the shipping demand. It appears that the extensive greenhouse building throughout the west has resulted in a large production of short roses and medium quality carnations, which many buyers have either on their home places or close at hand, but they must come to Chicago when they want really fancy stock, the demand for which is stronger than it ever was."

Reinberg's.

The Beauty crop now being cut at Peter Reinberg's is something phenomenal. It is the greatest ever cut in the establishment, but at the store it is asserted that although the ice-box occasionally overflows to the adjoining one of John Kruchten, the stock is moving out quite satisfactorily and they hope the bright weather will continue, for they fear an end to the Beauty crop when dark days come again.

One of Peter Reinberg's firemen was held up while going his rounds early on the night of January 4 and one of the storage rooms also was robbed, several hundred roses being taken.

Mrs. Reinberg and Mrs. Leonard Kill are sisters. They buried a third sister December 31, who left a boy 4 years old and a little girl of 2 years. Mr. and Mrs. Reinberg propose adopting the son and Mr. and Mrs. Kill have taken the little girl.

Business for 1907.

In its annual review of business conditions in Chicago in 1907 the Record-Herald says the wholesale value of cut flowers sold in this market was $1,815,000, as against $1,452,000 in 1906, an increase of twenty-five per cent. These figures are followed by a signed statement by Oscar J. Friedman, retailer, as follows:

A better proof of the adage, "The luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of to-day," cannot be found than in the marvelous growth of the cut flower business of Chicago. In less than a decade greenhouses having millions of square feet of glass have sprung up like magic on the outskirts of the city. Two establishments claim to have more than 1,000,000 square feet of glass each, and it is conceded that Chicago has the model establishment of this kind in the world. The wholesale cut flower dealers send their goods as far south as New Orleans, as far north as Duluth, as far east as Pittsburg and as far west as Denver. Our city can pride itself on being the largest shipper of cut flowers in the world.

It is not clear whether or not the figures are Mr. Friedman's estimate, but wholesalers will not generally accept them as correct. There has been no twenty-five per cent increase in the wholesale cut flower sales in 1907. The Tribune's estimate of sales in 1907 is $2,200,000, no increase over 1906.

Weather of 1907.

The mean temperature of the year differed from normal by not more than 1 degree. January was much warmer than usual, and March was phenomenally warm, exceeding in temperature even the following April. The contrast between the warm weather of March and the cool period during April and May was quite marked. In fact, the average temperature of April and May combined was the lowest for that period in the history of the station.

The amount of precipitation was 1.70 inches greater than the average. The total depth of snow, 42 inches, was 5.7 inches more than the average, the greatest excess of snowfall occurring in May and December. The heaviest snow was 8.2 inches.

The cloudiness was more marked than usual, except during February, March and November. As compared with their normals, April was the cloudiest and November the sunniest, the departures being minus twenty per cent and plus sixteen per cent, respectively. The percentage of possible sunshine for the entire year, 52.8, was 5.2 per cent below the normal.

The last killing frost was May 4, the first in fall, October 14.

The Glass Market.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. reports that inquiries from those who will build greenhouses in the spring are coming in quite freely and that the indication is that there will be rather more than the average amount of building this season. They say the opportunity was never better, so far as the price of glass is concerned, but that it is hard to tell how long these prices will continue, as the production of hand-blown glass is not great, a large part of the window glass now manufactured being machine blown. Florists have not yet been educated to believe that machine glass is as good for greenhouse use as the article made by the older method.

Various Notes.

August Poehlmann says that for Christmas they cut 2,762 Beauties that came in the dollar grade. The company now has in storage a million valley pips. Dividing these up, it means a cut of nearly 3,000 valley each day the year around.

At C. A. Samuelson's perfect satisfaction is reported with the December business. November and the first part of December were light, but the finish was fine and the first week in January also was good.

At E. H. Hunt's large consignments of Easter supplies are being received and the prospect is for an excellent spring business. W. E. Lynch says the cut flower department is as busy as could be expected.

Joseph Foerster is no longer in charge of the selling end of George Reinberg's business and his place has not been filled. Miss Mamie Reinberg has taken charge of the books, with the assistance of Fred Klingel, who has been keeping books for John J. Kruchten.

Percy Jones says that he makes no pretensions to being a weather prophet, but that he sees signs of a January thaw in the market.

C. L. Washburn is spending the week at West Baden, Ind.

E. Fransen, who has charge of the selling end for Scheiden & Schoos, started a two weeks' term of jury service January 6. During his absence Miss Josephine Then, who sells her father's crop at the Flower Growers' market, will sell Mr. Fransen's stock.

Wietor Bros. say that the Kate Moulton rose is fully justifying their judgment in planting a whole house of it this season. They are cutting a good crop of excellent quality and have no difficulty in placing it with regular customers at from 10 cents down. As many as 700 a day were cut between Christmas and New Year's.

New Year's is the birthday anniversary of E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., and this year it was celebrated in an unusual manner at the Pieser residence, opposite Jackson park. At three o'clock in the morning they were routed out by fire in a lower apartment. It was more than three hours before they could get back into their rooms, and then Mrs. Pieser gave a New Year's breakfast for the firemen.

C. W. McKellar says the orchid market is just a little slow, especially for cypripediums, which are abundant, but that the call for gardenias is excellent.

The E. F. Winterson Co. says that it is getting a great many calls for "the bright red carnation," which means Defiance. Mr. Winterson says that for Christmas they made shipments of this variety to Denver, to Butte, Mont., and to Pensacola, Fla., and have had good reports of it in each case, the Pensacola customer ordering again January 6.

Miss Gunterberg says she is more than pleased with her business in 1907. For Thanksgiving she did double the business of the year before and for Christmas three times as much as for the week of Christmas, 1906.

Anton Then contemplates another trip south.

The Florists' Club will hold its annual election of officers this evening, January 9, and a large attendance is expected.

E. C. Amling says that at the rate things now are going he hopes to duplicate last season's success with sweet peas. His growers are providing some fancy, long-stemmed peas that are all put on orders as soon as received, only the short stuff going on the counter.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, were in the city this week on the way to Streator, Ill., where they will attend a wedding. Incidentally, Mr. Bayersdorfer is calling on a few customers.

Phil Chupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says he is well pleased with the way the shipping demand has continued since Christmas.

Vaughan & Sperry have Will Timme on the road, picking up consignments among the growers and selling the growers fertilizers.

The visit to Weiland and Risch seldom fails to find all hands grading Killarney.

Zech & Mann say that shipping trade has been better than the local demand since the first of the year.

The funeral of Dr. Nicholas Senn, one of the world's famous surgeons, January 5, made a large call for flowers.

Visitors: H. M. Burt and S. W. Coggan, of the firm of Burt & Coggan, Battle Creek, Mich.; Robert Miller, East Brookfield, Mass.

George J. Ball, well known as a grower at Berteau and Oakley avenues, was married New Year's day at Rock Island, Ill. His bride was Miss Anna Kruse, a teacher in the Chicago public schools, whose home was at Rock Island. They are now at home to their friends at 2427 North Robey street.

I AM very well satisfied with the REVIEW and should hate to be without it. —H. W. COLLINS, Boylestown, Pa.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

We had a fairly prosperous week following New Year's and the weather is still fine. There was considerable activity among the uptown florists, in social work, including weddings, receptions, parties, dinners and a good bit of funeral work. The downtown retailers, too, report a fairly good week in the sale of cut flowers and funeral designs. Prices on cut stock at the wholesale houses decreased considerably and the supply has greatly increased. The demand has kept up well, but is not strong enough to absorb the supply. Shipping trade, too, has continued quite strong.

In roses, Beauties of the long, fancy grade are abundant. The medium grades, though plentiful, are mostly deformed blooms. Of the other varieties the quality has kept up, and supplies are more than the demand calls for.

Carnations are of the best quality and the supply is large, with prices half what they were at Christmas. Violets, too, have suffered in price. Plenty of extra fine Californias are now to be had at 40 cents and 50 cents per hundred. Bulbous stock is plentiful.

In greens, smilax and bronze galax have a good call. Asparagus and adiantum also sell well.

Various Notes.

A. Augspurger, of Peoria, Ill., has been in the city.

Ostertag Bros. had the New Year's decorations at the Marquette hotel and Faust's cafe. Both jobs were large and used up quite a lot of decorative stock and cut flowers. This firm reports an extra good New Year's business.

The Ellison Floral Co. made an attractive New Year's decoration at the new Raquet Club, on Kings Highway. This is one of the small west end clubs. Arthur Ellison, who helped out for the holidays, returned to Chicago January 4.

William C. Young, president of the Florists' Club, has been laid up with the grippe since the first of the year.

Park Commissioner Phil Scanlan has taken a few days' vacation out of the city, which will give him a much needed rest. The park department is busy with the new Yeatman park and French market place, which are being seeded and planted with trees and shrubs; 22,000 bulbs have been planted this fall. Superintendent Ostertag is looking after the duties of the commissioner this week.

The funeral of Alfred Plant, the seedsman, took place December 31, at Webster Groves. There was quite an attendance of local seedsmen and florists. The St. Louis Florists' Club sent a large wreath.

James W. Dunford is making good progress in his new retail venture, the Gallagher Flower Shop, on Page avenue. He is using up most of his large cut of carnations from his Clayton greenhouses.

Henry Emmons and Adolph Fehr, at Belleville, had quite a brisk holiday trade. Cut stock, blooming plants, holly and greens sold as well as in any previous year. The St. Clair Floral Co., too, did a rushing Christmas and New Year's business.

John Mather, of the firm of Jacobs & Mather, florists in Texas, is in the city calling on the trade. Mr. Mather will visit Chicago shortly to buy greenhouse material for a new range of houses.

C. C. Sanders, chairman of the club's pottery committee, called a meeting of the committee January 2, at Kuehn's. Those who attended were C. C. Sanders, A. J. Bentzen, J. F. Ammann, Emil Schray, E. W. Guy, W. C. Young and S. L. Bray. A full report will be heard at the club meeting Thursday afternoon, January 9. J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

New Year's trade was fair only. The demand was light, but at that it was just about heavy enough to use up most of the flowers which were on the market. A few poinsettias were somewhat of a drug, but almost every other variety of flower sold out clean. In view of the fine Christmas business that all of us had, we cannot very well kick because New Year's was not all that it might have been.

At the present writing things are moving very slowly, with the demand scarcely equal to the supply. In fact, roses are in oversupply to a certain extent, especially white ones. Carnations are just about cleaned out and the demand for other kinds of stock is indifferent. Violets are doing well and lilies of all kinds are in demand, but the supply of them is not very heavy. The prices of all varieties of flowers have dropped considerably, but I believe that the bottom has been reached and it will not be many days till there will be a strong tendency to raise them.

We have been having weather which more resembled spring than mid-winter. The sun has been doing full duty and it has been quite warm. At present it is a little cooler, but the sun is still with us and its influence is already making itself felt in the quality of the flowers being received. If the temperature remains cold, there will be a decided improvement in the quality of stock very shortly, and also in the quantity.

Various Notes.

Fred Gear's Vine street store was entered by burglars last week. They effected an entrance through the back door and ransacked the whole store. They could not find any money, so they made away with a quantity of ribbon and tinfoil of no great value.

The young man who has been going the rounds of the retail stores for the last few weeks working a game on them was rounded up last Thursday in M. Shanahan's store in Avondale. In the police court his case was continued for a week. His game was to order a funeral design, ranging in price from $10 to $15, to be delivered in a couple of days, and he would promise to come the following day to settle for it. He would then ask for from $1 to $1.50 worth of flowers to take with him, this to be charged with the design. It worked in nearly every case and he got away with the bunch of flowers. I have only found one storeman who will admit having made up the design and attempted to deliver it, and he found the number given to be a vacant lot. Several of the others found that there was no funeral at the address given and so were not out much. It has all grown to be a joke among the storemen, but so far you cannot get a Fourth street dealer to admit that he has been done. The wise ones are smiling to themselves, though.

Huntsman & Co. are producing some of the finest single violets seen in this market. On actual measurement they were found to have a stem of ten inches and the flower measured quite one inch and three-fourths across.

Walter Mott was a caller. He was as jolly as ever and did some very good business in this city.

Paul and Henry Dailledouze were also visitors. Richard Witterstaetter had them in tow and they were taking in the carnation establishments about this city. They are on their annual tour of inspection. C. J. Ohmer.

ORANGE, N. J.

At the last meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held January 3, at the society's rooms here, the new officers were installed with the usual ceremony, and the committees for the year appointed. The floral display, with but two exceptions, consisted of orchids. A Cypripedium Leeanum Clinkaberryanum, the finest form of this genus in existence, and C. insigne Lucana, yellow form, were staged by Lager & Hurrell, of Summit; cut blooms of Cattleya Trianæ alba, of several distinct forms, by Thomas Jones, of Short Hills; epidendrums and Cypripedium Leeanum Clinkaberryanum, by the new secretary, Orson D. Miller, of East Orange, now one of the largest growers for market in this section; Anthurium Andræanum giganteum, by Joseph A. Manda, of West Orange; violets by Charles Hathaway, Max Schneider gardener, and roses by Douglass Robinson, John Gervan gardener.

and treasurer, showing a prosperous condition of the society. Shows for the coming year were discussed and finally the matter was given to the executive committee, with power. New members elected were E. Dare, of Maplewood, and Stewart Dickson, of West Orange. Winners of prizes in the 1907 competition were announced, as follows: First, Peter Duff, gardener for John Crosby Brown; second, William Read, gardener for the Colgate estate; third, Max Schneider, gardener for Chas. Hathaway; and in the special class for growers without glass, Arthur T. Caparn, gardener for Stewart Hartshorne. Ninety-four certificates of different grades were awarded for merit during the year.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Winter at last! After a week of delightful fall weather, quite as salubrious and sunny as October, we have zero in the adjacent mountains and 20 degrees in New York.

The New Year's celebration was not much more than "a good Saturday," as some expressed it. Many of the retailers acknowledge a good clearing up of Christmas plants and baskets and a few declare it was the best New Year's they have known. The wholesale market, however, did not advance for the day and prices have steadied down since Christmas to about the usual widwinter values.

Beauties have sold at from 50 cents down. Maids and other roses brought up to 12 cents. Carnations were worth from 2 cents to 6 cents; orchids, 50 cents. Violets sell up to 75 cents. Windows of the retailers were quite spring-like January 4, with narcissi, sweet peas, hyacinths and tulips. About everything seasonable is now in the market. Valley is abundant and low, 3 cents buying the finest and much of this even cleaning up at 2 cents. Lilies hold their price well.

Various Notes.

Orchids demonstrate the result of years of creative influence in their behalf by the enterprising advocates of their beauty and rarity. The number of growers has increased amazingly and the New York market is well supplied at all times and with all varieties. This is surely now the orchid center of the world. Just the time for Roehrs and Manda to launch the orchid society they have been nursing so long and which is about ready to be born.

day of this week. A good delegation from this city will attend; good in numbers and capacity for enjoyment. Totty writes, "It will be something worth while," and Herrington and Duckham promise an abundance of Rocky Mountain celery.

A week from Wednesday evening Tarrytown gives its annual dinner. No one who has attended one of them ever misses another. This society is famous for its cuisine, as well as for its floricultural accomplishments. This is where you see the Winsor carnation at home. New York always dines once a year at Tarrytown, if it can. Then come the Orange, Glen Cove, Poughkeepsie and Red Bank celebrations and the annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club, which, with its membership of 250, should be the best attended and most interesting of them all.

Next Monday night the club's first meeting should bring out an inaugural attendance. There will be much of interest in the entertainment and exhibition. Don't miss it. The new rooms are at Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue.

Flatbush had its usual prize bowling contest last week. The first prize, a $3 whisky flask given by Phil Kessler, was won by Edgren. Riley made the highest score, as usual. The others present were the Dailledouze brothers, Schmutz, Rogers, Wocker and Zeller. Hungry bowlers, who have waited so many years for the creation of a New York bowling club, can always be sure of a pleasant Thursday evening and a generous welcome at Flatbush. Some day this village will wake up and create some harmony and have a club of its own.

John Scott has another florist in the family. The stork arrived with the new boy the last day of the year. Evidently John is preparing for a change of firm name to John Scott & Sons.

O. V. Zangen is sending out a unique calendar that is in great demand among his friends.

On Wednesday afternoon of this week George T. Powell, president of the Agricultural Experts' Association, will lecture, at the rooms of the American Institute, on "Agriculture as a Business and a Profession." This is the first of a course of lectures to be given by prominent speakers every Wednesday during January, February and March.

R. J. Irwin has formed a business connection with the firm of H. H. Berger & Co.

Joseph Frank, of Third avenue, is recovering from a severe operation performed last week.

The new fruit auction building, at 204 Franklin street, is completed, at a cost of over $600,000. Through the courtesy of John P. Cleary I was introduced to its many luxuries and conveniences, and shown the possibilities of a plant market large enough to accommodate every grower within a radius of twenty-five miles of New York. Mr. Cleary, since his visit to London's Covent Garden, has had this concentration scheme bee buzzing in his bonnet and elaborates a plan that he thinks will unite all horticultural interests in a convenient center, similar to that of the famous European market. The building is well worth a visit and the way Mr. Cleary sells grapes and oranges will make you sit up and take notice. The plant market, on Twenty-seventh street, will soon be too small for the growers. Here is a chance to breathe and grow, well worth prayerful consideration.

Referring to the Mackintosh failure reported last week, a commercial agency report is as follows: "Daniel J. Mackintosh, florist, 1144 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $8,780 and nominal assets $4,406, consisting of stock, $20; two wagons, $500; fixtures, $150, and outstanding accounts, $3,556 from several hundred customers, which he has been unable to collect. The largest creditors are Elizabeth Mackintosh, $3,000, and Richard Gager, $853. John R. Mackintosh is preferred for $708, bequest and legacy under the will of Kate Mackintosh. The petitioner has been in business since 1896."

Knight & Struck is the name of a new firm in the Metropolitan building. The members are Thomas Knight and George F. Struck, both of whom are well known to the trade. Mr. Knight has for some years been with the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and Mr. Struck until a few months ago was with Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., and also represented F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown. The partners announce that they are prepared "to supply all wants from a horticultural standpoint."

The greenhouse men are all optimistic. Many contracts for extensive building in 1908 are already signed, sealed and delivered. It will be a great year with the horticultural builders, unless all signs fail, and this is just as it should be, with this country only waking up to its future.

We are glad that Easter is within hailing distance. April 19 will be here before we are ready for it. The wise plantsman is already perfecting his plans.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The demand for good stock has been fairly brisk in the last week, fancy flowers being scarce, especially in the rose line. Beauties shortened up considerably and were much sought after, especially so in the medium grades. Brides are scarce and clean up at good prices. Maids are coming in fairly strong and the short and medium grades are hard to move. Killarney was in good demand for New Year's day and sold up clean at a good average price. Richmond and Liberty are good stock and the supply is much stronger than it was a week ago.

The carnations seem to be catching their stride and the long delayed crops appear to be on. The fancy grades hold firm in price, while the shorter ones have dropped and do not move rapidly. Valley cleaned up better than it has for the last few weeks. The big crop which was forced for the holidays is about over.

Green stuff is moving off in good shape. Hardy ferns are scarce and have advanced in price.

Violets are selling poorly and a good many find their way to the street. Romans and Paper Whites are a glut and are hard to move at any price. The first freesia was seen last week, which makes another addition to the list of spring flowers. Mignonette, which is fine, has dropped in price but sells fairly well.

The first Assembly, which took place last week, did not use much in the cut flower line, Beauties being the only flowers called for.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club on Tuesday evening, January 7, was well attended. S. S. Skidelsky read his paper entitled "Competition, Fair and Foul," which was received with great applause.

There were a considerable number of exhibits, including several new roses. The Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., exhibited twenty-five blooms of Killarney on stems three feet long, that were greatly admired. Myers & Samtman exhibited a vase of their new rose, Wyndmoor, which already has made a reputation for itself in this market. The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited a splendid vase of Rhea Reid, the new red. The blooms are of great size. Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, sent an exhibit of Mrs. Potter Palmer, the deep pink sport of Chatenay, which was much admired. A. Farenwald, of Hillside, exhibited Aurora, a pink rose which resembles Chatenay. He also staged Miss Kate Moulton and Killarney in good form. Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, showed Mrs. Jardine in splendid shape.

Among carnations exhibited were four vases by John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa. Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., sent a fine vase of Winona. Afterglow, exhibited by R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, is a fine thing, with long stem and large flower of pleasing color.

The First Assembly.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had charge of the decorations for the First Assembly in 1908, which was given on the evening of January 3 in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel. The Assembly is an old Philadelphia institution, having been started in the middle of the eighteenth century and given continuously ever since. The decorations were handsome, but were dignified in their simplicity. As a background for the patronesses, who received in the foyer, a screen of palms and ferns intertwined with smilax had been erected. This was set off by red poinsettias, relieved here and there with white azaleas. The other walls of the foyer were decked in green, with white azaleas, and the whole made an exceedingly attractive picture. In the ballroom the stage was the centerpiece of the decorative scheme, and the orchestra was concealed by palms and various green foliage which extended from the ballroom floor to the ceiling. As in the foyer, poinsettias were used to great advantage, and huge bunches of American Beauties added to the color effect. Azaleas and hyacinths were also used to a certain extent at either end of the stage. Large palms decorated the balconies, but cut flowers were not used there, as they would have obstructed the view of those seated in the boxes. The three large dining-rooms which were used for supper were tastefully decorated, and on each table were either American Beauties or white lilacs, while on a few the calla lily formed the centerpiece. By the whole effect produced, this firm has added another triumph to its already long list of successes.

Various Notes.

There is a little holly still to be seen and it was used in quite a number of decorations last week.

Bayersdorfer & Co. are busy getting out their orders for Easter supplies. The steamer Marquette, which arrived January 6, was heavily loaded with some of their novelties for Easter.

Eugene Weiss, of Hatboro, has a fine stock of carnation cuttings in the sand.

"Billy" Stephen is wearing a broad smile these days, which is a good sign that everything is coming his way.

M. Rice & Co. report that their business increases each year, and from advance orders received so far, they see no reason why the year 1908 should not be a banner one.

The Leo Niessen Co. says the market for Beauties is giving promise of a good record for January. The Beauty is one of the leading specialties with this house.

The Pennock-Meehan Co. is handling cut blooms of the Mrs. Jardine rose for Robert Scott & Son.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Bayersdorfer are on a western trip.

Edward Reid takes a very optimistic view of the future.

W. E. McKissick is well pleased with the results of his removal to larger quarters.

The Market.

A firmer tone was noticeable last week and, although prices have remained about the same, there has been only a small surplus to carry over each day. Roses are in rather short supply and selling well. Best quality Brides and Maids make up to $15 per hundred. Beauties of the top grade fetch about half Christmas prices. Killarney remains popular, as does Richmond. Few Liberty are seen as compared with a year ago. Wellesley and Chatenay have splendid stems and are each in demand. There is a decided scarcity of white carnations, due to heavy calls for funeral work. All colors are clearing out remarkably well at from $3 to $6, the higher price only for strictly fancy flowers. Violets seldom now reach the dollar mark, the bulk averaging 75 cents. Quality is exceptionally good and the quantity, owing to the clear, mild conditions which have prevailed for some time, is heavy.

Lilies remain about the same, as do callas. Bulbous stock, such as Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths and Trumpet daffodils, is inclined to be druggy. Some La Reine tulips are arriving, but these are short-stemmed as yet. Some good freesia is also offered. Mignonette is extra good, some selling as high as $8 per hundred. Single white azalea, Moschosma riparium, valley, antirrhinums and English primroses are other flowers arriving. Myosotis is also seen in small lots. There is a good call for adiantum

NEW VIOLET BOSTON

In introducing this new variety to the trade I wish to state that I have been growing it in quantity for the past two years, and do not hesitate to state that it is entirely distinct—A STRONG GROWER, A FREE BLOOMER, AND THE FINEST SINGLE VIOLET IN CULTIVATION.

Ready for distribution in April and May. Orders booked NOW.

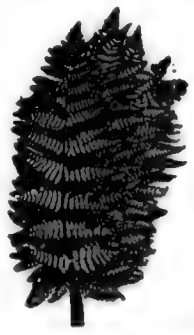
and asparagus, while other decorative greenery is still in good request. New Year's day, which usually brings a good demand for violets and other flowers, made no perceptible difference this year.

Horticultural Society.

The annual inaugural meeting took place at Horticultural hall January 4, when there was a moderate attendance of members. General Stephen M. Weld in his presidential address spoke optimistically of the year's work and considered the future bright. Walter Hunnewell, the treasurer, in his annual financial report stated that receipts for the year were $20,400, expenses $21,500. The deficit is much smaller than in the previous year. Legacies during the year amounted to $8,000. The reports of the various committees were read and accepted. That from Wilfrid Wheeler was an eminently practical one.

The board of directors at a meeting January 4 favored the offering of special premiums at the chrysanthemum show in November, President Weld urging all to join hands and make the exhibition a record one.



The lecture season opens January 11, the speaker being Wilfrid Wheeler on "The Concord Grape."

Various Notes.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, January 21, being ladies' night, there will be no regular lecture. The evening will be largely devoted to social enjoyment. The attendance promises to be the largest in the club's history.

H. A. Stevens is round again after a siege with the grippe. He is growing carnations and sweet peas at his Dedham establishment and each are doing well.

Charles Holbrow was the first to market flowers of Moschosma riparium, or African catnip, as it has been popularly named. Buyers fight rather shy of it, as they usually do of all desirable novelties. Storekeepers, with a few notable exceptions, are content to carry in stock the same varieties of flowers from year to year and growers of novelties find difficulty in breaking down their conservatism.

W. H. Ward and William Nicholson are among growers who are bringing in some splendid long-stemmed freesia.

H. A. Jahn is sending some fine carnations to the Park street market. His new white, Lloyd, is popular and promises to be largely planted the coming season.

December, 1907, was, with two exceptions, the warmest experienced in Boston for thirty-five years. Maximum temperature was 68 degrees, minimum 20 degrees and mean 33 degrees. Conditions are now rather more seasonable.

W. A. Riggs showed a finely flowered plant of Moschosma riparium at Horticultural hall January 4, which received a certificate of merit. Treated similarly to stevia, this should prove a useful florists' flower.

S. J. Goddard and W. Nicholson each report retail trade as unusually good, much ahead of other years. Retail calls are so heavy that they have difficulty in supplying their regular market and store customers.

The N. F. Comley greenhouses at Lexington have been incorporated. N. F. Comley, T. B. Hughes and A. E. Goldberg are the incorporators; capital stock, $15,000. A general line of stock will be grown.

The Music Hall market have voted not to accept the invitation to hold the combined markets' show at Horticultural hall. No date has yet been set for the exhibition.

Recent visitors included Louis Sander and T. Mellstrom, St. Albans, England, who took in the leading orchid collections in the vicinity of the Hub.

George F. Struck and Thomas Knight, who have commenced business as jobbers in horticultural supplies in New York, are both well and favorably known in Massachusetts, where they have many friends who wish them success in their new venture.

from an attack of grippe. He is bringing in his usual heavy supplies of bulbous stock to the market.

William Nicholson is cutting some splendid mignonette of Dailledouze's strain. He reports a fine demand for Afterglow carnation.

Arthur T. Kidder's single violets are again of splendid quality and are cleared out quickly.

Later reports from various towns and cities in Massachusetts indicate that Christmas trade equaled that of 1906 in nearly every case and occasionally surpassed it. W. N. Craig.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade in cut flowers has been rather quiet since January 1. Funeral work has been good, using up large quantities of flowers. Carnations are now selling at 60 cents per dozen retail. There is a good supply. Violets have sold poorly; $1.50 per hundred is the retail price. Roses are selling from $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail. A few tulips are now coming in. These sell at 60 cents per dozen retail. Paper Whites bring 50 cents per dozen retail.

Various Notes.

H. A. Jahn is cutting large quantities of his new white seedling carnation, Lloyd. Mr. Jahn has two or three promising seedlings that will be heard from later.

Wm. P. Pierce is picking some fine violets.

S. S. Peckham, of Fairhaven, is listing some thirty varieties of carnations this year. He is trying out nearly all the newer varieties. He will grow about 500 of H. A. Jahn's new white, Lloyd.

J. H. Cleary, on Pleasant street, handles goldfish, bird food and fish food as a side line and in the spring has a large trade in flowers and vegetable seeds.

R. E. Nofftz is picking some nice sweet peas. These sell at $1 per hundred retail.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, is picking some nice Winsor carnations at his new place.

It is rumored that Fred C. Coull, formerly with E. H. Chamberlain, will start a new flower store in the near future. W. L.

He had a good sale of Christmas trees and wreaths, nearly double the business of the previous Christmas.

A. B. BUTLER, 1226 Shapline street, Wheeling, W. Va., is a florist who is putting in a line of garden and flower seeds for the spring of 1908 and who contemplates making the seed business one of his principal interests.

THERE still are rumors that there is a great plenty of Red Wethersfield and yellow flat onion seeds in the hands of unlocated parties and that it will show up in the near future. The sooner the better, is the opinion of the set growers.

ALTHOUGH onion set prices are reported easier at some of the shipping centers, investigation shows that it is the lack of quality rather than abundance that is accountable for it. Sets are no more plentiful now than they were, and the price for a good article has stiffened during the last week, with no signs of a decline.

REPORTS from some of the catalogue houses who mailed their books out earlier than usual this year state that business begins just as soon as the catalogues reach the buyers. It has been held by the catalogue trade generally that a too early mailing of the catalogue is not advisable, as the later issues reach at a time when the recipient needs seed and the book received too early is overlooked.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, Seedsman 342 W. 14th St. NEW YORK CITY basis and that a much larger fill-in business than usual will be a feature of this line of trade during the spring of 1908.

The market gardeners are on the alert and are buying seeds early.

Send your 1908 catalogue to the Review and see that the Review is on your mailing list to receive your printed matter regularly.

The conditions now prevailing in the grocery trade cause some of the canners to wonder if they haven't, after all, enough seed for the 1908 pack.

The one hundred and seventh annual catalogue of J. M. Thorburn & Co. is one of the handsomest they have issued. The cover is in keeping with the dignity of their years.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has recently issued a bulletin entitled "The Culture and Uses of Brome Grass," which will be of interest to seedsmen.

The Green Seed & Plant Co., Kearney, Neb., says that it is, like others in the locality, disappointed with the crops of sweet corn and vine seeds, but looks for a good spring business.

The Ford Seed Co., of Ravenna, O., says that the Nectar sweet corn and Glory cabbage are becoming very popular. This firm introduced these varieties last year and looks for a large sale on them during the coming season.

H. Willard Brown, of the firm of H. G. Hastings & Co., seedsmen, Atlanta, Ga., is at St. Augustine, Fla., superintending the mailing of catalogues. These have been sent out from the St. Augustine postoffice at the rate of 30,000 a day for the last two weeks.

A. T. Boddington, New York, has adopted the word "Quality" as a trademark, and if the characteristic is apparent in his seeds with the same frequency that the word appears in his 1908 catalogue he can not fail to build up a large business among those who want the best.

The Page Seed Co., of Greene, N. Y., expects to erect another warehouse the coming season, as the present building, 40x210 feet, three floors, does not afford sufficient room. The firm's sales on seed corn alone were over 30,000 bushels last year. Another Brown bag filling machine is being installed in the plant.

The success which is attending the seedsmen's travelers in their trips to the sections where the summer homes of the wealthy abound relieves all fear of a poor season among this desirable class of trade. The gardeners frequently say they have had instructions to keep down expenses, but orders are as large as ever.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, celebrates this year the seventieth anniversary of the business. The annual catalogue devotes twenty-four pages on special paper in the front of the book to a brief history of the house and an account of its various departments, fully illustrated. The Dreer book this year contains 248 pages and is undoubtedly the most complete horticultural catalogue issued in the United States.

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, have undertaken the creation of a unique feature in an outdoor display and salesroom at 5 Green street, Marblehead, Mass. This they intend to use only for growing for exhibition, visitors being welcome every day in the week, including Sunday, with a guide and salesmen constantly in attendance. It is their purpose to display here practically all garden flowers and a number of special exhibitions already have been planned, beginning in May, the blooming period of what the firm claims to be the largest collection of Darwin and Breeder tulips ever grown in one place anywhere in the world. Each variety is planted in a separate bed and labeled.

In their January wholesale trade price list, J. M. Thorburn & Co. say of sweet corn: "We quote tentative prices only; impossible to fix quotations firmly at present, owing to lack of explicit information as to crops. We solicit orders for limited quantities only in connection with other seeds." In the wholesale list Evergreen and Country Gentleman are each quoted at $6.50 per bushel. In the general retail catalogue they are $7.50 per bushel.

COSMOS LADY LENOX.

Flower novelties of sterling merit promise to be rather scarce this season. One of the best, undoubtedly, is the large-flowered cosmos, Lady Lenox, which originated with A. H. Wingett, superintendent for Charles Lanier, Lenox, Mass. The flowers, as seen at the recent New York show, were double to treble the size of the ordinary cosmos and of a charming shell-pink color. A batch of plants growing at William Duckham's, Madison, N. J., from which these flowers were cut, fully bore out our good opinion of it. We will, no doubt, soon have white and other shades of color in the giant-flowering type of cosmos, and, with flowers rivaling single dahlias in size and far exceeding them in beauty, they should have great commercial possibilities.

Mr. Wingett also raised the fine, new double yellow dahlia, Charles Lanier, which gained high awards at Boston, Newport and other exhibitions and which will also be introduced the coming spring. W. N. Craig.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending Dec. 28 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Caraway..	8	$ 96	Hemp ...	50	$ 231
Celery ...	112	1,599	Millet ...	1,000	3,000
Clover ...	2,500	77,181	Mustard .	100	887
Cummin ..	15	246	Rape	250	2,068
Fennel ...	11	90	Sugar beet	900	3,570
Grass	200	726	Other	...	12,979

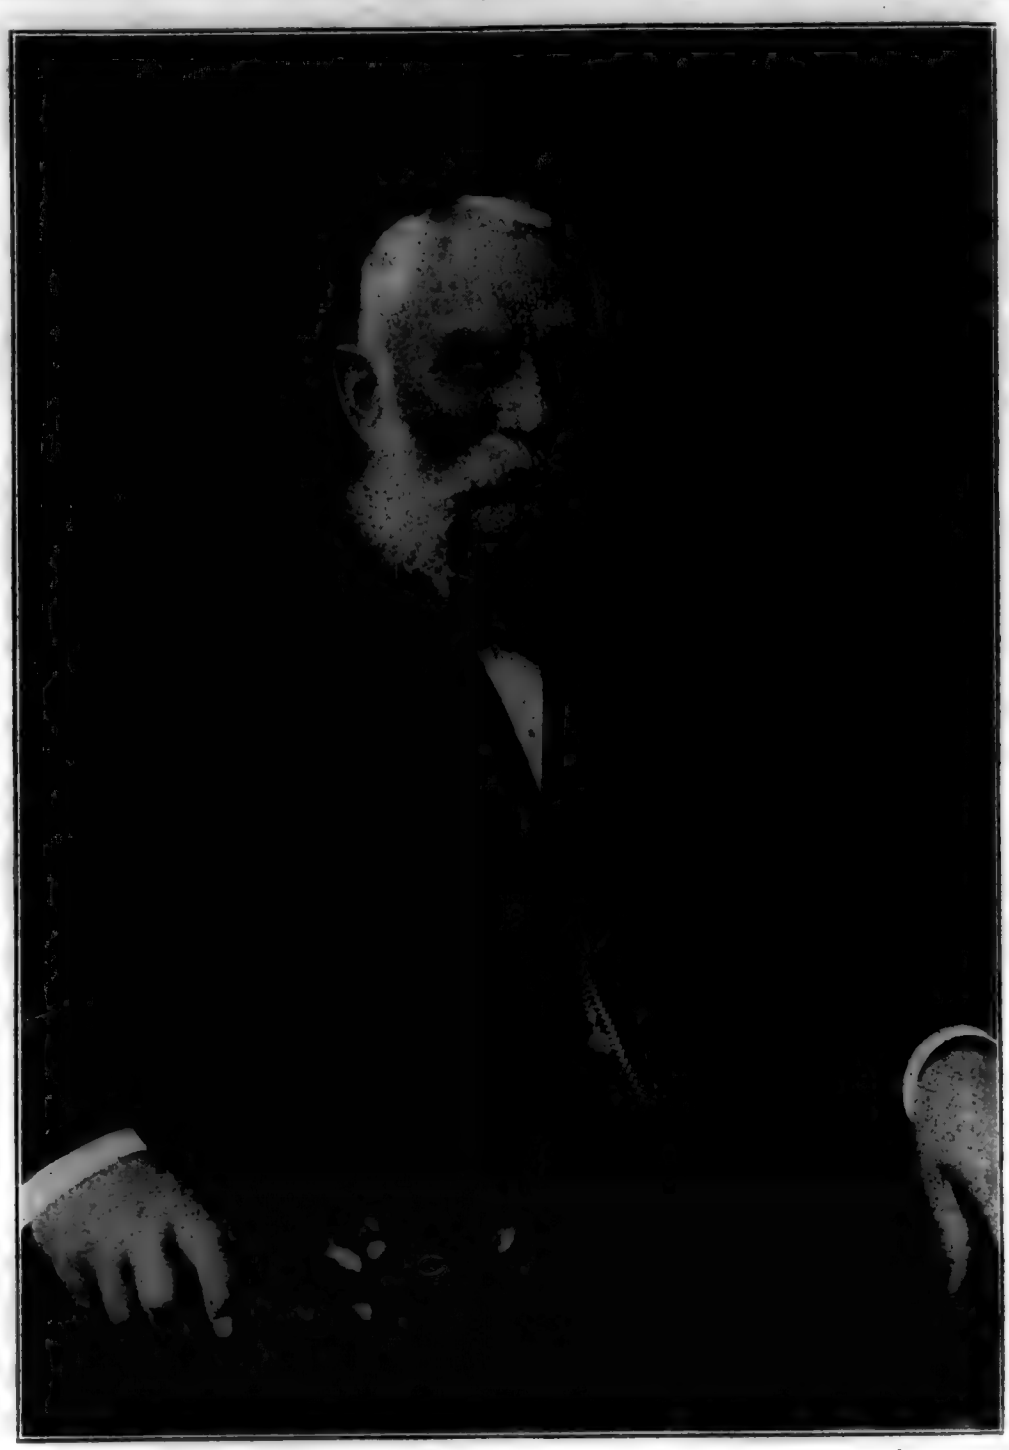
In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $8,927.

IMPORTANCE OF SELECTION.

Commenting on the seedsmen's exhibits at 1907 exhibitions, an English gardening magazine of international circulation says: "On practically every stand set up by the foremost seed growers of this country were to be seen examples of roots and vegetables brought to the highest state of perfection mainly by careful and persistent selection. Cultural skill cannot have played more than a secondary part in producing the really wonderful specimens of mangolds, potatoes and other subjects there to be seen, for the bulk of the exhibits were drawn from crops growing in the open fields. It must be obvious to any person of intelligence that seeds from stocks showing such perfection of quality and uniformity of type must be more satisfactory and profitable to grow than any stock of inferior quality, no matter what the price of the latter seeds may be. The pity is that vendors of seeds from rubbishy stocks still find buyers of their inferior seeds simply because they are 'cheap.'"

CALIFORNIA ONION SEED.

In the Review of December 26 W. Van Fleet was quoted as saying, in part, that the need for revitalization of the onion seed crops of California was shown to be recognized by the California growers by their going to Colorado last season to grow crops of onion bulbs for planting for seed in California. Commenting on the above, it was stated that "Dr. Van Fleet seems to have lost sight of the fact that the purpose of the California growers in contracting for the crop at Greeley, Colo., was the prime necessity for replenishing their stocks of bulbs, the quantity available for planting for seeds in the Santa Clara valley having fallen below their needs. We doubt if the Californian growers will admit any thought of necessity for 'revitalization' in their stocks by using Colorado bulbs."



Referring to this item, the following letter, dated December 30, will be of interest:

The writer begs to state that Dr. Van Fleet's opinion we always value most highly, and it is with regret that we have not got more men throughout the country just like him to encourage the production of seeds up to the highest possible standard.

We beg to say that he is in error in regard to the growing of onions in Colorado, or in any other place outside of the state of California, to improve the quality of the stock seed that is planted here, not only by ourselves, but by all of the growers on this coast. The facts are that the California growers for the past season, owing to the onion districts being flooded during the month of March, necessitated finding districts to grow their onion bulbs in neighboring states, it being too late to re-sow here. It was for this reason, and this alone, that the onion growers produced a large quantity of their onion bulbs this season in Oregon, Utah and Colorado. Had we not done so, we would have had no onion bulbs to plant for seed purposes this fall, and we beg to state right here that the seed stock which was given to the onion growers in the other states mentioned is the same identical seed stock that would have been planted here in California were we in the position to re-sow our fields after the flood.

The thought of Dr. Van Fleet's that any of the growers went outside of this state with revitalization in view is wholly in error. The writer claims without fear of contradiction that California produces seed of the highest quality, equal to that grown in any other section of the United States or Canada.

We beg to conclude by saying that we know that when the above is pointed out to Dr. Van Fleet he will see his error at once. Charles P. Braslan.

A Hitherto Unpublished Protrait of the Late Everett B. Clark.

BONHOMIE BURPEE.

The committee of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain, in its report to the annual meeting, speaks as follows of the visit of W. Atlee Burpee last July:

"One of the most pleasing and interesting features of the sweet pea year was the visit of W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, with his wife and family.

TWO NEW VARIETIES FOR 1908.

Vick's Imperial Sunrise

A novelty of extraordinary merit. Seedling from Vick's Daybreak, but distinct in form of flower, each petal being perfectly quilled. Color, delicate pink. Plant a robust grower, upright branches, each crowned with magnificent double flowers, three to five inches in diameter. Type securely fixed. Sure to be a winner. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each.

Vick's Early Branching

Developed from Vick's Late Branching. Flowers of this new variety can be placed on the market ten days ahead of Late Branching sorts. Plants have few branches which are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of large, perfectly double flowers. Long stems. Two colors, White and Rose. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each. For prices in quantity see our "Aster Book for Florists."

Mr. Burpee visited most of the leading sweet pea growers in the United Kingdom; he was keenly interested in the splendid London show, which surprised him; and he was impressed by the extent and importance of the society's trials. At the dinner given to the judges and officials at the conclusion of the show Mr. Burpee presided, filling the chair in the happiest possible manner. By his graciousness, bonhomie and generosity, Mr. Burpee won his way into the hearts of all sweet pea lovers, and as evidence of the pleasure he experienced among us he has presented the society with a fine fifteen guinea challenge cup."

The Market.

The wave of prosperity which struck this city shortly before Christmas was still with us December 31. All the available good flowers were disposed of at good prices.

Roses met with good demand. Many thousands of violets were disposed of by some of the stores. Plants were in good demand. All of the good stock not cleaned up on Christmas was readily disposed of for New Year's. In fact, blooming plants have been selling well all along. The popularity of Boston ferns is by no means dying out, as the recent sales will prove.

Since the holidays roses, carnations, valley, violets, etc., have been moving nicely. Considerable bulbous stock has already appeared, namely, Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths and daffodils. Many daffodils were disposed of at New Year's. Poinsettias were pretty well cleaned up during the holidays. There is plenty of green on the market. Stevia has been in big demand.

Various Notes.

A peek into the reception room of one of the season's debutantes in the city will reveal the fact that it is perfectly useless to try to educate the public as to what is artistic in the way of bouquets. Seventy-five per cent of the people want the old-fashioned, stiff, crowded-up style of bouquet, such as anyone can make up without much practice. Well, perhaps it is a good thing for the florist. It gives him a chance to get fancy prices for short stock of all kinds. Wire takes the place of long stems, and a lavish use of stevia or green covers all.

A streak of hard luck put rather a damp finish to the year of 1907 in J. F. Sullivan's store. The night of December 30 some careless person left the faucet open on the third floor of the building. In the morning the newly decorated ceiling was ruined. Over a foot of water came through from above, penetrating every nook and corner, and it will take some time before books, boxes, clothes, etc., will have lost the appearance of having gone through a flood.

W. B. Brown is sporting a fine new delivery wagon, with rubber tires and all the rest.

Beard Bros. furnished some chrysanthemums as late as January 1.

Jerome K. Stock has a valuable novelty in the form of a pure white, double flowering snapdragon. It is from a seedling of his own. He has been watching it carefully for about two years and now has considerable stock. H. S.

MILDEW ON LETTUCE.

I should like to add a little more to what was said, on page 40 of the REVIEW of December 26, in answer to D. F. R.'s inquiry for a preventive of mildew on lettuce. The instructions given were good, but it is not always possible to follow such instructions exactly and thus keep conditions just as they should be.

We find that the best preventive of mildew on lettuce is sulphur painted on the heating pipes. Take equal parts of sulphur and lime, mix with water to make a thick paste and apply it to some of the heating pipes, say one or two lines through the house, or enough to make a slight sulphur smell. Do this about once a week for a while and I think your trouble will disappear, even though atmospheric conditions may not be ideal. NORMAN MILLER.

VEGETABLES AS A SIDE LINE.

Tomatoes make an excellent crop to follow up mums, and cucumbers can be used, also, in the same manner. We have seen houses of roses and carnations that looked pretty well run down from some cause, tone out after cutting the Easter crop and the benches spaded up and cucumber plants already grown in 4-inch pots planted into the house without losing a day. And in about six to eight weeks they commenced to produce excellent crops, which paid well until July, and much better than flowers would, which are hardly worth shipping when the spring glut comes over the market. What blooms are needed can be bought for retail work and sold at a better profit than could be made by leaving a poor crop in for a few straggling blooms.

We have also noticed houses of carnations that did not pay for the labor of watering them after Easter, when the house might have been made to pay well if in vegetables.

Even the grower who uses all his space and manages his houses as well as one could, if he should leave a bench in his coolest house for lettuce and parsley and keep account of how much money it brings, would find that there are few things that have paid as well.

How often we are asked if we have lettuce, radishes or parsley when taking an order for plants, flowers and decorations for a party or banquet!

We know of one thrifty grower who has regular Saturday orders for flowers to decorate the Sunday dinner-tables of all the well-to-do people in his city and in these Saturday orders, parsley, lettuce, radishes and toward spring cucumbers and tomatoes are always included, and at top notch retail prices that would make the flowers look like the side line instead of the vegetables.

Every grower dislikes to be told that he ought to be getting more out of his place, etc., but ask yourself, "Are the houses paying as well as they can be made to? Is every foot of space utilized? Or can vegetables be grown to advantage in connection with what crops are now grown?" H. G.

TOMATOES.

Tomatoes have sold at unusually low and unprofitable prices so far this winter. From now on better prices will be obtained. Fruiting plants should be kept not lower than 60 degrees at night and I have found 62 to 64 degrees better. Tomatoes need a dry atmosphere and should be allowed to dry out well before watering. Hand pollination of the flowers for the next few weeks will ensure a much better set of fruit. On bright days, shaking the wires at intervals helps to scatter the pollen.

Care in affording liquid food is now necessary. A little too much may cause the flowers to drop. Surface dressings are preferable to soakings of manure water in midwinter. If you can keep plenty of active feeding roots near the surface, and your roots are not allowed more than a narrow border, they will give much better returns.

Some differences of opinion exist as to whether single-stemmed plants or those with two or three shoots are best. My experience has proven that single stems produce much too rank foliage at the expense of fruit. By allowing three shoots to a plant, smaller leaves, less succulent growth and greater freedom in fruit-setting are secured. For spring and summer crops the single stems work out all right, but in winter it is otherwise.

Growers can vastly improve their strains by selecting fruits of the most perfect shape from plants which are free from any objectionable characteristics. How often do we see fruit selected haphazard for this purpose, and then when coarse fruits predominate we are told that the strain has run out. C.

PLEASE find enclosed $2, in payment for the REVIEW two years in advance. We find we cannot do without the paper. Hardly an issue is received that does not contain something of special interest or benefit in our business.—J. P. SIEBOLD, Lancaster, Pa.

FLORISTS have a splendid opportunity of raising Mushrooms by utilizing the waste space under the benches, and then utilizing the waste material of expended mushroom beds in growing flowers. Now is the time to make your beds. Lambert's Pure Culture MUSHROOM SPAWN, the best Mushroom Spawn in the market, is sold by all leading seedsmen. A fresh sample brick, enough for a small trial bed, together with large illustrated book on "Mushroom Culture," will be mailed postpaid upon receipt of 40c in postage stamps. Address American Spawn Company, St. Paul, Minn.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—W. E. King says the outlook is thus: "Too much business. No reliable help. Am likely to be found dead in the harness."

MCMINNVILLE, ORE.—S. H. Maris, proprietor of the Pioneer Greenhouse, says that Christmas trade was better than ever before. Flowers were all cleaned up and twice as many plants were sold as on any former Christmas. The financial stringency has not been felt here, so far as his business is concerned.

LOOMIS, CAL.

The Loomis Floral Co. has been making improvements in its heating plant.

The California Carnation Co. has been getting in touch with the trade across the big waters.

D. F. Roddan, of the Loomis Carnation Co., was recently married.

H. S. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been the usual lull after the holidays and everything is now getting down to its normal state. The trade for New Year's was fully as good as that of one year ago, with an extra demand for roses and violets. Carnations did not sell as well as was expected and valley was a slight drug on the market. Poinsettias were so well cleared out at Christmas that there were no really good ones offered. Fancy roses, owing to the continued dark weather, were exceptionally scarce and but little of the best grade found its way to town.

There has been considerable funeral work, which has been well divided among the stores during the last week, and this helps to clean up much of the short-stemmed stock.

Chrysanthemums of the outside grown varieties are nearly at the end of their season. A few poor whites and yellows are still being offered to the retailers, but they are good for little else than to use in funeral designs.

There has been a scarcity of maidenhair ferns for the last few days, but smilax is overplentiful. The fact that the large buyers for window decorations were not so plentiful as usual this season left a great quantity of it uncut, where it usually is completely cut down for that class of trade.

The prospect for cut flowers is good at present and the prices are a shade less than they were at this time one year ago. The tendency on all classes of stock, however, is downward and I am inclined to think that January prices will not average over seventy-five per cent of that received for the same class of stock in 1907.

Various Notes.

The Piedmont Floral Co., of Oakland, has removed to its new location in the Hotel Athens, on Broadway. The firm has fitted up a very attractive store and caters to the best trade in Oakland.

James Vallance, brother of Manager John Vallance, of the nursery department of C. C. Morse & Co., has returned to his home at Livermore, Cal.

James Skinner, the Christmas tree man, has returned to Portland, Ore.

Hutchings & James, of Elmhurst, report a record-breaking sale of poinsettias in pans and pots. They grew the finest stock sent to market.

The Sievers Floral Co. reports a splendid holiday trade, with an exceptional demand for long-stemmed Beauties. This firm makes a specialty of this article.

Chas. W. Bates has taken a long needed vacation and gone on a trip through southern California.

J. P. Nissen has returned from a week's visit to San Jose and Santa Clara. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Trade.

The final struggle of 1907 ended with most satisfactory results and we can now sit up and take notice. The pessimisticly inclined have taken a new lease on life and agree that the florists got all that was coming to them. We have seen nearly all the retailers and find them of the same mind in pronouncing Tuesday, December 24, the greatest day in history. It did not rain on that day, but Wednesday it fell in torrents, the wind blowing a regular gale. Had it not been so, we undoubtedly would be able to report a twenty-five per cent increase over last year's sales. Buyers were more numerous, but did not take so readily to the more expensive arrangements.

There was nothing particularly new in the plant line, but everything displayed was well done, especially the poinsettias. Grown in pans they were the grandest lot ever seen in Portland and the center of attraction. In the cut flower line carnations ranked first in quality, and never before have we seen them so fine at Christmas. The rose crop was rather light and the select blooms sold readily. sold well, but daffodils needed a little urging. Home-grown violets were decidedly scarce and we were obliged to import them from California, as we also did the cut poinsettias. They arrived in excellent condition and both sold out clean. Oregon holly beats the world and it proved to be one of the most profitable assets of the florists' trade. In loose bunches it sold for 75 cents a pound, and in made-up wreaths for $1.50 each. Mistletoe is everybody's property. Out in the suburbs it grows on lamp posts and telegraph poles and it is not much handled at the retail stores.

New Year's day passed with a brisk demand for cut flowers and we hope this beginning is a good omen for a prosperous 1908. H. J. M.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its regular meeting and annual election of officers January 3. In the absence of President McGregor, Vice-President Thomas Jack occupied the chair. Reports from the treasurer and financial secretary were read and accepted, showing the society to be in a flourishing condition, with an increase in funds and membership for the year 1907. Officers elected for 1908 were:

It is a rare thing to find a florist with a growth as rapid as T. A. Kepner, of Harrisburg, Pa. In October, 1903, he completed his first greenhouse, 12x66 feet; today he has a block of houses supplying a store at 116 South 2nd St., Harrisburg, another at 35 North 2nd St., Harrisburg, another at 159 South Front St. Steelton, Pa. Cut Flowers Plants, Funeral and Wedding Work the finest and most up-to-date of any Florist in the two cities. Why, do you ask? Because his stores are supplied fresh every morning. He also is prepared to supply to the Wholesale Trade in a manner that gives the best at fair figures. Address him at

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

SEND your 1908 catalogue to the REVIEW and see that the REVIEW is on your mailing list to receive your printed matter regularly.

A BULLETIN on the mulberry, by Geo. W. Oliver, plant propagator in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C., will be of interest to nurserymen.

THE forty-first annual meeting of the Kansas State Horticultural Society was held at Topeka, December 26 to 28. Many nurserymen were present and several had places on the program.

A. B. BUTLER, 1226 Shapline street, Wheeling, W. Va., is one of the many florists who are making provision to meet the demand for nursery stock, especially for shrubs and fruit trees.

AND now comes report from Spokane, Wash., that Albert I. Mason, an orchardist operating southwest of that city, has discovered a coreless pear and gathered 300 pounds of fruit from the tree last season.

THE Texas Horticultural Society and the Texas Nut Growers' Association will hold their annual meetings at Abilene January 16. There will be a large exhibition of nuts, principally pecans, and also an exhibition of vegetables and fruits. The nurserymen are largely interested in these two societies.

W. HARRISON, of Harrison & Cragg, the English nurseryman, who recently paid a visit to the United States and Canada, was evidently impressed by the comparative prosperity of the nursery trade in America and in England, for he is telling the nurserymen of England about us in most optimistic language.

THE loganberry made a hit in Europe, but an English nurseryman writing in the Horticultural Advertiser now says "there is going to be a lot of trouble over these in the near future. He has fruited some, seedlings, which have been absolutely worthless; fruit so bad that not one in thirty was edible in any way. The big demand for stock has caused quantities of seedlings to be raised and distributed, which will give the plant and those who sell them a bad name. Buyers should insist on guaranteed stock."

WINTERING EVERGREENS.

There is not the slightest doubt but there are many valuable evergreens killed every winter because of lack of moisture in the soil in which their roots are embedded, and this result could surely have been averted by a little labor in the early part of the winter.

Winters when but little snow falls are the winters most fatal to evergreens not otherwise provided with matter helpful for the retention of moisture in the soil. This winter so far, at least in many sections of the country, there has been but little snow, but it may not even now be too late to make provision for the protection of evergreens. Forest leaves are of great value for this purpose, but if, previous to their application, a light coat of manury substance is applied, so much the better. Even an inch or two in depth of soil will be found beneficial, with the coat of leaves placed on top. There is yet a good part of the winter, with hard freezing weather, to come, and it will without doubt be labor well used to do something along the lines indicated. M.

NEBRASKANS PROTEST.

Three prominent nurserymen of Nebraska, Peter Youngers of Geneva, W. A. Harrison of York and Harvey Marshall of Arlington, January 3 obtained a hearing from the state railway commission on a protest involving the following points:

First—We respectfully request that a twenty per cent reduction be made in joint rates where goods are shipped over two or more lines, the same as now in effect in the state of Iowa.

Second—We request that the following items on page 118 of the classification, at No. 56, osage orange seed, worth about $3.50 per bushel, now reading first class, should be placed in third class, along with alfalfa and seeds not otherwise specified.

Third—On page 96 of the classification, Nos. 49, 50 and 51, places buckeyes and butternuts, worth about $1 per 100 pounds, and walnuts, worth about 60 cents per 100 pounds, as second class, which should read fourth class, the same as peach stones.

We further request that your honorable body eliminate the words in item No. 55 on page 95, "invoice value, not exceeding $5 per 100 pounds," and items Nos. 25 to 45, inclusive, on page 96, which are eliminated by the railroads in their official classification.

After listening to the explanations advanced by the nurserymen, the commission agreed to take up the matter with the various Nebraska railroads and attempt to secure a satisfactory settlement by correspondence.

Unless this informal means of securing a remedy fails no formal complaint will be made and the railroads will not be required to show cause why the changes should not be made.

CARE OF TREES.

Mice in many places cause great destruction by girdling trees during heavy and prolonged snowfalls. It is a mistake to pile litter of any sort around trees which are heeled in; not infrequently a heavy coating for protection is placed around this stock. It affords suitable nesting material for the pests. The ground should be firmly tramped around all heeled-in stock. In addition to the various phosphorous pastes, which are effective in ridding grounds of rats and mice, I have found tartar emetic good. Take one part of the emetic to five parts of oatmeal (if the latter is burned a little, all the better), and add sufficient suet to make it into a paste. Lay it where they are troublesome.

A number of washes are in common use as protections for trees. A good one is one part Morrill's tree ink or asphaltum and ten parts Portland cement. Make it of the consistency of paint. The mice seem disinclined to bark any trees coated with this mixture.

Moss or lichens growing abundantly on trees is a sure sign of lack of vitality. Usually such trees are unpruned and full of decaying limbs. Prune carefully and scrape off all loose or decaying bark. A wash of lye will be beneficial and spraying with Bordeaux mixture, standard strength, will kill the moss. Cultivation of the ground around mossy trees will greatly assist in restoring them to vigor.

Coal tar is the most useful and lasting dressing to coat tree wounds with. The various grafting waxes and paints will not last over a year. In pruning

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure gilt-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.
Strong established pot-grown plants, $9.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

make all cuts clean and smooth before applying the tar. Holes in trees, in which water lodges, should be scraped out if possible, and if tar cannot be coated over the sides with a brush, it can be poured in. There is no danger of its injuring the tree. C.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—Fugleberg & Flister, proprietors of the South Side Flower Exchange, say that business has been very good during the last year. They will build more houses in the coming spring or summer.

LANCASTER, PA.—During the last year J. P. Siebold erected a large three-story building, with a store, a brick boiler-house, a potting-shed, a brick barn, and also a warehouse in which to store vegetables for the winter. He also built two greenhouses, 18x60 and 44x112, respectively, and he expects to add more greenhouses in the near future. He grows cut flowers and vegetables for both the wholesale and retail trade, besides handling a great many pot plants. His Christmas and New Year's trade was double that of previous years, with an especially strong demand for pot plants.

WESTWOOD, OHIO.

The casual observer, walking through the begonia houses of J. A. Peterson at this time, would imagine sales had been poor of late. On the contrary, Gloire de Lorraine never had a better sale, and while quite a number are unsold, it is well. Judging by the number of houses being prepared for stock, the supply will be as large for the next season, if not larger. One house of rooted cuttings is ready to pot up. There is not a sign of fungus; it is as healthy a batch as could be seen.

Mr. Peterson is hybridizing and has one excellent improvement on Lorraine, in a much larger flower, deeper in color and equally free flowering. Some may be placed on the market during the coming summer. It will be interesting to know that not only are our carnations finding favor abroad, but Lorraine as grown here has rarely been excelled across the pond. When in Europe last summer and on the search for really good novelties, Mr. Peterson called on the royal head gardener at Frogmore. This gentleman had heard of his skill, especially as a grower of specimen Lorraine, and will be the first purchaser of the new seedling as soon as it is ready for distribution.

I noted a batch of the new Dracæna Victoria, which is a decided improvement on D. Lindeni, being a rich golden yellow, with a heavy marking in the midrib. Manda's new dracæna is a fine thing, but the old favorite D. terminalis, as grown here, will be hard to eclipse in color.

Adiantum Farleyense and Nephrolepis Scottii are extensively grown here. Quite a stock is on hand, but orders are coming in freely and will make space for the 100,000 begonias to be placed in sand, all leaf cuttings. W.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Business holds steady. Shipping continues good and prices have dropped a little since the holidays. It is predicted that 1908 may be the banner year for the florists' business. The next great event will be Easter, with its heavy crops of lilies. One grower is getting in 18,000, another 12,000, and so on. There will be no lack of lilies for Easter.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

New Carnation — Brilliant Scarlet

DEFIANCE

There are Seven Reasons Why You Should Grow Defiance, and They Are:

1st. It is by far the best color seen in a scarlet carnation; it is the true velvety scarlet and not red; it will average three inches in diameter throughout the season.

2d. It is unexcelled for productiveness by any carnation in commerce today.

3d. It is a clean and upright grower, producing an abundance of high grade flowers without any special treatment.

4th. It is in perfect health and not subject to rust or any other disease which is very prevalent amongst other carnations today.

5th. It is of perfect form. Blooms are very symmetrical; center nicely built up and very full, but not so as to appear crowded; stems are very stiff and wiry, holding the flowers perfectly erect.

6th. It is a scarlet for the entire season, and can be had in crop in October, continuing through the entire season. It does not lose its color in bright sunlight—in fact it improves under a bright sun when other reds fade.

7th. It is the only scarlet today, and by growing DEFIANCE you will be satisfied it has no faults; it is full of vigor and will do the work when other scarlets fail.

Strong, well-rooted cuttings, every one guaranteed, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Usual discount on large orders. January delivery as yet.

RAMBLING JOTTINGS.

The Hoffmeister Floral Co., at Lick Run, Cincinnati, O., has a sport from Enchantress of the color of Lawson at its best. Growing in a house of Enchantress, both white and pink, it is identical in every way except color, and as this firm is very successful with this variety, we can look for a really good thing in the near future. As with other growers, there was complaint here of the dull weather preceding the holidays, which helped shorten the supply of roses and carnations. It seems the presence of old Sol is absolutely necessary to assist the anxious grower in giving the retailer the goods just when needed.

When in the Queen City recently I saw the only Kellar produce an immense bouquet of Killarneys from seed sown but a few moments, and as he declares his intention of retiring from the stage, he may devote his attention to the magic production of the queen of flowers, in which case Burbank will be eclipsed and the problem of shortage, just when it should be the reverse, will be solved.

J. B. Heiss, of Dayton, O., was not to be outdone by the shortage and high prices of the real article, and so he adopted the novel idea of combining the artificial with the natural by inserting artificial flowers into natural plants. Orchids especially were treated in this way and sold quickly. The deception was explained and accepted by the purchaser.

At H. H. Ritter's store, in Dayton, Mr. Ritter himself was in charge when I called, his son, William, having been dispatched to Tippecanoe with a large order executed on short notice and received from J. H. Small & Sons, of New York city. One piece was a casket pall, which was beautifully executed.

W. W. Horlacher, of Dayton, was at work on a large flat bouquet composed of bronze leucothoe sprays, with Bride roses and Roman hyacinths, one of several handsome pieces being sent out.

John Boehner, of Dayton, says "one cannot have the cake and eat it at the same time," meaning by this that he has sold a tract of land for building lots and in consequence is restricted for space to grow flowers outside. He has a large cemetery business.

H. Haerlin, Jr., head gardener at the Soldiers' Home, is planning some new features in landscape work and asks for information bearing on the point, especially with reference to new plants and shrubs. W.

CARNATION SARAH HILL, ACTUAL SIZE.

SARAH HILL

The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

Either variety at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

FLORIST'S REVIEW

WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade was good here during the holidays; from all reports, it was up to expectations. As usual, carnations were the most in demand and they were scarce, bringing all the way from $1 to $2 per dozen. Roses went rather slowly till carnations were cleaned up, when they moved nicely at $2 to $4 per dozen. Poinsettias sold well in pans and also cut, and brought good prices. Pans of valley sold on sight and there were not nearly enough to go around. Some azaleas were in, but were rather poor.

The growers all expected big cuts after Christmas, but the cloudy weather made stock scarce for New Year's and everything sold at good prices. It looks as though there is no room for complaint.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club had no meeting, as its meeting night fell on Christmas eve; so the next regular meeting will be the second Tuesday in January, when it is expected to give a hop.

G. Drobisch had plenty of funeral work between Christmas and New Year's and found it hard to get enough stock.

E. Metzmaier reports plenty of funeral work and scrambling for stock.

J. M.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Taunton Greenhouses report Christmas trade as good, but not quite equal to that of a year ago. There was an excellent call for such pot plants as azaleas, Lorraine begonias, poinsettias and bulbous stock. Carnations sold at $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Violets had a good sale. More high grade flowers were sold than in any previous season. Trade since Christmas has remained quite good. W. N. C.

OGDEN, UTAH.—The greenhouses of W. L. Porter were damaged January 2 by a fire that originated in the boiler-room.

GREENSBORO, N. C.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed December 23 against the Duffy Co. The petitioning creditors were J. Van Lindley, N. J. McDuffie and others. A. S. Perkins was appointed receiver.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—L. K. Nagy has opened two stores under the name of the Atlantic Floral Exchange, one at 1501 Pacific avenue and the other at 706 Arctic avenue. He will continue growing stock at Egg Harbor and will do a wholesale commission business as well as a retail business in Atlantic City.

Grand New Double Daisy

A sport from that great money-making single variety, QUEEN ALEXANDRA, that everybody grows to a good profit. You can do better with this. The flowers are large, averaging three inches in diameter, and none of the flowers comes single at any time of the year. It blooms freely, either under glass or outdoors. Young stock, out of 2½-inch pots, ready for delivery January 1, $25.00 per 100.

Current Comment.

Trade since the holidays has been very quiet; there is practically nothing doing. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, with the exception of roses. Carnations are dropping in price and do not move. Paper White narcissi have been a drug on the market all this season, for some reason or other, and sell for anything that can be got for them. Carnations are bringing from 2½ cents to 4 cents; roses, 8 cents to 12 cents; violets, $1 per hundred; valley, from 2½ cents to 3 cents.

Thomas Cogger is removing from North street to Main street.

Hart's Handy Handle was a much sought for article for Christmas. All the Rochester florists used large quantities and all were enthusiastic as to its possibilities for plant decoration. They found no difficulty in increasing the value of a plant 100 per cent by its use.

We are at a loss to understand how a large out-of-town concern can ship roses here at a price whereby they can be sold on the streets here as low as three for 10 cents, and the legitimate florists are naturally very sore about it.

S.

Beaumont, Tex.—The business of the Beaumont Floral Co. has been purchased by Mrs. B. O. Weissinger and Miss A. M. Browne.

Le Roy, N. Y.—Fred Walter has broken ground for a new house, 20x75 feet, his business having outgrown his present equipment. He says that florists in this vicinity can report a very prosperous season. Christmas trade was exceptionally good—twenty-five per cent better than the year before.

Raton, N. M.—Christmas sales this season were in advance of last year. Cut flowers were more sought after than potted plants. Carnations were the leading flowers, as they always are in this market. The Raton Greenhouse had a few dozen fine Ben Wells chrysanthemums in bloom for Christmas. This firm contemplates rebuilding its greenhouses in the coming summer.

ORCHIDS JUST TO HAND: Cattleya Trianæ, C. labiata, C. Mossiæ, C. Schroederæ, C. Gaskelliana, C. Speciosissima, C. Citrina, C. WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

New Year's trade was like the Christmas trade, more than expected. Stock is scarce and prices keep up. The only change this week is in violets, which are selling cheaper. There is a big demand for good single violets, which sell readily.

A number of decorations are booked for the coming week. The Gudes have three good-sized ones, which will require from 250 to 300 Beauties.

At the club meeting January 6 further arrangements for the carnation convention were made. President Peter Bisset has returned from Porto Rico and has improved very much in health.

A reckoning took place one night last week at the Gude Bros.' store, when one of the drivers was married. After looking over the list, it was found that eleven of the firm's employees had been married during the last eighteen months—a record, Mr. Gude says, to be proud of, as it shows the whole concern is progressive.

Otto Bauer, of the Washington Florists Co., who was laid up with the grippe, is out again. O. O.

DENVER.

Various Notes.

One of the large decorations of the season was the Denver Club ball December 27. It was done by A. H. Bush, of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co., who has had it for the last two years.

The Florists' Bowling League, after an intermission of two weeks, will resume play on Monday evening.

We have an immense crop of good plants from 2-in. pots, ready for immediate shipment at prices running from $2 00 per 100 up for good standard sorts. We will send one thousand in twenty varieties, our selection, for $18.50; five hundred for $9.25.

ALLIANCE

A Hybrid between a Zonal and an Ivy, and which has retained all the good points of both parents, the beautiful soft finish of an Ivy and the hardy constitution of the Zonal. Its color is the most exquisite shade of delicate lilac white, feathered and blotched crimson rose, flowers semi-double, habit dwarf; an ideal pot plant in every way. Strong plants from 2-in. pots, $1.00 per dozen; $6 00 per 100.

IVY GERANIUMS

in good assortment, $3.00 per 100. We make the special offer for a short time of $25.00 per 1000, our selection of five kinds; five hundred for $12.50.

CACTUS GERANIUMS

$1.00 per dozen; $8.00 per 1000.

"PLEASE SEND THE REVIEW."

The REVIEW finds much encouragement in the receipt of letters like the following from a florist at South Framingham, Mass.:

"Please send the REVIEW to ———, South Framingham, Mass., for which I enclose his dollar. The REVIEW is all right, as is shown by my advising Mr. ——— to take it in preference to three others."

But what interests the publisher is that the REVIEW is all right enough for a subscriber to take it upon himself to take a friend's money and mail it in, simply because he thinks the friend will profit by having the REVIEW; it must be all right, sure enough.

The REVIEW frequently receives such courtesies at the hands of its readers, for which it not only returns thanks but promises to provide an increasingly interesting paper.

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN NEBRASKA.

We are planning a greenhouse 25x75 feet, running east and west. The north wall will be five feet high, made of concrete. The south wall will be five feet high, with two feet of glass. The height to the ridge will be twelve feet. There will be a building at each end. We shall heat with hot water. With a temperature of 20 degrees below zero outside, how many 2-inch pipes will be required to maintain 55 degrees? Will the same results be obtained by placing five or six pipes against the north wall and the balance under the bench, or will the circulation be better if all are placed under the benches? What size of boiler will be required? I can buy a second-hand horizontal tubular boiler. Can it be fired as cheaply as the cast-iron boilers? L. M. B.

The house in question can be heated by using sixteen 2-inch returns, supplied by two 3-inch flows, one to each eight returns. If the requirements of the plants to be grown will be satisfied as well by wall pipes as by those under the bench, you may use your own discretion regarding the location of the pipes. With most crops, save lettuce, bottom heat is to be preferred. To heat the plant you should have a boiler rated for not less than 1,200 square feet of radiation. A horizontal, return-tube boiler is one of the most economical types and the best greenhouse steel and cast-iron boilers are designed to secure as far as possible the economy of the horizontal, return tubular boiler. This does not apply to the locomotive type of boiler.

PIPING IN MISSOURI.

I wish to heat, with hot water, two houses, one 20x56, the other 20x66, running east and west. The side walls are to be six feet high, the north wall being boarded up. The south wall is to have five feet six inches of glass. The house will measure twelve feet to the ridge, with glass in three gable ends, the fourth end being protected by the boiler shed. How many 2-inch flows and 1½-inch returns will be required to keep the south house, the 66-foot one, at 65 to 70 degrees, and the north house, the 56-foot one, at 50 to 55 degrees, in zero weather? Or would it be more satisfactory to use 2-inch pipe throughout the whole system, and if so, how many flows and returns would be needed? The heating is to be under the benches. In the future I intend to extend these houses to 100 feet each; so in giving the number of pipes, please figure so that I may extend the flows and returns without changing the entire system.

What size of boiler will be required to heat these houses, with the contemplated extension? C. S. B.

Under the circumstances, I think it economy to use 2-inch pipe throughout the system, so that, when the houses are extended, all that will be necessary will be to extend the flows and returns. The 66-foot house requires fourteen pipes, three of which should be flows, with eleven returns. The 56-foot house requires thirteen pipes, three of which can be flows, although at present only two are really necessary. This will give three flows and ten returns in this house. An extra pipe should be placed in the manifolds under the benches on the exposed sides of the houses, and the others divided as evenly as possible, so that each flow will carry three or four pipes. The boiler for this plant is acknowledged the best for the florist because it is durable, and does its work without trouble and annoyance, saving its cost by the economy in coal bills.

STEAM FOR SIX HOUSES.

Please let me know how to heat my six houses, each fifty feet long. Commencing at the boiler-shed, the widths of the houses are as follows: House No. 1, ten feet; No. 2, twenty feet; Nos. 3, 4 and 5, each twelve feet; No. 6, twenty feet. These houses are to be heated to 50 degrees in zero weather, in this Maryland climate, using only 2-inch pipe, if possible. I should like to use steam if I can turn my water boiler into a steam boiler, but I am not sure that I can do so. My boiler is an Ideal, rated to carry 1,550 feet of 1½-inch pipe. Please state the simplest way of arranging the pipes.

B. H. S.

If you wish to use 2-inch pipe for heating these houses by means of steam, install five pipes, one flow and four returns, in the 10-foot house; six pipes, one flow and five returns, in the 12-foot houses, and eight pipes, one flow and seven returns, in the 20-foot houses. The flow in each case would run under the ridge and the returns along the side walls or beneath the benches, according to the construction of the house or the crop to be grown.

I am not able to identify your boiler from the memoranda given, so judge it would be best that the question of converting it into a steam boiler be taken up directly with the manufacturers.

L. C. C.

CONSHOHOCKEN, PA.—W. S. Harry has installed a new Lord & Burnham boiler.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

New Year's day in this city was much like any other day, and as far as the cut flower business was concerned there was not very much excitement. The funeral of the director of the Department of Public Safety the next day called for about everything that was left; so there was not much complaint. Trade since then, while it has not been what might be called good, has taken everything coming in, so that the wholesalers are not complaining much. However, the reports from the various decorators are not very encouraging for social affairs for the next few weeks.

Various Notes.

The holiday rush seems to have had its effect on some of the boys, as there are numerous cases of sickness reported. Among them are John McClements, bookkeeper, and Gilbert Weaklen, manager for Randolph & McClements. Joe Dick, another old employee of the firm, is considering a trip to California in the near future, for his health.

B. L. Elliott and wife left Sunday night for Pasadena, Cal.

Lincoln I. Neff is out, after being confined to bed for four or five days with grippe.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, had to be taken home Saturday from her place of business in a carriage, and is still confined to bed.

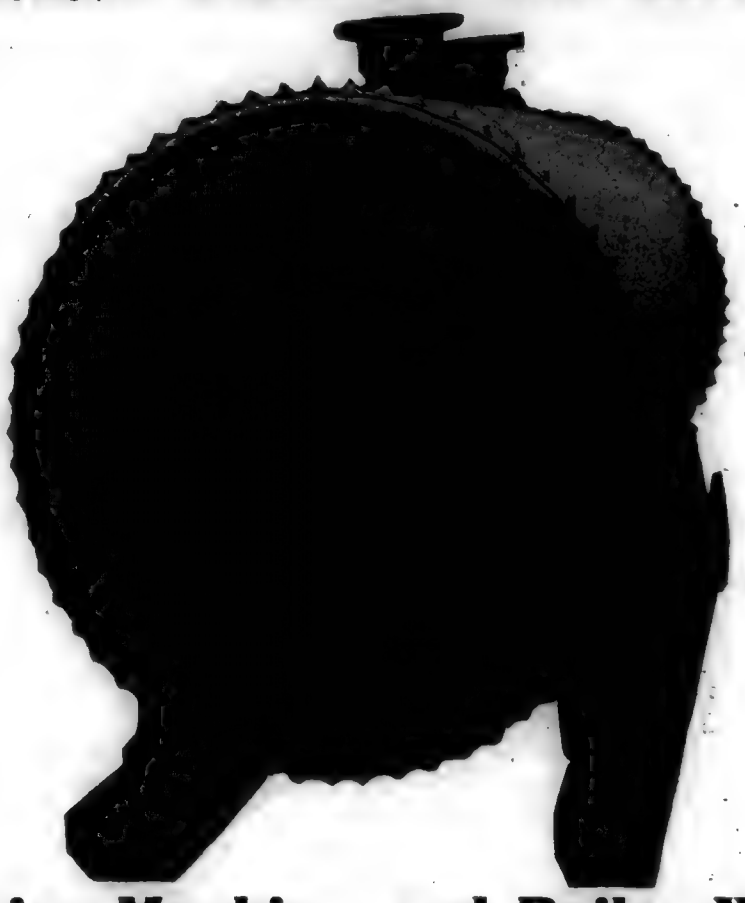
E. C. Ludwig, of Allegheny Market, is another sufferer from grippe.

The Finleyville Floral Co. is arranging to construct a new iron frame house, 42x220, for carnations. This is one of the younger concerns and has been growing good stock.

Fred Burki, president of the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., has let the contract for a large refrigerator plant, which is now in course of construction. Rooms will be provided for storing valley pips and peonies; also coolers for cut flowers. The system is the direct brine system. The cost, when complete, will be about $6,000. Hoo-Hoo.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.



Among those visiting Newport last week were the Rickards brothers, New York; John Beaton, representing R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston; J. H. Cheyne, representing Schlegel & Fottler Co., Boston, and W. E. Marshall, New York. It so happened that the annual dinner of the Hatchet Club, an organization to which many gardeners and florists belong, took place while the Rickards brothers were here, and as the fame of these brothers as entertainers was well known, they were prevailed on to add to the enjoyment of the occasion. The members of the club and the guests are enthusiastic in praises of the talents displayed by the New York boys.

The success of the seedsmen in booking orders seems to dispel the idea of any curtailment of expenses this year, so far as Newport cottage owners are concerned.

Both members of the new firm of Knight & Struck are well known in Newport and the general impression is, and the desire also, that a successful career is ahead of them. R. R.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

McKINLEY DAY.

January 29 is McKinley day, or Carnation day, as the trade would like to have it known.

Every retail florist should do his part to help in the work of establishing the custom of honoring McKinley's memory by wearing a carnation January 29. Retailers who are following the commendable practice of doing some regular newspaper advertising should see to it that their copy is changed to call attention to Carnation day, and where no newspaper advertising is done, a sign in the window at least may be used. There ought to be a picture of McKinley in the window of every flower store January 29, and the flowers in the windows should be carnations.

Carnation day this year is specially worthy of working up because the supply of the flower is much heavier than it usually is at this date and carnations can be sold cheaper. A florist can well afford to start the practice on the morning of January 29 by decorating his friends and the passers-by in the early hours. An example goes far. Last year one enterprising man put a carnation in the button-hole of every street-car employee when the car left the barns in the morning, and in another town the florist fitted out each policeman with a boutonniere.

Do your part, but don't raise prices.

ODORS IN FLOWER STORE.

What effect has the odor of steam from a laundry on cut flowers and plants? The reason I ask this question is that the store next to me is vacant and the partition between the stores is only of lath and plaster. If there is any odor in the adjoining store it comes through to my store, and I understand the landlord has rented the vacant room to a Chinese laundry. If this is true I believe I shall have to vacate. C. M.

It seems to me the question is not so much as to the effect of the odor of a Chinese laundry on cut flowers and plants as it is the effect on the proprietor and on the customers. Whatever else a flower store may be, it should smell sweetly. If the Chinamen start operations under the conditions you describe, you doubtless will see a falling off in your trade, which will justify you in removal. And this is to say nothing of the fact that a lover of flowers, such as a flower store proprietor must necessarily be, would not care to spend his days in the atmosphere of a Chinese laundry.

H. O.

THE BROKEN COLUMN.

With the average rural florist the pillow is made more often than any other design. With city florists the spray or flat bunch is made oftener than any other arrangement of funeral flowers, but in small towns the wire frame still is the beginning of the execution of almost every order. Next to the pillow, and when something a little more elaborate, or expensive, is wanted, the broken column often is called for.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a column made by Claud Wisely, of Murphysboro, Ill. It shows the simplest form of this design, which may be elaborated in a large number of ways, by the addition of loosely arranged, long-stemmed flowers and foliage at the base, or by the addition of a circling garland of flowers and foliage.

There is one point in which the piece illustrated misses the fundamental idea of the design. It is called a broken column, but this column is not broken. The significance is that life is broken off, and it should be indicated by a somewhat irregularly slanting top, filled in with a slightly deeper shade of flowers than is used for the solid body of the column. If white roses are used for the column, the broken top should be of Uncle John, or something to convey the same idea of a break.

Broken Column, by Claude Wisely, Murphysboro, Ill.

GALAX LEAVES.

I will be grateful to you if you will advise as to the care of galax leaves. Can they be too cold and what is the best way to freshen or soak them?

AMBITIOUS GREENHORN.

Jobbers carry galax leaves in cold storage or, if small quantities are to be carried for only a short time, the bunches are set in shallow vessels of water, so that only the stems will be immersed, and the dishes set in any cool place. If galax leaves have turned black, the dump is the place for them. When Ambitious Greenhorn can buy 1,000 galax leaves for $1, he need not bother about storing, but can get frequent shipments from his wholesaler. But he should not forget to sign his full name and address to the order. He overlooked it in sending the inquiry.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Bride's Bouquet.

The illustration on page 5 is from a photograph of a bride's bouquet made by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. This shower bunch, of white roses and lilies of the valley, tied with gauze and satin taffeta ribbon, is charming in its dainty grace.

STRONG MEN AND CALVES.

The Chicago Tribune, having the lion's share of about all there is going in the advertising line in Chicago, is conducting an extensive campaign to develop new advertisers. This is the way it introduces the subject in a full page advertisement:

"Suckling calves grow into producing cattle not because they have intelligence enough to wean themselves and drink quietly out of a pail that's set before them, but because somebody is wise enough — and strong enough — to take them at the right time, stick their heads into the pail and hold them there.

"The main reason that most small advertisers do not grow into merchant princes is not because there is any lack of those wise enough to hold their heads in the pail—but few are strong enough, and it is not the custom to do so. Foolish human beings cling to the right 'to do as they please with their own,' as their most priceless heritage. Foolish calves have no such rights—therefore the majority of them wax fat.

"The right of an individual to do as he pleases with his own money is undoubted—the wisdom of it is not so sure. The records of R. G. Dun & Co. indicate that it is about 90 per cent foolish, counting only the real failures. All of the half-successes are included in the other ten per cent.

"Advertising is sometimes made to appear as a royal road to easy wealth. The Tribune does not present it as such. The Tribune knows, however, that advertising, intelligently conceived and capably handled, is the greatest constructive force in modern business, and demands consideration as such by every merchant who hopes to succeed beyond the average."

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

A BEGINNER IN MUMS.

I have never grown chrysanthemums, but want to try some for next fall. I will have no room till late in April. Will that be too late to buy good, healthy plants? Is a cool, shady house better than outdoors for the plants?

A Beginner.

A Beginner can buy good plants all through the season up to July, many growers advertising stock continuously in the columns of the Review.

Plants do better with us inside than when grown outside, and I think Beginner will find inside culture necessary if he looks for perfect foliage. The cooler the house can be kept the better, but the plants do not need shade, as much of it will make them weak and long-jointed. A little to break the fierce rays of the sun will do no harm, but do not start out by thinking that chrysanthemums must have shade. C. H. T.

STOCK PLANTS.

The season is over and interest in the mums is transferred to some other crop, and too frequently at this time do we see the stock plants stuck under the bench and shamefully neglected. After a month or two Mr. Florist will take them up and set them in a flat, and later he will wonder why his stock is so weak. If you want good cuttings, do not let the old plants be put under the bench at all, but if you have, as most places have, a house that runs cold at one end, set your plants out there and let them get all the air and light possible.

The chrysanthemum is never really dormant. Just as soon as the flower bud is swelling the plant makes suckers at the base for another year, and these suckers, unless frozen hard, keep green and maintain a root action and therefore must have water. I have for years argued in favor of taking off these suckers after the plant has flowered, rooting them and throwing away the old plant altogether. When the plants, after rooting, are kept cool and handled right, they give lots of splendid cuttings in the spring and these cuttings have more push and vigor than cuttings from old plants. But if the stock is apt to be neglected in midwinter, as it is in so many commercial establishments, then it is better to hold over the old stock.

A night temperature of 45 degrees is plenty for wintering stock and less than that does no harm in cold weather.

If any of your stock had rust on it throw it out, after taking what cuttings you need, so that the spores will not be carried over for another year. We hear little of rust now, except from some grower who neglected this simple precaution. Charles H. Totty.

MUMS IN LETTUCE BENCHES.

I am growing lettuce and cucumbers under glass, and would like to know if I could grow mums, instead of the first crop of lettuce, benched in the lettuce soil, which is a light, black, sandy loam, fertilized with horse and cow manure. I wish to grow one, two and three blooms to the plant. I have raised benches. Could I plunge the mums outside in the spring, as I do not get my cucumbers out until the first part of August? Or, I have two benches in each house that I do not grow cucumbers on, but on a trellis over them. If I plunged the mums in these benches in June, would the spraying of the cucumbers overhead injure the mums? Could I use the same soil for lettuce afterward, or would the roots of the mums interfere? My benches are six inches deep. C. H. T.

I see no reason why C. H. T. should not grow a crop of mums before he plants his lettuce. It is often done and with good success. The roots of the chrysanthemums do not interfere to any extent with the lettuce, but you should have the soil new to start the mums in. I am not a believer in running the same soil in the house for different crops, but I have seen the mum soil growing fine lettuce so many times that I do believe in it to that extent.

I think I would rather keep the plants outside till August than put them in the house under the cucumber trellis, because, while the spraying of the cucumbers is more of an advantage than a detriment to the mums, still a trellis covered with vines would mean considerable shade and this the mum does not want. Instead of plunging the plants outside, were I in the position of C. H. T., I would prepare a bed outside, using nice soil, and then set out the plants in it. They would be less trouble to take care of, growth would not get stunted and, if carefully lifted with a nice ball, they would hardly feel the transfer to the house. The chief trouble with plants outside in pots is that the violent thunder storms we get in July make the plants waterlogged, and rust and leaf disease are inevitable. Plants set out in the open ground keep free of disease unless the summer is very wet, and the roots do not rot as they do in pots.

When he has removed the mums, C. H. T. should see that the house is well fumigated before the lettuce comes in, as the green and black flies, which are hardly ever absent from chrysanthemums, will make lettuce unsalable if not closely watched. Charles H. Totty.

FLORICULTURAL EDUCATION.

I write today, not only for myself, but for all the young men who intend to give their life and time to floriculture or horticulture in its full sense. I have, I think, a fairly good knowledge of most plants as far as culture, treatment and their habits are concerned, but I do not understand very well the art of budding or grafting, and do not thoroughly understand hybridizing, although I have done a little of it.

But what I wish to ask you, Mr. Editor, is a question which would interest all young men who are contemplating entering this most beautiful work, a question which should interest the professional man and all who call themselves florists, nurserymen or plant breeders. The question is this: Where can we young men learn our trade as you florists, nurserymen and plant breeders have learned it?

I am, and I know others are, more than wanting to learn what there is to learn, from seed sowing to hybridizing, but I fail to find a single place where they are willing to take us and bother to tell or show us anything more than what we can pick up ourselves. And as for college, it takes money and there is a lot of red tape, and only book knowledge when you get out. And I don't see why in our florist trade, which is the trade beautiful, any firm would object to taking in a couple of us and giving us the alphabet clear through.

I am sure that if we young fellows don't learn, the florist will be a thing of the past in a short time. Kindly, Mr. Editor, see what you can do for us all, as in my special case I would find it most helpful if I could come with some firm or individual doing budding, grafting, etc., commercially. Don't believe, however, that I mean it in these lines only. It is the same in the retail store, where fancy decorating and such things are done. THOS. A. KEMPTON.

BEST STRAINS OF ASTER.

I want to plant a bed of asters in the greenhouse, so I can get blooms for Decoration day or sooner. What varieties should I plant? Where can I secure the seed? A. M. M.

There are half a dozen advertisers of aster seeds in this issue of the REVIEW. Any one of them will be glad to supply your needs.

ASTERS FOR INDOOR CULTURE.

I have been informed that asters grown in greenhouses for early cut flowers are about twice the size of those grown outdoors. What is the best time for sowing the seed and for potting them? Also give me any other hints on growing them. G. H. H.

It is a fact that asters can be grown under glass successfully and of remarkably fine quality. If you are desirous of trying this method of culture, sow a batch of seeds about the end of January in shallow flats. Keep these shaded, but well up to the light. Remove the shading as the little seedlings germinate. Sow in a compost of leaf-mold and loam, using more of the former than the latter. A temperature of 55 degrees at night is ample for successful germination. I prefer to prick off into flats and from these into the benches direct, rather than trouble with pot culture, which entails much more labor. Any unused benches in a house kept at 45 to 50 degrees at night will grow good asters. They like a generous compost, such as you would grow chrysanthemums or carnations in. Do not plant in soil which has been impoverished by another crop, or you will only have failure for your efforts.

When planting in the benches, allow nine inches each way between the plants. Stir the surface soil frequently and do not overwater at first. They need lots of water, however, when growing rapidly. If you want large flowers, rub off all side buds. If you want them extra large, grow only two or three to a plant and use a stake to each, as you would to mums. If good ordinary blooms are required, do no disbudding. In color the best call is for white; after that for pink and blue. The best forcing varieties are Queen of the Earlies and Comet. The latter produces fine quality blooms under glass. C. W.

A CHRISTMAS CROP.

The accompanying illustration affords a somewhat novel demonstration of how great was the Christmas crop at the establishment of Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, Ind. It is from a photograph taken December 22 and shows the cut of that day. After the stock had been hardened up in water, and before packing for shipping, the entire day's cut was taken into the open air for photographing for a souvenir postal card. It shows that the firm had a remarkably large crop of tea roses, but not so large a crop of Beauties. The people gathered back of the flowers are employees, with the exception of Mr. Weiland himself, who stands fifth from the left side of the picture. Several of the growers have been on the place ever since it was built, and one of them began work before the houses were started.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Propagating.

After the cuttings have been set in the sand the real task of propagating begins. It does not require any great amount of skill to take off good cuttings, nor to prepare them for the sand, but it does require both skill and good judgment to handle the propagating house so that a good strike is secured. Up to this point in the process it is not difficult to define clearly what should be done and how it should be done. But from this point onward it is more difficult.

The successful propagator does not go by rules very much, nor can he just always give you a definite reason for every action he may take. Like the thorough grower, who can feel as soon as he steps inside the door whether the temperature is correct, without looking at the thermometer, the experienced propagator can tell by the appearance of his cuttings whether they are right. And of course he can tell what steps must be taken under certain conditions, in order to avoid trouble before it puts in its appearance. I can give you a few rules which you will find it necessary to follow, but the small details you must fill in for yourself and, I might add, it is the small details which really count in getting a full strike.

The First Watering.

The first watering should be so thorough that the sand becomes as full of water as it will hold, with proper drainage underneath. During the first few days the cuttings are like cut flowers; they can draw only water to keep them fresh and there should be no lack of it in the sand, so that the end which is cut does not dry instead of forming a callous. After the callous is formed, suffering does not take place so quickly. Spraying overhead must also be resorted to, until the cuttings have begun to draw water. Later the overhead spraying should be dispensed with as much as possible.

The whole secret of successful propagating lies in keeping your cuttings in a fresh condition without keeping them too damp overhead. It is this proper amount of spraying, etc., that taxes your skill to the utmost at times. As long as the days are cloudy and cold and the atmosphere is fairly damp, you will have no trouble in getting the cuttings to stand up and naturally take root. So there is your cue. When these conditions do not prevail naturally, then you must provide them artificially. By shading and spraying you can usually manage it until the sun gets quite strong toward spring.

Avoid Extremes.

To go to extremes in these matters, however, is almost as bad as to neglect them. Especially is this true with the spraying. If you keep the cuttings too damp you bring on damping off, or rust, or leaf spot, etc. A safe rule when you spray is to calculate that the cuttings will be dry overhead by evening and only spray when it is necessary. We have found that very often, when a batch is inclined to wilt, if we omit the daily spraying and lay newspapers over them from about 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., also using the curtain to keep the sun and drafts off, we can hold them up. The paper helps to keep in enough dampness arising from the sand to keep the cuttings fresh without any water standing on the foliage. I am a great believer in the shading or covering method when it is employed in the proper way.

You will also find that when a high wind is blowing on a mild day and perhaps the ventilators must be opened some, the curtain will be insufficient to keep the cuttings fresh. Evaporation is too rapid and even spraying will not suffice. But by covering the cuttings with paper to hold in the moisture, and dropping the curtain to keep the sun off the papers, your cuttings will come through unscathed. Take the papers off as soon as atmospheric conditions will warrant. Cuttings, like plants, enjoy plenty of fresh air when the air is properly laden with moisture. Never cover the cuttings with paper and allow the warm sun to beat on it, but provide a curtain, as well, to keep the sun off the paper. To allow the sun to beat on the paper will produce a warm, humid atmosphere, which is highly favorable to the cutting bench fungus, leaf spot, etc.

You will find a great difference in varieties and you must watch each variety closely. Some will be inclined to wilt most during the first few days, before they have commenced to draw properly, while others will stand up finely for two weeks and then suddenly begin to droop. That is when your fine work is required and one is apt to go to excess in spraying. A. F. J. Baur.

THE KING'S CARNATIONS.

Mackenzie & Moncor, the well-known British horticultural builders, are at present erecting three new carnation houses at Sandringham, England, King Edward's favorite residence, to be devoted to carnations grown in benches on the American plan. Several houses have previously been devoted to their culture, the plants, however, being all pot-grown. Queen Alexandra is specially fond of carnations and all the best American sorts are grown, in addition to quantities of Malmaisons. King Edward's favorite flower is the violet and at Sandringham an effort is made to supply these every day in the year. W. N. C.

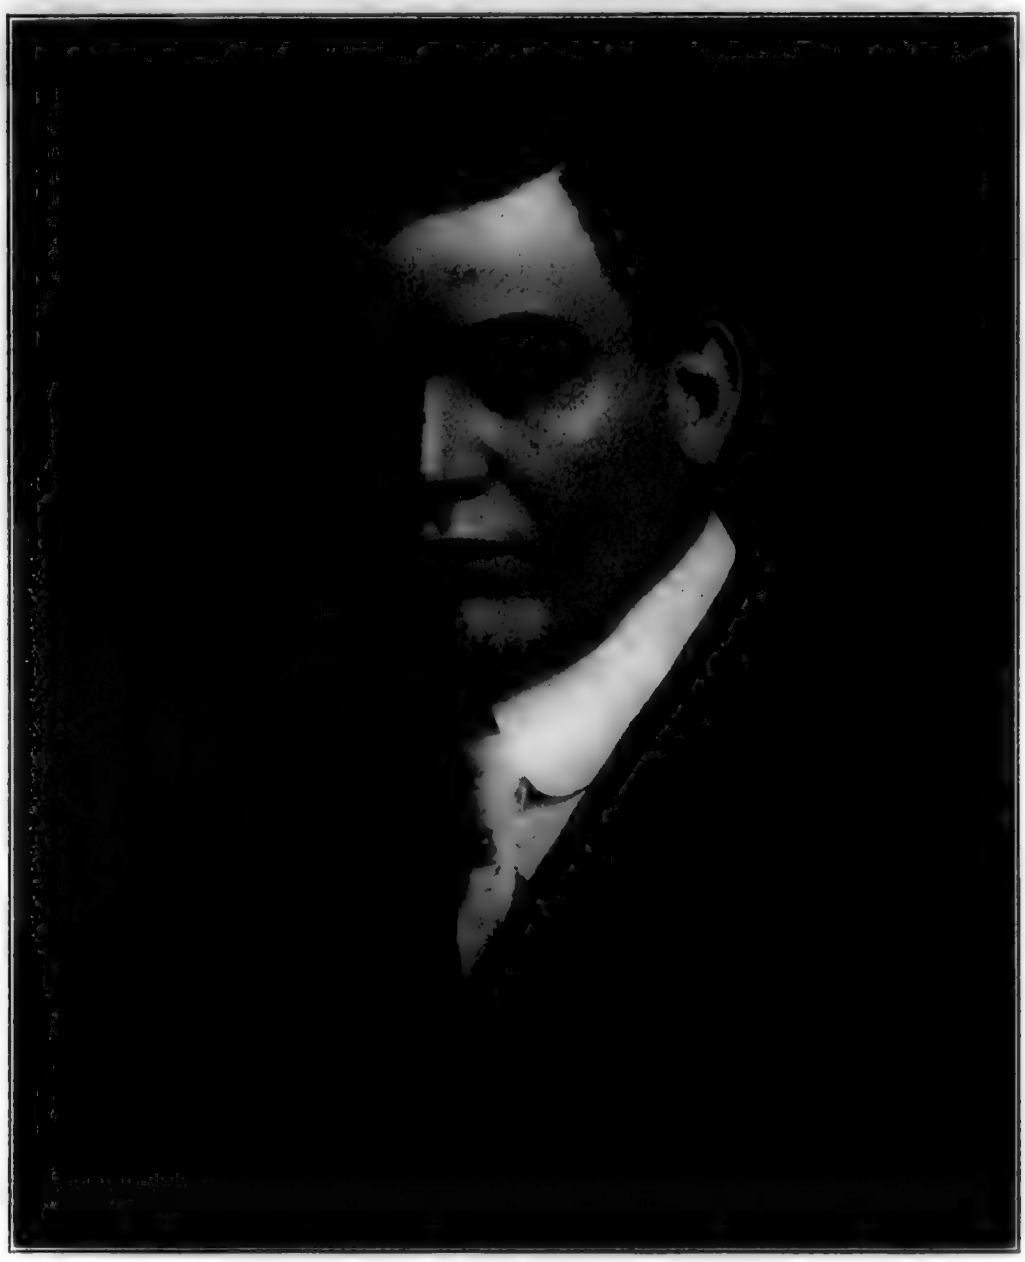
STIGMONOSE ON CARNATIONS.

Will you kindly tell us what is the matter with plants of carnations like the sample enclosed and what to do for them? How often shall we use fertilizer? How shall we put it on, and what quantity? M. C. J.

Your plants are badly affected with the disease called stigmonose, which has been described a number of times recently and treatment outlined. See the REVIEW of October 3, 1907, page 9, under the head of "Punctures by Insects."

When you should begin feeding your plants and in what manner will depend altogether on the condition of the plants and the soil. If the soil is becoming exhausted you can use bone meal, sheep manure, cow manure and wood ashes to good advantage, providing you feed very lightly. Follow the same course as outlined for R. M. in this issue.

A. F. J. B.



SMALL BLOOMS, BROWN LEAVES.

I am sending under separate cover some carnation blooms; also a few leaves from T. W. Lawson that are brown at the tips. Can you tell me what is wrong with the carnation blooms and what is the cause of the leaves being in that condition? In the same house with the pink Lawson from which the affected leaves were taken we have White Lawson and Lady Bountiful, which seem to be all right. We use cayenne pepper once each week for thrips. I thought that perhaps that had burned the leaves. Would tobacco fumigating cause the same trouble? We run Lawson about 53 degrees at night and the others about 50 degrees. We ventilate all we can.

I am also sending a sample of the soil in which they are growing. Would there be anything in the soil that would cause either the leaves or blooms to come as you find the specimens? I have given them a dressing of hardwood ashes and lime twice. Do you think they are suffering from a lack of sufficient plant food, as they are coming smaller now than they did earlier in the fall? R. M.

The specimens you sent were badly frozen on the way and did not disclose as much as they would have done had they been fresh. The leaves appear to have been burned by the tobacco fumes. The blooms and buds looked as though they had been injured by thrips, though their frozen condition makes this somewhat doubtful.

The soil you sent along is of a very light texture and would become exhausted early in the season, necessitating light feeding regularly by this time. No doubt that is why your blooms are coming small. I would advise you to begin a systematic course of light feeding, to be followed faithfully during the rest of the season. Use bone meal, sheep manure, cow manure and hardwood ashes or lime. Apply the cow manure either as a liquid or as a mulch, and the others as a top dressing. Apply them in rotation and at intervals of ten days between each application. You will soon see an improvement in the size of your blooms, but be careful not to overdo it. If you notice the blooms getting soft or keeping poorly, then break off feeding at once. Give all the air you can, and in fact do all you can to combat the ill effects of the feeding. A. F. J. B.

PRESIDENT KILL.

The year 1908 promises to be the most important in the history of the Chicago Florists' Club. In March the club will be called upon to entertain the American Rose Society, and in November it will have an important part in the work of the national flower show of the Society of American Florists, with hundreds of trade visitors to look out for. For such a year no better president could have been selected than Leonard Kill, who was elected to the office January 9. Mr. Kill is one of the younger generation of florists and endowed with the young man's capacity for dispatching much work. He has been for some years the manager of the selling end of the business of Peter Reinberg and has been actively associated with many trade enterprises. He is a member of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and also a member of the S. A. F. and the Carnation Society.

Mr. Kill enjoys a somewhat unique distinction, and one that he never fails to mention whenever the subject of age is brought up. He was born in a barn, and he is proud of it. His nativity occurred just after the Chicago fire, when his father and mother lost everything they possessed and even were separated, each thinking the other dead, for more than two weeks. Later they and another family erected a rough board building, afterward used as a barn, amid the ruins at the corner of Kinzie and Market streets, and made it their home for some months. Here Mr. Kill was born May 5, 1872. He married into floriculture, Mrs. Kill being a sister of Mrs. Reinberg and of Mrs. Adam Zender, and related to the Weiland, Wietor and other families, well known and long engaged in the trade.

RICHMOND A THIRD YEAR.

Kindly state as to whether or not you would advise carrying Richmond roses over the third year. I allowed them to dry off and in June moved them from a raised bench to a solid bed with tile drainage and they are looking fine. Would you advise carrying Chatenay over the second year? J. H.

Richmond roses are admirably suited for carrying over, and can be carried over successfully the third year. Last fall I saw a house of Richmond that was planted when the rose was first disseminated and they were really the best Richmond I have seen. They were on solid benches. Ribes.

IMPOVERISHED PLANTS.

I send a rose plant taken from a solid bed where the plants have been grown ten years. They have been cut down and rested each summer, the top soil removed and new soil applied. The old plants give fine blooms each winter, but there are sections in one bench where they will not grow. We set 4-inch strong plants there each year, which make a fair start, then deteriorate. Why is this thus? J. J. L.

This failure of certain parts of the bench to grow healthy stock indicates that there is something wrong, or at any rate a difference in the condition of that part from the rest of the house. This difference is evidently in the drainage, or perhaps it may be in its proximity to the radiators.

The plants have certainly been suffering from want of water at the very base of the roots. This has caused a stunted growth, which is hard to get rid of. This stunted growth has also been the cause of eel worm getting a lodgment. This parasite is present and may be blamed as the cause, whereas it is only one of the results of impoverishment.

Stir up the soil between the lines and give it a thorough soaking at least once a week till bright weather comes. Keep stirring, give plenty of water and ventilation. Do not feed. Ribes.

LATE PLANTED STOCK.

I am sending you two rose plants, which are samples of some of our stock. The varieties are Bride and Maid. We planted them in August in rotted sod and one-fourth cow manure. They started to grow and seemed to be in perfect health, blooming the first time with large, fine flowers. After the first crop the plants were attacked by mildew. The leaves began to fall off. Sulphur fumes did not seem to do any good.

Some of the plants are coming out, but the leaves are light green, on some the small leaves withering after they came out. A great many of the plants are dead and are turning black on the ends of the branches. What is wrong and what can we do to benefit them? We are thinking of putting in a new stock of plants. J. Y. L.

From a thorough examination of these samples I am unable to find any trace of disease. August planting is rarely a success. The long, clear days of June and July are the days when young plants get established and make their best growth. Usually when planting has been deferred until August, the young stock has suffered during the previous months from being confined to pots during hot weather and the plants are shy to begin growing. The samples show a weak growth and poor root action.

By stirring the surface and treating them carefully they can be brought into good health, but by the time this is effected the season will be nearly over; that is, if the rest of the plants are as weak as samples. Better get some good grower to look them over. Ribes.

NITRATE OF SODA.

We have a bench of roses that were given too much nitrate of soda, which turned the leaves yellow and a great many fell off. Will you please let us know what to do to straighten them out again? E. W. & Co.

I have frequently pointed to the danger of the inexperienced using chemical fertilizers and have advised the use of the product of the cow barn as being almost a perfect manure, and safe. Let me again warn the inexperienced of the danger they run in using chemicals.

More rose plants are injured by overfeeding than the reverse, and where liquid feeding is used the food is in an assimilable state and the plants are liable to gorge themselves. Nitrate, being quick in its action, should be applied sparingly and should be well diluted for a first application.

As the plants get accustomed to this class of food the dose can be strengthened, always keeping a close watch on the result.

These plants, having got such a sickening, are not likely, even with the best kind of care, to recover sufficiently to produce paying crops till late in spring. Reduce the temperature to 52 degrees.

New Rose House of A. Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind.

New Rose House, 50x250, of A. Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind.

Reduce the water supply, but keep the syringe going. As the plants begin to show a new crop of leaves, raise the temperature gradually and resume watering. Do not attempt any kind of feeding until the plants have entirely recovered.

RIBES.

RASMUSSEN'S NEW HOUSE.

The accompanying illustrations show the new rose house of Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., and will be of special interest as an example of a home-made structure, the house having been built entirely by the men regularly employed on the place.

The house is 50x250 feet and the framework is entirely of iron with the exception of the sashbars and eaveplates, which were purchased, cut to length, of the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago. The interior illustration shows clearly the arrangement of the pipe supports, of which there are six lines in the house. The two lines in the center are 1½-inch pipes, the line next outside on each side 1¼-inch pipe, and the outside lines 1-inch pipe. The purlins also are 1-inch pipe and the tie rod at the top of the two center lines is ⅜-inch round iron. All the pipes are set in concrete and are galvanized one foot above the ground. The pipes are eight feet three inches apart.

The posts for the side walls are 2x4 red cedar set in concrete and the eaveplates are light, measuring only 1½x3 inches. The ventilation is on both sides of the ridge, the ventilators alternating, and of course Mr. Rasmussen used his patent self-balancing ventilator sash, which he thinks has many merits and no faults. There also is ventilation on both sides of the house, the self-balancing sash being used here, set alternating, one run of glass solid, the next run hinged, etc. The glass is 16x24 and is laid the 24-inch way, so that the house is not only extremely light, but is thoroughly ventilated and comparatively cool in the summer.

The house is heated by a main passing across the center and feeding five lines of flow pipes overhead on brackets attached to the roof supports, the returns being underneath the benches. The house is used for roses and the benches are made of pecky cypress, which has now come into general use for this purpose, because of its lasting qualities.

GARRETTSVILLE, O.—C. E. Tinker says that 1907 was the banner year for florists in this locality, but he looks for 1908 to be still better.

IPOMOEAS AND PRIMULAS.

Will you kindly inform me when is the right time to sow ipomœas for spring sales; also Chinese primroses for Christmas blooming? C.

Ipomœa grandiflora alba, better known as the moonflower, requires to be sown somewhat earlier than the other ipomœas, which are commonly termed morning-glories. The moonflowers may be sown during February, if strong plants are wanted for late spring sales. The Ipomœa imperialis and I. purpurea germinate very quickly, and if you sow them early in April you will be sufficiently early.

Chinese primroses for Christmas sales can be sown in February or the early part of March. Plants from such sowings will make nice specimens in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. C. W.

SEASONABLE ADVICE.

Learning from Experience.

Probably every grower has now straightened up after his Christmas rush, and will now make it his first business to go over all his stock in a most thorough way, doing things which have needed doing for several days, but which have been necessarily neglected for the last week or so, owing to the extra work that naturally arises at this holiday season. This done, I think that before laying your plans for next season it is the best way to compare this one, up to date, with the corresponding time last season, and so note where you have gained or lost ground, and why. You would note, also, what the demands of your customers are, with their tendencies, which are constantly changing and which the alert grower is ever on the watch for, in order to be able to meet their wishes, and at times to mold these wishes for their improvement and your own good.

How were those potted violets? Were they up to the standard that you aimed for early in the fall? Did you pick the flowers from them longer than you should, so that there was not the quantity of bloom on them that you wished? Again, have you kept a record of the time you potted them, and all the items of treatment, so that you may not make one or two errors next year that you made this? No, it seems to you now that you can remember all those things, but the most of us find, when the year rolls around, that we are not quite sure about these things, and that the only safe way is to put them down in black and white and have them ready for handy and indisputable reference.

Plants for Propagating.

And now, how about those better plants that you wish to use to propagate from? It is to be presumed that you have them all marked by this time. Surely you want to hustle if you have not; otherwise you will find yourself, a little later, propagating from plants that were not satisfactory in the height of the season, when you most want bloom, and as a result you have more stock to discard next season, and less to propagate from. Some of you may have heard me say something like this before, but then, we sometimes forget if our attention is not called to the matter.

Watering.

Watering your plants is one of the things that need the best of judgment and care, but is one of the tasks that will become easier soon, with the lengthening days. However, it is hard to tell, at times, what the weather is going to be and just how much water to give the plants, and it is a good plan to so arrange your picking and watering that you water when you have just picked, so as not to throw mud and dirt on the flowers, which ruins them.

Violets are a water-loving plant and yet they do not like to be at all soggy or heavy, with stale water that does not drain away freely. No hard and fast rules can ever be given for watering, as so much depends on weather, soil, temperature, wind, etc., so that one has to learn this, like some other things, mostly by experience in his own houses and grounds. But this always holds true, that, given proper drainage, violets like a thorough wetting when you are making a business of watering. Also, when you have the right force on the hose, and a bright, airy day, they seem to enjoy a good bath right on the crown and it makes them look as cheerful as they do in the field on a dewy morning.

R. E. Shuphelt.

SPIRAEAS FOR EASTER.

Is it too late to plant spiræas for Easter? Also, is it absolutely necessary to expose to frost before potting and forcing? Kindly state the method.

H. C. O.

As Easter comes late this year, the date being April 19, there is no need to pot up the spiræas yet. Freezing is not necessary. Recourse is frequently had to it where early forcing is done, but a natural rest for the clumps is all that is needed to ensure their starting well. If you start your clumps about the end of January they will be in season, if grown in a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. The ordinary S. Japonica will come in ten days to a fortnight earlier than such sorts as Gladstone, astilboides and grandiflora.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Adiantum Farleyense.

Erroneous ideas about the culture and propagation of Adiantum Farleyense have caused many a grower to fight shy of it. This is to be regretted, as there is no more beautiful fern for many decorative purposes, while in design work it is unexcelled.

Those who are intending to increase their stock should start right away by dividing the crowns of the older plants and planting them in a propagating case where they can obtain a brisk bottom heat. Plant the divided crowns in clean, sharp sand three or four inches deep, which has good drainage below it. The glass must be well shaded, and the case kept moderately close and moist. It is really surprising how soon, under such conditions, the little crowns will emit new roots and can be lifted with a ball of sand adhering to them. Use very little loam at the first potting into 2-inch pots, but good leaf-mold and sand. At the next shift, equal parts loam and leaf-mold may be used, while for later pottings some well dried cow manure and fibrous loam, with some powdered charcoal and sharp sand, make suitable compost.

Grow the plants in a close and moist house, keeping them well shaded until they have attained a size carrying salable fronds, when more light will harden the fronds. Copper or galvanized wires will be needed to support the individual fronds. These can be comparatively thin and should be about a foot long, with an eye partly open at the upper end to rest the stalks of the fronds on. When in active growth liquid manure water is beneficial. Always keep water from the fronds, but keep the surface of the benches moist. Use great care in fumigating, as this fern is very susceptible to injury. Farleyense will stand well in a comparatively cool house if the fronds have been inured to moderately strong light and have not been coddled too much. A temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night grows this fern well.

Adiantum Cuneatum.

Seedlings raised from spores are the easiest method of propagation for the ever popular maidenhair, Adiantum cuneatum. Casual seedlings can be picked up, also, as they frequently germinate under benches in the summer months or in any spot where cool and moist conditions prevail. Propagation by division of the root is often practiced and works fairly well, but seedlings grown along develop into finer plants. In dividing the plants, which, if pot grown, will be a network of roots, the best plan is to chop them into pieces with a heavy knife. Start in small pots of leaf-mold and sand, keeping close and moist until nicely rooted.

Large specimens in pots, which may be in sour and wormy soil, should have the compost washed clean away with the hose and be given a fresh start in new soil. Fibrous loam, leaf-mold, sand and a little dry cow manure are a good medium. Plants seem to be benefited by a rest before being overhauled. Comparative dryness at the root and slightly cooler quarters for a few weeks will be followed by vigorous growth when the plants start up again in heat.

Snails are very troublesome among all adiantums and soon destroy a great many fronds if not looked after. Traps of potatoes or turnips, scooped out and frequently examined, will catch both these and wood-lice. Lettuce and cabbage leaves are also good bait, while fresh. Removal of the pots and pouring boiling water over the bench will kill many, as will dusting air-slaked lime over it. When sphagnum moss is spread over the surface of the benches for moisture, as is sometimes done in the case of A. Farleyense, there is sure to be added trouble. Better to use common wood moss, which is usually free from these destructive pests.

Palms.

At this season of the year root action is not very active, but it is a time when commercial florists can better spare a few hours to overhaul palms and other foliage plants than will be the case a month hence. Probably you have found time to clean most of your plants since the Christmas rush ended. If not, take advantage of any spare time to do it.

Palms do not require large shifts. In doing any repotting, therefore, use care not to transfer into pots more than two inches larger than the plants have been growing in. Make the drainage good. Cover this with moss; put some of the rougher compost in first and be sure that you pack the soil firmly with a potting stick around the sides of the plant and leave ample surface space for water. In the case of such palms as Cocos Weddelliana, which develop roots slowly, very small shifts are necessary, and the use of even dry cow manure is not to be recommended. On the other hand, in the case of kentias, arecas, phœnix, latanias and livistonas, we generally add some bone meal or old cow manure to the fibrous loam and sand. Except for young seedlings, leaf-mold is of no value. Where plants are being shifted into large pots or tubs, where they must remain some years, somewhat coarser bone can be used. Some soot is also a useful ingredient in the soil, as well as being of much benefit when the plants are well established, if used in liquid form occasionally. Palms require but little shade yet. They need, however, a good syringing at least once a day and plenty of moisture in the atmosphere.

Miscellaneous Bulbous Plants.

Hitherto tulips have come rather short-stemmed, but after the middle of January it is possible to get more length to La Reine and other popular forcing varieties. It is still necessary to draw these up well in the dark before placing them on the benches. This will be unnecessary after February 1. Trumpet narcissi are now coming of good quality, particularly that excellent variety Golden Spur, which quite discounts such sorts as N. princeps and Trumpet Major after it comes in season. Batches of these narcissi and the tulips, housed once a week, will keep up a good succession.

Establishment of Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia.

Hyacinths in pots and flats should be well sprouted now and, if kept dark and warm for a time, will have stems of good length. Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites come on very fast, even in a comparatively cold house, and no forcing will be required for them now.

Keep ixias, sparaxis and tritomas on a shelf or bench in a cool house; 45 to 48 degrees at night will suit them. Be careful not to overwater them. Freesias as they pass out of flower should, if possible, be afforded a light position, if the bulbs are to be retained for stock; otherwise throw them away at once. Look over the hippeastrums (amaryllis). Some will be pushing flower spikes. See that the drainage is efficient. Either repot or give them a top-dressing of loam and cow manure. Place in a warm house and do not water very freely until the spikes are well advanced.

Seed Purchases.

Seed catalogues are now arriving with every mail and will soon make a formidable pile. Flower seed novelties seem to be less numerous than usual, and no very startling additions are promised. It is well to buy sparingly of new things, unless we really know the worth of what we are purchasing, but nevertheless every up-to-date grower should try at least a packet of the more promising novelties. The cost will not be great, and as probably one variety at least will be worthy of more extended culture another season, the money will not have been wasted.

It is well to place seed orders early. It is better for you and a great benefit to the seedsman, who appreciates such action on your part, giving him, as it does, a better chance to fill your order carefully, and relieving in at least a small measure the inevitable congestion of trade which comes his way a little later in the season. Purchase what seeds you think you will need the coming season. It is poor policy to wait until you are ready to sow particular subjects and then send your seedsman a special delivery letter to forward it per return mail.

Brief Reminders.

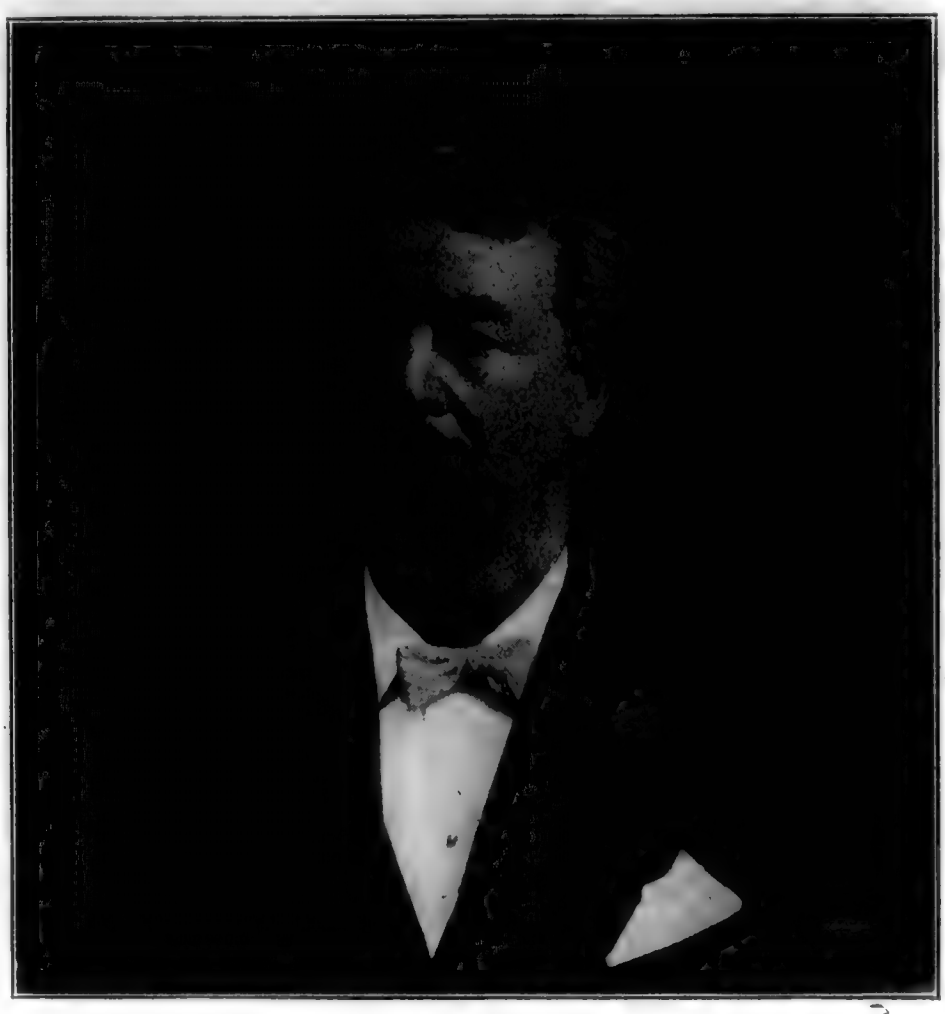
Rambler roses for Easter should be started at once. If you wait longer, harder forcing will be necessary and the chances are that your plants may be a little late.

Hybrid perpetual roses in pots and boxes may now be pruned, top-dressed and started in a temperature of 45 degrees at night. Prune the shoots back quite hard if you want strong shoots and fine flowers.

Spiræa Japonica and its varieties will now force quite readily. Start these in a brisk heat.

If you are a little short of any mums and want to work up a good stock for benching, get some cuttings in at once.

Single violets are now making an abundance of runners. Select the best and root in clean, sharp sand. Doubles may be similarly treated.



Do not allow the little geraniums to get potbound. Shift into a size larger pots. Spread the plants out as they grow, and put in cuttings as fast as obtainable.

Propagate verbenas from cuttings where you have carried over stock plants.

Propagate coleus in a brisk heat. Get rid of the old plants for the sake of cleanliness.

Start dahlias where some are wanted for indoor blooming. It is much too early to start either these or cannas where they are wanted for bedding plants.

Sow a good batch of Asparagus Sprengeri. This always useful plant is not overdone yet, and you will find sale for all you can grow.

Godfrey Aschmann.

ASCHMANN PLANS EXPANSION.

Godfrey Aschmann has outgrown his location, in Philadelphia, and is laying plans for building a plant outside the city, where he will have room, air and soil. The heart of a city is no place for a plant factory, or even for storing imported stock while awaiting shipment, for while Mr. Aschmann has been building greenhouses, his neighbors have been building residences, until now every foot of land not covered by glass is occupied by a typical Philadelphia urban domicile. It is a case of go outside or stop growing, but by going outside the city escape will be had from conditions which have not operated to make success easy. Indeed, it has been only by moving stock rapidly that the business has been kept on the up grade and few men would care to say they could do as well if similarly placed.

Godfrey Aschmann was born December 3, 1848, in Langnau, in the canton of Zurich, Switzerland. He is the only son of John Aschmann, a prosperous planter and vine grower. After attending the public schools until he was nearly 15 years of age, he was apprenticed May 1, 1863, to Heinrich Temperli, the manager of a large horticultural establishment at Uster, in the canton of Zurich. His apprenticeship extended over a period of three years, under the strict regulations peculiar to that time and place. By the terms of the contract, he was not only compelled to work diligently, but also to pay for his tuition the sum of 200 francs, or about $38, which undoubtedly looked like rather a formidable amount in those days. The thorough training that he received, however, in botany and in the needs of all sorts of trees and plants, probably repaid him well for his outlay of money and labor. At the expiration of his apprenticeship, in 1866, he continued his practical education by entering the service of a landscape architect and gardener in Zurich.

In April, 1869, Mr. Aschmann came to America, bearing a letter of introduction to Henry A. Dreer, and was immediately put to work in Mr. Dreer's nurseries at Riverton, N. J., which were then a new branch of Mr. Dreer's business. After being employed here for a month on trial, Mr. Aschmann was engaged by the firm for a year.

At the end of his year's engagement at Riverton, Mr. Aschmann began business on his own account, in Philadelphia. He had no greenhouses then, but did landscape gardening, undertaking some large contracts. In February, 1887, he started in the greenhouse business, beginning with one house, 15x35 feet, on Thayer street. This house he tore down one year later, to make room for a larger one. From that time he steadily increased the size of his establishment, buying additional ground nearly every year and erecting houses on it, until he had thus acquired and occupied all the available land in the block, on both sides of Thayer street. This range of houses on Thayer street is located at the rear of his office on Ontario street. As no more city lots can be purchased in that neighborhood, he is now planning to buy a few acres of land a short distance from town, where he can build more greenhouses, especially for azaleas and roses and the housing of imported plants. As indicating the substantial qualities, it may be mentioned that all of the property occupied is owned by him and is free of incumbrance.

Mr. Aschmann has three sons, John, Edward and Howard, all of whom have reached the age of manhood and are engaged in the business with their father.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

If your opinions do not agree with those expressed by any contributor to the Review, we shall be pleased to present your views of the facts.

The first to arrive of the plant catalogues of the mail-order specialists is that of the Geo. H. Mellen Co., Springfield, O., mailed January 11.

The full, bright sunlight should not be allowed to fall directly on bay trees that are stored in a place where there is a possibility of the soil or foliage freezing.

The winter has been so unusually mild thus far that it may have caused some damping of roots stored indoors. Look them over and if there is much decayed matter, remove it.

The schedule for the annual exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held in Chicago March 25 to 27, has been issued by Secretary Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y. The premiums are those of last year, with the addition of a number of special prizes which have already been reported in the Review.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

There will be a meeting of the National Council of Horticulture at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, at 10 a. m. January 22, 1908. The members of the council invite suggestions or questions on any topics which should properly come before that body. Plans for the press bureau service for the coming year must be worked out. It is hoped to make this a stronger feature than ever before. Other matters have been mentioned and it is hoped that other lines of work may be instituted which will be helpful to the horticultural interests of the country.

H. C. Irish, Sec'y.

THE DEATH ROLL.

William Cunningham.

William Cunningham died recently at his home in Clifton, Cincinnati, O. He was one of the oldest florists in that vicinity, being over 70 years of age. He was a fine grower and had held a stand in the flower market ever since it was built. He leaves a wife and several children.

Victor Dorval.

Victor Dorval died January 12, at Woodside, L. I., where he had been at grower for many years. He was widely known among the old-time florists. The business will be continued by his sons.

William Adams.

William Adams died at Great Neck, L. I., December 31, at the age of 70 years. He was one of the pioneer growers of that section.

M. B. Bunker.

M. B. Bunker, retail florist, Boston, died Sunday, January 12, as the result of the second surgical operation he has undergone in a brief period. The interment took place January 15, a number of those in the trade attending.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market for the closing days of last week is described by most of the wholesalers as being "just fair." Saturday night a blizzard blew in and raged all day Sunday, so that the market January 13 was decidedly dull. Telegraphic communication was interrupted, which doubtless had some effect, but the weather bureau reports the storm to have been general over a wide territory, and the buyers, having stocked up in anticipation of a good Sunday trade, found themselves with Sunday stock still on hand Monday morning, which doubtless accounts, more than any other cause, for the absence of demand at the opening of this week.

The change in weather has brought a considerable reduction in receipts, but there still is an abundance of stock with which to meet all needs. Roses are about the only item that cleans up in good shape. And by roses Beauties are not meant. The heavy crops of the latter variety are passing off, but there continue to be supplies above the needs of the legitimate demand. It is asserted, and there is little danger of contradiction, that never in the history of this market have there been so many Beauties in the first half of January, and that never in January have prices been so low. Bride has the call this week, for a large part of the demand is for funeral flowers. Killarney outsells Maid. Richmond has lost much of the preëminence it gained just before Christmas, and other varieties are a minor consideration, although they all are selling fairly well.

Carnations are of splendid quality and in large supply. Within the last week receipts have been so heavy that spring prices have prevailed. The regular demand was insufficient to clean up the daily receipts and recourse was had to special offers telegraphed to the bargain buyers out of town. It is a favorite practice to touch up the other fellow's customers with these special offers, and one that came back by mail to the regular source of supply read: "Good carnations, $10 per thousand." It was dated January 8. This was, of course, an exceptional case, for good stock did not go as low as that. Many sales of thousand lots were, however, made at $15, and $20 to $25 called for fancy stock.

With such heavy receipts of New York violets as this market now has, the outlook is not promising. In the last week 75 cents per hundred has been about the limit, if any quantity was bought, and from that prices ran down to where they vanished in the waste-barrel. Violets never have been so low in January and it is natural to suppose that receipts will continue to increase as spring approaches. Save for the spurt which comes at St. Valentine's day, and the other at Easter, there is little prospect for any better price for violets. The retailers can count with reasonable certainty on at least one cheap flower for the rest of this season, and already many are making funeral work of violets as affording better profit than when made of other flowers.

Bulbous stock is abundant and slow sale. Mignonette is almost immovable, except in the fancy grades. Stevia is about at an end, although one or two houses still are receiving fine stock.

Green goods are plentiful, smilax especially so, although there is a big supply of long strings of asparagus. It is noted that the sale for boxwood, galax and leucothoe is greater than usual, the retailers making up more funeral work with this material than in other seasons —and funeral work is the reliance of most of them just now.

Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, for the election of officers and the transaction of other business, was held in the trustees' room of the Art Institute January 14. The officers elected are as follows: President, W. E. Kelley; first vice-president, W. N. Rudd; second vice-president, Ernst Wienhoeber; third vice-president, N. H. Carpenter; secretary, Edwin A. Kanst; assistant secretary, J. H. Burdett; treasurer, E. Wienhoeber; members executive committee, E. A. Kanst, George Asmus and Leonard Kill to succeed themselves, J. H. Burdett to succeed P. J. Hauswirth. The members of the executive committee who hold over are J. C. Vaughan, J. B. Deamud, August Poehlmann and W. N. Rudd.

The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $5,227.66. The society will not give its annual autumn exhibition in 1908, but will cast its influence with the Society of American Florists to make the national flower show a success.

W. E. Kelley, the new president, is not known to many of the trade. He is the head of W. E. Kelley & Co., dealers in lumber, with offices in the Railway Exchange building. His residence is 2129 Calumet avenue.

Club Meeting.

H. N. Bruns made a fine finish as president of the Chicago Florists' Club, seven new members being elected at the meeting January 9, at which his successor was elected. They are: F. R. Weissgerber, Geo. A. Kuhl, Geo. R. Schumann, A. F. Longren, W. J. Kimmel, Thomas McAllister and R. S. Woodward.

The new officers elected, and installed with appropriate ceremony, are: President, Leonard Kill; vice-president, George Asmus; treasurer, E. F. Winterson; recording secretary, Tim Waters; financial secretary, J. E. Jensen; trustees, F. F. Benthey, J. F. Klimmer, August Poehlmann, C. H. Fisk, H. N. Bruns.

Charles Knopf, of the B., K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., was present with a magnificent vase of Sarah Hill, the new white seedling carnation his firm is disseminating this season. It is of great size, of fine form and carried on long, strong stems. The members generally thought it the finest white carnation they had ever seen. The judges, F. F. Benthey, August Poehlmann and George Asmus, awarded it the club's certificate. Mr. Knopf also exhibited Lawson-Enchantress, a seedling with the habit of the latter and color of the former. Mr. Knopf, on invitation, spoke briefly on the history, culture and other characteristics of the varieties and was given a vote of thanks.

Upon invitation of President Kill adjournment was to a near-by buffet, where the new administration was begun with copious libations and fumigation.

Various Notes.

Logan Kring, of Kring Bros., Fairbury, Ill., who are on E. C. Amling's list of growers of carnations, was in town January 9 for the purpose of placing orders for a big boiler, glass and other material for a new house which will be put up in the spring.

Phil Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's, predicts that with a continuation of winter weather, buyers will be hustling for roses before the end of the current week and that next week carnations also will be in demand.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, returned January 11, after a week at West Baden, and feels much benefited by the rest.

It is reported that both Bassett & Washburn and George Reinberg will discontinue growing the Kate Moulton rose next year, but Wietor Bros., on the other hand, are planning to increase their planting. N. J. Wietor says that from the one house of it they are growing this season, they are cutting more flowers than from any other house of roses on the place.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. devotes an equal amount of space in its establishment, at New Castle, to Bride and Killarney, and reports that the week of January 5 to 11 was the first week this season when they failed to take in more money on Killarney than they did on the other variety. L. Coatsworth went to New Castle January 15 for a day.

Jeannette Iralson, mother of M. Iralson, died at her son's home, 382 E. Fortieth street, January 13. She was 77 years of age. The remains were taken to Dallas, Tex., for interment.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. ships a considerable quantity of stock direct from the greenhouses to out-of-town customers and, in the big storm of January 12, suffered much inconvenience because cut off at Morton Grove from both telephone and telegraph communication. The city store ran short of stock and could not reach the greenhouses by phone, so a telegram was sent. Another good order telegraphed direct from Detroit to Morton Grove, sent Sunday morning, was not received until nearly noon on Monday, with the order from the store.

Will Graff, of Columbus, Ohio, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. He says he suffered a severe case of primula poisoning through handling the plants at Christmas and was laid up nearly two weeks.

Bassett & Washburn say they can see the approach of the end of the present heavy crop of long Beauties, but they still are cutting 300 a day and the quality is fine. Mr. Washburn says they have done better with Beauties this season than ever in the history of the firm.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott's, has been suffering with the grippe, but has been able to be about each day.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has been receiving large consignments of fine Cattleya Trianæ from the east and also gardenias and Adiantum Croweanum.

The supply houses are completing their inventories and are well pleased with the results shown for 1907. There has been little doing in the supply business since Christmas, but the prospects are thought to be good for spring.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, after spending a week in this city, started January 13, planning to continue their trip to the Pacific coast.

The entire family of W. W. Fuller, the Ravenswood retailer, has been on the sick list.

It is reported that Jensen & Dekema will next season participate in the distribution of W. N. Rudd's white seedling carnation. Mr. Jensen says the sales on Defiance have been large since the first of the year and the wide distribution of the variety is assured.

Leonard Kill says that Peter Reinberg has taken advantage of the low price of glass to buy for the erection of another range of carnation houses in the spring. These houses will go up beside the range erected last season, on what the Reinbergs call the farm.

John P. Risch, of Weiland & Risch, points to his bandaged fingers as a sure sign of the approach of spring. With the turn of the year he always has trouble from the festers caused by rosethorns beneath the skin.

L. Baumann & Co. say that whatever may be the difficulties of a manufacturer, an importer also has his own troubles. For instance, when the S. S. Mt. Royal sailed from Antwerp in December it carried large consignments of metal designs, moss wreaths and other supplies for Baumann & Co. After being out thirty-one days the Mt. Royal was brought into Queenstown with disabled boilers. And Baumann & Co. need the goods.

Charles Wiffin, of Des Plaines, is on deck at the Flower Growers' market after a month's illness with rheumatism. Mrs. Wiffin still is suffering from a long attack of erysipelas.

Mrs. E. H. Hunt has been ill with the grippe for several days at the home of her son, C. M. Dickinson, at Park Ridge. She has recovered sufficiently to leave January 13 for a visit with relatives in Ohio.

Leaves of the English ivy are being handled by E. H. Hunt in considerable quantity. Funeral work made of them presents a pleasing variation from the ever-present galax and boxwood.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports that Emil Buettner will have his first crop of white lilac ready for market by the first part of next week.

C. W. McKellar has cyclamen plants as one of his regular items of stock.

Last season the handling of New York violets was largely concentrated in two or three houses, but this year every wholesaler has them in quantity.

Vaughan & Sperry say that while the price of violets is lower than last year, they are sending to Rhinebeck much more money than last season, because the shipments are so much heavier.

Some weeks ago it was reported in the REVIEW that the Eatons' "ship had come in." News of the event has just reached the daily papers, some of which are making big stories of the receipt of a sum, said to be $100,000, from the estate of John A. Creighton, of Omaha.

There will be a good delegation from Chicago and vicinity at the carnation convention at Washington, D. C., January 28 to 30. Among those who have declared their intention of going are J. E. Jensen, W. N. Rudd, Peter Olsem, A. T. Pyfer, F. Lautenschlager and A. F. Longren. August Poehlmann doubtless will be of the party.

George C. Hartung, formerly in business on the north side, will open a store and greenhouses, January 22, at 11816 Michigan avenue, Kensington. His new establishment will be known as the Roseland Greenhouses.

Society of America and judge at the Chicago shows on several occasions, passed through the city January 8 en route to Denver. Henry and Paul Dailledouze, of Flatbush, N. Y., have been here this week. Other visitors were Wm. Hagemann and C. B. Knickman, New York; Edw. Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis.; Geo. S. Crabb, Grand Rapids; I. L. Pillsbury and son, Galesburg, Ill.; P. J. Walker, Danville, Ill.

H. N. Bruns reports that he has just received his third carload of valley pips, making his importation for this season about 900 cases, and close to two million pips. This stock was, as usual, all picked out by Mr. Bruns' brother, who is located in the valley-growing district of Germany. While Mr. Bruns will sell a part of these pips, he intends to force most of them for the Chicago market.

Mrs Herman Keller, of Granton, Wis., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Henry Bornhoeft, on West Monroe street.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, announces he will be in Chicago January 17 to 21.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Winter has been side-tracked again and the wholesale cut flower market has followed in its train. Ever since January 6 the tendency has been to lower prices. Quotations of a week ago look high to the man who scans the average of January 11. Sunday we had rain, thunder and hail. Monday was sunshine, warmth, and all the earmarks of spring. If April 19 can furnish as lovely a day, look out for a banner Easter. But in the meantime we must face present conditions as cheerfully as possible. If the money mart, as they call Wall street, is an indicator, then good times are ahead, public confidence is restored and all is well. The depression, therefore, will be but temporary.

Supplies are light, or prices would have had no bottom. Beauties are down to 35 cents for the finest, and 25 cents would be a fairer average. The Beauty quotations indicate the pulse of the entire market, and so it is not difficult to arrive at a just estimate of the whole. Bride, Maid, Chatenay, Killarney, and even Richmond seldom rise above 10 cents. Carnations, which should lift their heads on the eve of the great carnation convention at Washington, if ever, have been split in two in price since Christmas, and even worse, for the novelties sold as low as 3 cents and 4 cents last week, and the older varieties fell down to 1 cent and 2 cents.

Orchids and gardenias stay about on an even keel, weddings, society dinners, grand operas, and the coming-out parties taking about all that come to town, at regular winter prices.

Green goods of all kinds are abundant and go off slowly. Lilies have fallen about thirty per cent and valley has been selling below its value, even the best of it. Some fine long stock has been coming from Canada. Tulips, hyacinths and Paper Whites are doing nothing to make a profit for the growers. Callas are cheap, $1 a dozen securing the best of them. There was not a violet in the market on the morning of January 13, except a single shipment, and even then 60 cents per hundred was the asking price; 50 cents for the balance of the week seems likely to be top. Saturday, January 11, many were cleaned up as low as $3.50 per thousand. Violets were forced too heavily for Christmas. Quality since then has demonstrated that fact strongly. The left-overs find rest with the sidewalk merchants while the spring temperature prevails. These and valley are at every corner, and perambulating Broadway in charge of an army of the enterprising sons of sunny Italy and classic Greece.

By the by, there is now in this country a society called the Pan-Hellenic Union, composed of all the Greek united bodies, with a membership of 250,000, of which George D. Nicholas, the retail florist, is secretary. Mr. Nicholas announces the ball of the Greek-American Retail Florists' and Growers' Association at the Palm Gardens, Lexington and Third avenues and Fifty-eighth street, on the evening of Friday, January 31, and gives a cordial invitation to all the New York florists to attend.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its first meeting of the year January 13, nearly 100 members being present. President C. H. Totty gave his farewell address, in which he gratefully acknowledged the loyalty and good will of the members during the year, after which he introduced the president-elect, Charles B. Weathered. Mr. Weathered made an address in which he paid deserved credit to his predecessors, Messrs. May, Dean, Scott, Traendly, Sheridan, Totty and others, declaring it would be a hard task to equal their records. He promised to give his best efforts to the club's upbuilding. He suggested methods for increasing the attendance and pointed out the wisdom of more acceptable clubrooms for the members. The opening of the meetings at 7:30 was advocated and emphasized. He congratulated the club on its financial strength, having over $2,500 in the bank.

January 14, 1908.

Vice-president Marshall followed in a similar vein, telling of the congratulations on the honor which had reached him from four states, as evidence of the widespread interest taken in the club's accomplishments.

John Young, the secretary since 1891, spoke of the abundant talent in the club and the general ability of its members, of the need of a new home, and of his gratitude for the continuous honor conferred.

J. K. Allen, the treasurer, followed with a similar assurance of effort and gratitude, pledging his best efforts. Addresses were also made by the new trustees, E. V. Hallock, W. B. Du Rie and A. J. Rickards. Owing to the illness of his wife, Trustee Guttman was unable to attend.

Secretary Young read the club's resolutions on the death of Phil J. Hauswirth, which were adopted.

The president announced his committees as follows:

Legislative Committee—Messrs. O'Mara, Sheridan, Stewart.

Essay Committee—Messrs. Hammond, Barron, Burnie.

Award Committee—Messrs. Totty, Simpson, Turner, Kennedy, Zangen, Traendly, Zeller.

Exhibition Committee—Messrs. Joseph Manda, Jaenecke, Lenker, Nugent, Scott, Butterfield.

Outing Committee—Messrs. Marshall, Schenck, Schultz, Adams, Manda, Reimels, Weber, Schmutz and Shaw.

Dinner Committee—Messrs. Sheridan, Craw, Henshaw, Marshall, Schultz.

Samuel A. Woodrow, J. A. Rossbach, A. E. Wheeler and T. Suzuki were elected to membership, and B. J. Barnes, J. Canning and W. A. Sperling were proposed.

on closer relations with the Horticultural Society of New York. Mr. Totty spoke against the sinking of the club's individuality. In addition to Mr. O'Mara, Messrs. Allen, Brinkerhoff, Troy, Lager, Atkins, Nielson, Roehrs, Siebrecht, Pierson, Turner and Ward are already members of both organizations. The committee, after a conference, requested the report be referred back to it for further consideration.

After a recess, during which Messrs. Nugent, Rickards and Schultz dispensed the luxuries of the season, Robert Simpson, president of the American Rose Society, gave a stirring address in its behalf.

Announcement of the death of Victor Dorval was made, and a committee consisting of Messrs. Donaldson, Shaw and Stewart appointed to draw up suitable resolutions.

An interesting dinner discussion resulted in a vote authorizing the committee to go ahead with the arrangements, the cost fixed at $5, as usual. Messrs. Schultz, Rickards, Marshall, Totty, Sheridan and O'Mara orated interestingly.

W. F. Sheridan read the trustees' report, showing a balance of $2,601.95 in the treasury.

The entertainment committee during the last year expended $300 in its efforts to dispense good cheer and enjoyment. Mr. O'Mara suggested a reduction to $10 monthly for the canteen. Mr. Simpson spoke in favor of its elimination. Mr. Nugent and Mr. Barnett spoke for the house committee and its work, as did Mr. Marshall, and by a vote of twenty-one to fifteen the committee was instructed to proceed as it sees fit, cigars and food hereafter being eliminated from the monthly menu. Messrs. Young, Sheridan and Allen were appointed the committee to determine the club's place of meeting after June.

The committee of awards gave a vote of thanks to William P. Craig for a grand vase of Mrs. Jardine rose and to Anton C. Zvolanek for an exhibit of sweet peas, thirty-two varieties being shown. John Lapp, of Maspeth, showed a pink seedling carnation which the committee requests to be exhibited again.

Interesting addresses were made by Wm. P. Craig, A. Farenwald and S. S. Skidelsky.

The B. & O. sent an offer of one and one-third fare to the Washington carnation convention, January 28 to 30, $7.75 round trip.

The Smoker at Madison.

The annual smoker of the club at Madison drew well January 8. Over 100 enjoyed the uproarious festival. The famous Totty punch, a worthy rival of John Westcott's decoction, was in evidence. The society now numbers seventy-five. Percy Herbert is president, H. B. Vyse vice-president, E. Reagan secretary and W. Duckham treasurer. Among the guests were James Fraser, of Morristown; Harry Turner, of Castle

Gould; W. E. Marshall, of New York, who, as vice-president, spoke for the New York Florists' Club; the Rickards brothers and Wm. Woodell, of New York, who made much melody; C. H. Atkins, of Rutherford; W. A. Sperling, from the Stumpp & Walter Co.; J. E. Lager, of Summit, and the secretary and a large delegation of the Orange Horticultural Society.

A cultural certificate was awarded A. R. Kennedy, by the judges, Fraser, Herrington and Schultz, for a fine vase of the Victory carnation. Mr. Duckham was absent in Chicago.

The imported talent from New York gave great satisfaction. Mr. Woodell and the Rickards brothers, fresh from their musical triumph at Newport, were in grand voice and kept the big audience enthused until midnight. Totty said it was the best smoker in the club's cupboard and the punch was mighty powerful.

Various Notes.

The trustee in bankruptcy has declared a first dividend of twenty per cent to the creditors of A. J. Fellouris.

Schedules in bankruptcy of J. M. Hodgson, Inc., 718 Fifth avenue and at Newport, R. I., show liabilities of $26,480 and nominal assets of $7,524, consisting of stock and fixtures, $1,668; accounts, $5,784; cash, $22; wagon, $50. The corporation owes $15,760 to New York creditors and $10,720 to Newport creditors. There are 170 creditors, among whom are the estate of J. M. Hodgson, $2,290; C. F. Hodgson, $1,224; A. W. Spalding, $1,758; Miss Sarah Frances Spalding, $1,806; A. J. Guttman, $1,300; J. I. Rayner, $1,412, and Fifth Avenue Bank, $300. There is due $856 to employees for wages.

Schloss Bros. will remove February 1 to their new and larger establishment at 542 Broadway, where they will have facilities for their rapidly growing trade. There is no pessimism in the ribbon section of the florists' business.

Reed & Keller are enjoying the usual lull before the Easter business, and, as usual, Mr. Reed's inventive brain is working overtime. The latest novelty is the Easter-egg baskets made of plaited cane on easels. There will be a wide call for the birch bark plaited boxes for palms and plant combinations. The supply men are all optimistic and predict a growing demand until Easter, and all are preparing for it.

The New York papers exploited a find last week by Mrs. McNiece, a florist on upper Broadway, of thirteen pearls in the gizzard of a turkey, the jewels valued at $4,000.

John Nash attended the wedding of Alfred A. Tharp, Bedford, N. Y., and Miss C. L. Brenminger at St. Matthew's church January 8. He says it was a beautiful decoration, with some hilarious demonstrations speeding the young folks on their honeymoon. Mr. Tharp is a son of A. F. Tharp, the carnation grower whose first shipments years ago were made to the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, and he is shipping there still.

Charles Albert Small, of J. H. Small & Sons, was receiving congratulations January 10, on the completion of his first half century.

Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, was in New York January 9 on his way home, after a recuperative ocean trip to Savannah, Ga.

William Adams, of Great Neck, L. I., passed away December 31, after a long illness, at the age of 70 years. He was one of the pioneers of that section and held the reputation of an expert grower of freesia and yellow daisies.

Victor Dorval, of Woodside, L. I., died January 12 at his home there and the funeral will take place Wednesday. Mr. Dorval was one of the old-time florists of Long Island and a man of sterling character and wide reputation. His plant of 50,000 square feet of glass is one of the landmarks of that section of New York. His sons will continue the business.

Mengham & Westwood are much pleased with their experience since opening their new store at 422 Columbus avenue. Their most gratifying order to date has been the Guggenheim wedding decoration at the St. Regis hotel.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point; H. C. Steinhoff, of Hoboken, and the Hinode Florist Co., of Whitestone, still make daily displays at the Plant Market. The other members of the association have withdrawn for the present, John Scott and Louis Schmutz being the rear guard January 13. The wisdom of opening the market from six to six daily has been fully demonstrated. Retailers do their plant buying in the afternoon.

It has not been generally known that the Hinode Florist Co. is owned exclusively by Miss Mills, who has been long connected with the Yokohama Nursery Co., but whose private enterprise and ability have made the Hinode Co. a great success.

The American Institute Wednesday afternoon lectures are enjoying better attendance. Geo. T. Powell was much delighted with his audience and reception. This week James Wood lectures on corn.

The new officers of the New York Florists' Club, Messrs. Weathered, Marshall, Young and Allen, gave a beefsteak dinner to the retiring officers, trustees and recent additions to the official staff, January 9, at one of the popular hostelries of the west side. The only absentees were Messrs. Julius Roehrs, Jr., John Scott and A. Rickards. The president of the S. A. F. was the guest of honor. In addition to the hosts there were present Messrs. Totty, Sheridan, Manda, Donaldson, Du Rie, Hallock, Guttman, Nugent and Burnie. Mr. Weathered presided with dignity and suavity, a happy augury for the year's developments. About everything of importance was considered, from world's shows and amalgamations to dinners, outings and harmony. If the club does not double its membership in 1908, it will not be the fault of the Big Four.

C. C. Trepel and wife, of the Blossom, Brooklyn, have been enjoying a two weeks' rest in Atlantic City.

I visited the orchid factory of Lager & Hurrell, at Summit, N. J., January 8. Lord & Burnham built most of it some twelve years ago. There are over 50,000 square feet of glass. Out of 6,000 known species of orchids this firm has half of them. Altogether there are over 100,000 orchid plants housed here and they are coming and going all the time. Shipments are made to Shanghai, Yokohama, Trinidad, Hawaii and Australia, with perfect safety. The goods go by express in ventilated boxes. The outlook is most satisfactory and the growing popularity of the orchid, they say, more and more encouraging. Fancy cypripediums are attracting at present the greatest interest. Cattleya Trianæ is now in bloom, and others will follow in rotation. From one enthusiast, whose travels in South America would make a book of interesting research and discovery, the inspiration has spread until in this vicinity a dozen expert orchidists have developed and the wholesale market is never without an abundant supply.

Bonnet & Blake are painting their store, on Livingston street, Brooklyn, and kicking for more room. W. H. Kuebler has the same complaint registered, lack of space, but neither of these wholesale firms has any complaint to make of the volume of trade and the progress of the last year. Harry Crawbuck has a monopoly of the green goods trade in the City of Churches and a big field to cover.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market conditions last week were not all that might have been desired. The supply is not large, comparatively speaking, and the business is not quite up to the standard. The weather is favorable for roses and carnations, the latter coming in strong. Beauties are going slowly, for the demand is not so heavy as in former years at this season. Killarney sells well. The fancy grades are bringing a fair price. Bridesmaid in the fancy grades cleans up well, while with Bride it is the reverse, the shorter grades being the most sought after for funeral work, of which there has been quite a lot. Red roses have not sold so well, the supply being greater than the demand.

There are too many carnations at the present time. All the growers are cutting heavily and the demand is slow. Yellow daisies are fine and are used extensively in baskets and window decorations. Violets, single and double, are moving slowly, as is also valley, which is fine, but the supply is too great. Cattleyas and cypripediums are in fair demand. Mignonette and greens are selling well. Cornflower has made its appearance and is much sought after. Lavender peas and freesia in the fancy grades are quickly taken up, but the shorts hang fire.

Various Notes.

M. Rice & Co. are showing some new and novel effects in hearts for St. Valentine's day. They report that so far this month business is far ahead of last January.

Mrs. S. I. Smith, of Secane, is sending some fine single violets to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

B. Schroeter, of Detroit, sent fine White Enchantress carnations and some new snapdragon which were to have been shown at the club meeting January 7, but which arrived too late.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are busy with their regular orders for St. Valentine's day. They report the arrival of the steamer Manitou with a new lot of supplies.

Robt. Crawford, Jr., of Secane, is cutting a fine lot of carnations.

Samuel Lilley, who has been selling for quite a few years, says Bridesmaid is a thing of the past, and he ought to know.

B. Stahl, the veteran retail florist, has a new van which is much admired. It is dark green with gold letters and is perfectly plain but handsome.

E. Weiss has 50,000 carnation plants on his place.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving some Lælia anceps alba which are especially good. The Beauties and carnations are in fine shape.

Wm. K. Harris is cutting some fine lilac, which is considered the best in town.

Wm. P. Craig took a trip to New York with Mrs. Jardine, which was greatly admired.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week was noted for its fine weather, its abundance of cut blooms at all the wholesale houses, and prices away down. January 13 we had our first real winter weather and a good fall of snow, which will, no doubt, stiffen up the prices by decreasing the amount of stock that has been coming in. According to the reports of our wholesale men, trade all over the city must have been dull in all lines except funeral work, as white flowers sold, while colored stock had to be dumped or sold at a low price in order to dispose of it. This has reference only to firsts and seconds, as fancy stock sold cheap.

Brides and Maids are plentiful and so are carnations of all varieties. California violets, too, seem abundant. In bulb stock, callas, valley, Romans and Paper Whites, the market is overstocked. A lot of fine white and pink sweet peas are coming in. The more seasonable weather should brace up the trade in general all over the country.

Miller in Street Fight.

The daily papers of January 8 contained the following:

"Theodore Miller, a florist, of 4832 Delmar boulevard, was arrested Wednesday morning at Sixth and Olive streets after he had knocked down Simon Joseph, president of the Simon Joseph Iron and Metal Co., of 4954 McPherson avenue. Both men were taken to the Central Station by Policeman Dueker, who witnessed the fight, and Joseph was released when he said he would appear against Miller.

"Miller said that about two years ago he bought $1,000 worth of first mortgage bonds of the St. Louis, Webster & Valley Park Railroad Co., for $940 from Joseph. He said he received his dividends up to six weeks ago. After that, he said, Joseph would not pay him, saying that the money stringency made it impossible to do so. Miller said he consulted a lawyer, but had taken no action. He said he struck Joseph but once. Miller is 48 years old and Joseph 52."

Club Meeting.

The new year's meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held in the Burlington building January 9 at two o'clock, and was attended by thirty members. All the officers were in their chairs when the meeting was called to order, President W. C. Young presiding. The trustees reported unfavorably as to the entertainment proposed at the last meeting.

Chairman Sanders, of the pottery committee, made a report of the committee's meeting. This report brought out a lengthy discussion, in which all the members took part. On a final vote it was decided that a subscription amounting to $10,000 must be completed by May 15, and in case the subscription was not completed by that time the pottery proposition would be dropped. During the meeting $1,500 was subscribed.

It was decided that at the next regular club meeting the annual carnation exhibition should take place. The local growers and growers of new varieties are invited to make exhibits.

J. F. Ammann invited the members to attend the meeting of the Illinois Florists' Association, which takes place February 18, at Springfield, Ill. President Young urged the members to prepare exhibits and make a display at the national flower show, at Chicago, next November. The question box contained a number of important questions, which interested the local growers and retailers.

Various Notes.

T. J. Brown, of the Jefferson Floral Co., Jefferson City, Mo., spent a few days in the city last week. Mr. Brown reports that he will build this spring five new houses; three 25x200 and the other two 20x100. The company also

L. Baumann, of Chicago, was a caller last week.

Ostertag Bros. made a handsome decoration at the Marquette hotel for the Tennessee banquet, over which Governor Folk presided. Henry Ostertag reports that they have been kept hustling with decorations. The Lee wedding for this week is a large affair.

W. C. Smith & Co. are handling large consignments of California violets. The bulk of these come every morning from Kirkwood.

Henry Baer, of Peoria, and Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., are large consignors of carnations. This stock is handled at C. A. Kuehn's, where carnations are supreme. Manager Gerlach, at this place, reports a good call for supplies, and cut stock of all kinds abundant.

J. F. Ammann, A. S. Halstead, E. W. Guy, John Steidle, John Connon, Henry Johann and E. Rotenheber, our suburban members, attended the club meeting last week.

Henry Berning received a fine lot of Beauties and carnations last week, also fine quality California violets.

Mrs. C. Schoenle, wife of Charlie Schoenle, who went through a severe operation recently at one of the local hospitals, is on the road to recovery and will be back to the store next week.

The St. Louis Seed Co. is making extensive preparations for the early spring trade. Walter Retzer reports that mail inquiries have increased greatly and have now reached 5,000 daily. That's what advertising does.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society held a meeting last week at the Mercantile Club, and decided to hold a flower show during March. J. J. B.

PITTSBURG.

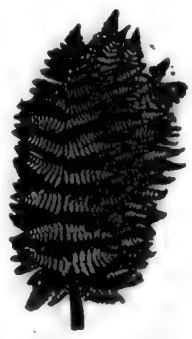
The Market.

Business among the retailers has been very fair, the unusual amount of funeral work giving most of the stores enough to keep them busy. But decorations of all kinds have been scarce, with not a great deal doing in the way of loose flower sales. The wholesale houses are cleaning up nicely each day, so that they have not much to complain of. Violets were more plentiful in supply and less in demand, and Beauties have dropped in price below anything that could be expected during this month.

Carnations are coming from all sources and it will not be long until there will be more than plenty. Bulb stock is selling, but no fancy prices are thought of. Lilies are still scarce.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, January 7, and this was the time for the nomination of officers. President John Jones declining another term, Fred Burki was nominated for that office, and H. L. Blind as treasurer. The balance of the old officers were nominated for reëlection.



On motion the secretary was instructed to write to the secretary of the American Carnation Society, extending to that society an invitation to bring its next meeting to Greater Pittsburg, and if this could not be accomplished, to make sure of the 1910 convention.

In discussing the next meeting, in February, which is to be carnation night and when prizes are to be awarded, the committee having charge of the private gardens' interests, not having shown any interest, was discharged and on motion a new committee was named. This was necessary, as the many gardeners from private places, who have helped the club and are interested in this show, were not satisfied to be dropped because several members on their committee were not interested. This show of interest so stirred up our friend, Harry Bunyard, who was a visitor, that he took the floor and after a few pleasant remarks contributed, in the name of his employer, A. T. Boddington, $10, to be distributed as the committee thought best.

The subject of the evening, "Roses," was then taken up and enthusiastically discussed.

Mr. Mann, representing the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., arrived just in time to stage a very fine exhibit of the roses Rhea Reid and Princess, and the carnations White Enchantress, Sarah Hill and Afterglow. Rhea Reid is a fine thing and if it is what is claimed for it Beauty growers will want nothing less than 36-inch Beauties. The fact that some had seen White Enchantress which were not white, reflected on that sort, but Afterglow and Sarah Hill caught on, as the orders taken by Mr. Mann will testify.

A handsome vase of Mrs. Potter Palmer, sent by Poehlmann Bros. Co., received deserved attention. The flower arrived in fine condition, with good stems, fine foliage and a color that will be received well by the retailers.

A handsome vase of Mrs. Jardine was well liked, but would have caused more enthusiasm if they could have been shown as they looked two days later, as this is one of the roses that improve with age.

Then came the home exhibit by the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co.—large vases of Richmond and Killarney, as fine as ever exhibited; Maids, Brides, Perles, Cusin, Chatenay, Bon Silene and Alice Roosevelt. All of the stock was fine, but the Killarney was exceptionally fine. One visitor remarked that his business took him all over the country, but it was the finest rose of this variety he had ever seen.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. exhibited a vase of very handsome Beauties from its regular stock on sale for the day, and they were all right.

Dr. Schaffer showed a number of varieties of the rarer cypripedium plants in bloom.

Wm. Meischke, of Castle Shannon, exhibited a vase of assorted roses.

The committee appointed to look into the good points of the new roses exhibited, reported that they believed there was a place for each of them and that another year will find them greater favorites than they are at present.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ludwig and their son, Edward, will leave in a few days for the Pacific coast, to visit their son, De Forest Ludwig, who is now located at Los Angeles, Cal.

A good many belated poinsettias have been coming into the market since New Year's, but there is no sale for them.

WASHINGTON.

Club Meeting.

The night of the last club meeting, January 7, was without a doubt the worst night we have had this winter, and yet there was a fair attendance. All arrangements were completed, as far as possible, for the coming carnation convention. The National Rifles armory has been secured. The meetings will take place upstairs and the exhibit downstairs.

The American Breeders' Association will meet at the same time in the hall adjoining. The members of the Carnation Society will be their guests one night and the breeders will be entertained the next by the Carnation Society.

The banquet will take place at the hall of Chas. Raucher, the leading caterer of the capital.

The attention of the club was called to the fact that the convention will be in session January 29, McKinley day, which is Washington's great carnation day. A committee was appointed to make arrangements to distribute carnations to the public school children of the city on that day.

President Peter Bisset, who is much improved in health, gave a very interesting talk on his recent visit to Porto Rico.

E. M. Byrnes, superintendent of greenhouses and grounds for the Agricultural Department, sent a vase of seedling carnations which were much admired, especially three extra fine ones. These were a dark red, similar to Roosevelt; a red, on the order of red Lawson, and a very fine pink.

Current Comment.

Everybody seems to have the midwinter pace. Business seems to be good with everybody, especially the stores. Stock still continues scarce. Funeral work has been especially heavy for the last two weeks. Last week the funeral of Allison Naylor, a thirty-third degree Mason, called for a great many large pieces. All the stores had some orders. January 10 the funeral of Captain Diggs, a naval officer, took place. There were all kinds of designs, including some special ones. One of these was a 5-foot panel with crossed cannons made of white carnations, embossed over a large anchor made of violets, with clusters of orchids and valley in the corners, made by Gude Bros. Another was a large standing wreath of white heather, violets, Killarney roses and valley, by Z. D. Blackistone.

AT A SACRIFICE

On account of failing health I now offer my business for sale. I have 7 greenhouses, well filled with carnations, ferns, palms and bedding plants. Located in the center of the city. We have been established for over 15 years on leased ground, but the owner has all kinds of vacant ground over the city and does not need this, which is safe for many years. I am doing A-1 business in cut flowers and have an immense bedding out trade. We run two wagons. If you wish to make money, here is your chance. I will give possession at once Must be cash. For further particulars address W. H. Humfeld Floral Co., Kansas City, Mo.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

A. T. Boddington's Lady Lenox cosmos is more generally catalogued than any other novelty of the year.

The business of the Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., is said to have been, in 1907, 400 per cent ahead of any other year. January 2 the company moved into its new warehouse, where it has a switch and all facilities for handling a large volume of business.

The majority of leading seed houses began mailing catalogues earlier this year than usual and report a prompt response. It appears that many seed buyers have been impressed with the fact that this is a season of general seed shortages and that one who wants a special variety should get his order in early.

In the wholesale trade catalogue of W. W. Johnson & Co., Boston, England, there is a "Special Notice," as follows: "In consequence of the moist and sunless season, seeds generally have been indifferently ripened and harvested. We therefore beg our friends to unpack all goods immediately on arrival and to recommend their customers to sow more thickly than usual to prevent disappointment."

ALFRED J. BROWN SEED CO.

Growers of

Garden Peas and Beans

For the Wholesale Trade

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The southern market garden trade is becoming an important factor.

The prices of greenhouse lettuce, especially at Chicago, have been disappointing to the growers. There was a little spurt in the second week in January, but it lasted only a few days. Better things are looked for soon, however.

THE flurry in canners' peas has subsided.

CONGRESS will soon be ready to vote its members free seeds for 1909.

THE annual invasion of salesmen for the Holland bulb growers has begun.

THERE is a brisk demand for the market gardeners' varieties of early radish.

LATE deliveries of seeds are interfering with the work of the mail order houses.

JUST as the catalogues went out, after an unusually warm early winter, a big blizzard buried the Mississippi valley.

THE H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, devotes forty pages in its 1908 catalogue to garden and greenhouse requisites.

SOUTH Texas promises to supply the early vegetables, not only for the west, but to penetrate to eastern markets to compete with the truck from Florida and South Carolina.

THE Lohrman Seed Co., of Detroit, has opened bids for the erection of a one-story and basement warehouse, to be erected at the corner of Gratiot avenue and Randolph street.

ONE seedsman even puts a cut of Stowell's Evergreen and Country Gentleman corns on the cover of his 1908 catalogue, though a search of the sixty pages in the book fails to show the latter variety to be listed and only pecks at $1.25 are offered on Evergreen.

WILLIAM SIM, Cliftondale, Mass., reports that mice have destroyed his stock of seed of Comet tomato to such an extent that he will have no more than enough for his own needs, instead of having quite a quantity to sell, as he had expected. He grows it extensively under glass.

THE Knox County Truck and Berry Growers' Association holds a meeting at Knoxville, Tenn., every Saturday morning, to discuss growing and marketing. It is proposed that a committee of the most successful growers be appointed to buy all the seeds the members will need during the season.

PETER HENDERSON & Co. enclose in their 1908 catalogue a blank headed: "To the Recipient: We would esteem it a favor if you will send us the names and addresses of a few of your neighbors who are likely to be interested in our catalogue and goods." And at the bottom of the sheet it says: "If any of the above make a business of growing vegetables for sale kindly put an X in front of their names."

MANY mail-order seedsmen feel that this is to be a season which will bring a great deal of early business. Most of the houses consider that in a normal season their success is measured by the volume of business in January and February, as March and the first part of April give them all they can do, no matter how much business has been taken care of in the two preceding months. The seedsman who is late with his catalogue this year is missing the gravy.

SEED TESTING LABORATORY.

Arrangements have been made by which the Bureau of Plant Industry, cooperating with the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, will, about January 20, 1908, establish a seed-testing laboratory at Lincoln, Neb.

This laboratory is being started in order to give quicker reports on samples of seed submitted by farmers and seedsmen in Nebraska and adjoining states, where the time required for mail to go to Washington, D. C., and return frequently causes serious delay. As the facilities for work will be limited for the present, it is suggested that only those samples be sent to the Nebraska laboratory on which quick reports are desired.

Rochester, N. Y.

The Leading Specialists and Largest Growers of High-Grade Asters in the World.

TWO NEW VARIETIES FOR 1908.

Vick's Imperial Sunrise

A novelty of extraordinary merit. Seedling from Vick's Daybreak, but distinct in form of flower, each petal being perfectly quilled. Color, delicate pink. Plant a robust grower, upright branches, each crowned with magnificent double flowers, three to five inches in diameter. Type securely fixed. Sure to be a winner. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each.

Vick's Early Branching

Developed from Vick's Late Branching. Flowers of this new variety can be placed on the market ten days ahead of Late Branching sorts. Plants have few branches which are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of large, perfectly double flowers. Long stems. Two colors, White and Rose. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each. For prices in quantity see our "Aster Book for Florists."

Calendars Received.

Calendars for 1908 have been received from: Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich.; Coles & Co., New York, N. Y.; Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y.; the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

OLEAN, N. Y.—E. A. Llewellyn reports that, despite the alleged panic, his sales December 16 to 28, 1907, exceeded his sales in the corresponding two weeks of 1906 by nearly sixty per cent. His sales for the year 1907 show an increase of about thirty-three per cent. This, he says, would be very encouraging, if wholesale prices had not been so high, but the retailer has not been able to dispose of his stock at a corresponding advance in price.

RICHMOND, IND.—The Gift Floral Co. had a good Christmas trade, better than in 1906. Everything was sold out clean, and more cut flowers could have been disposed of. Prices were about the same. Less holly was handled than formerly.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Quiet conditions prevail in the flower market at present. Flowers are rather more abundant than a week ago, particularly in the case of violets, which have taken a noticeable drop. About 50 cents per hundred is the prevailing price, a few selling higher and some lower. The quality of both singles and doubles is splendid. Carnations maintain the prices of a week ago, there being still a more active call for white than colored varieties. Roses sell well and are not in heavy supply. Killarney and Richmond are proving fine sellers again this season. Lilies are in good supply, the price remaining about 12 cents. Callas bring similar prices.

Some good sweet peas are coming in, making $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Trumpet daffodils are a slow sale, as they always are early in the season. Tulips are still rather short-stemmed. Nothing but La Reine is coming in. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths continue in oversupply. Some fine freesia makes up to $6 per hundred, the variety Purity being exceptionally good. Lily of the valley sells slowly and there is only a slow sale for white lilac. Mignonette is of good quality and some good antirrhinums are seen. Among miscellaneous flowers arriving are blue cornflowers, English primroses, calendulas, myosotis and sweet alyssum. There is still a good supply of stevia. Adiantum, smilax and asparagus are each meeting with a moderate sale.

There is a fine call only for pot plants. Growers of palms and ferns are complaining of trade being quite dull.

Various Notes.

Ladies' night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, January 21, will attract, it is expected, an attendance of between 300 and 400. A fine entertainment has been prepared, which cannot fail to be enjoyable. Only necessary club business will be transacted, as much time as possible being set aside for social enjoyment.

Wilfrid Wheeler opened the lecture season of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural hall January 11, with an interesting paper on the Concord grape and its originator, Ephraim W. Bull. This fine grape was first exhibited in Boston September 3, 1853. Some fine seedlings raised by Mr. Bull are still undisseminated.

Louis Sander, of the Arnold Arboretum staff, has had to undergo a third operation at the Faulkner Hospital, Jamaica Plain, consequent on a first operation for acute appendicitis. At last reports, Mr. Sander was doing as well as could be expected.

John K. M. L. Farquhar lectured on "Italian Gardens" before the Worcester Horticultural Society January 9.

Carnations, violets and primulas are among the special features at the Horticultural hall show January 25. Preliminary schedules may be had on application to W. P. Rich, the secretary.

A. Leuthy reports trade as rather quiet in palms, ferns and other pot plants which they specialize in.

The Killarney roses which Mr. Montgomery is sending in from Waban Conservatories are of superb quality. Those who have been accustomed to see this fine rose on short stems are amazed at the quality of the Waban Killarney. W. H. Elliott is also having fine success with this rose. It is hoped both growers will forward some to the coming Chicago meeting of the American Rose Society.

Mrs. Lydia Manning, widow of Jacob W. Manning of the Reading Nurseries, died January 9, aged 68 years, and was interred at Reading January 12.

William Sim's sweet peas are again of grand quality. He is already booking many orders for his new violet, Boston.

Johnson & Neilson, of Framingham, are again having good success with their new pink seedling carnation of Lawson color, which is proving very prolific.

John McFarland is cutting fine lots of white lilac and lily of the valley from his new forcing house.

Alexander McKay is sending some extra fine freesia and his usual high grade carnations to Welch Bros.

W. N. Craig.

I am much taken with the Review; I think it is a fine weekly for florists.—M. F. Kelsey, Worcester, Mass.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is moving along in a sort of rut. There is just about enough demand to keep the wholesale houses fairly well cleaned out, but as there is not a large cut of flowers coming in, the total receipts are not large. Things sort of drag along, and prices are gradually slipping downward. I do not believe that they will go down so very far, though, as a change in the weather is due and with a change to colder weather we can expect a revival of prices. It is colder now, with the prospect of some real winter weather soon.

While roses are coming in plentifully now, many growers report that they will soon be off crop and, with some cloudy, cold weather along with that, we can look for a shortage of roses within the next couple of weeks. Carnations are doing well and the supply is right up to the demand. The quality of the stock is good and the prices are satisfactory, though the tendency is downward. Bulbous stock is seen in increasing quantities and sells well. Lilies of all kinds are in demand. Violets move slowly. This market is well fixed on green goods, with a good demand.

Various Notes.

The florists in Covington and Newport, Ky., had quite a rush last week when the city officials took their seats. They about cleaned up the entire market and this demand, coming just when it did, was a great help to things in general.

January 22 E. G. Gillett will move his wholesale house to 114 East Third street, almost opposite his present location. These new quarters are finely adapted for the wholesale flower business and will give him much more space. Besides this, it will be much more convenient for his customers.

C. E. Critchell is expecting to go to Washington with the Cincinnati delegation to the carnation meeting.

Several changes have taken place among the florists of the west end. The Brighton Floral Co. has closed its doors and Franken Bros. have opened a store on Central avenue.

Sunderbruch & Meier, whose greenhouses are located in Norwood, report a shortage in roses, but have a fine crop in sight.

J. Chas. McCullough has just returned from a trip to California, where he went to attend the wedding of his son, Trimble. During his stay there he went on a hunting trip into old Mexico and in six days managed to bag 600 quail. And they report that it was not so very easy shooting, either.

Peter Herb has just delivered 200 fine white mums to Julius Baer. These mums will be used in a wedding decoration January 18. These, I should say, are the last mums of the season. Mr. Herb was the originator of the carnation Adelaide Kresken, which can probably be said to be the first of the race of fancy carnations which are with us today. This carnation was a very large one, especially according to the standards of that day, but it split badly and consequently was of but little commercial value. Richard Witterstaetter saw the opportunity of improving the carnation, though, and in his early experiments he used it freely in various crosses. Enquirer was one of the early results, and though this carnation was a great improvement, it still retained too much of the bursting quality to be of great commercial value. Mr. Witterstatter has since eradicated the tendency to burst from his seedlings by careful crossing.

Heller Bros. are shipping some very good Beauties to this market. They report a good crop on.

Weiland & Olinger are in with a good cut, which is sold out as soon as received every day.

C. P. Dieterich & Bro., of Maysville, Ky., are sending in some fine Brides and Maids and their violets are as good as any seen in this market.

A report of the death of Wm. Cunningham will be found in the obituary column.

Mrs. Joe Linfoot passed away from heart trouble and was buried January 14. While her death was expected, still it came as a great shock to her family and to her many friends.

Gus Adrian is on the sick list and Charlie Jones is also confined to his home with a bad cold. C. J. OHMER.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

John Walker says it is not very consoling to be told by a fellow craftsman that he can grow more flowers by moonlight than John can by sunlight, but it is about a fact just the same and conditions have become so that another year will see this big range of glass transported to a brighter region. The cost of even attempting to keep the glass free from acid and smoke is in itself a serious item. And yet some things flourish. Carnations and roses just linger, but violets flower profusely, particularly a single named Mystery, of which, this season, by actual count, more than 25,000 have been picked from a bench 200 feet long, plants four rows in width.

BRIDGEMAN'S SEED WAREHOUSE

The stem averages five inches and the flower is deep blue, of good size and highly fragrant. It originated with Carl Merkle, of Mentor, and has not, I believe, been widely distributed. Here is an experimental house of early flowering sweet peas. The earliest and most free is a fine white from a leading seed house and is ahead of all others. Mr. Walker says it may well be called a dark weather favorite. Begonia rubra is grown in large numbers. It has a good sale, being one of the best flowering kind to bed out. Asparagus plumosus nanus in 3-inch pots, by the thousand, is thrifty stock, just ready for a shift. A large stock of Nephrolepis Scottii and Ficus elastica is disposed of at wholesale.

Gus. A. Geng is out of the smoke zone and manages to produce a full line of stock, which finds ready sale at retail. W.

I HAVE been much pleased with the REVIEW and think it is the best paper printed for the trade.—AUGUST MILLER, Greenwich, Conn.

Vegetable Forcing.

PARSLEY.

Parsley sown now in rows on a raised bench will give more leaves at a time when the regular winter supply is running to seed and will net remarkable prices. If a bench is not at liberty, drop half a dozen seeds in each of a number of small pots and plant them out when you have a spare bench. These plants may be kept in pots, gradually hardened off and planted outdoors in April. At the time this parsley is yielding nice leaves the price is usually high, the season being right between the winter and summer crops. N.

ELECTRIC LIGHT ON LETTUCE.

I am trying to force lettuce by light at night. Should the temperature be the same as during the day? B. B. C.

You cannot make your plants work night and day without a little rest. Night being the natural time for this, the temperature must then be lowered. Even with electric light I would not run the house over 45 degrees during the night, or your plants will become weakened and the foliage thin, and the plants will thus be rendered susceptible to the attacks of disease. Wm. Scott.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Cucumbers, 60c to 80c doz.; leaf lettuce, 15c to 20c case; mushrooms, 20c lb.

Boston, Jan. 12.—Cucumbers, $2.50 to $7.50 box; tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.; lettuce, 25c to 40c box; romaine, 75c doz.; escarolle, 40c doz.; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box; mint, 40c to 50c doz.; radishes, $1.50 box; asparagus, $5 to $6 doz. bunches.

New York, Jan. 14.—No. 1 cucumbers, 75c to $1 doz.; No. 2 cucumbers, $2 to $3.50 box; head lettuce, 15c to 35c doz.; beet tops, 75c to 90c bu. box; mushrooms, 30c to 40c lb.; mint, 35c to 50c doz. bunches; radishes, $1.75 to $2.50 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 90c to $1 doz. bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

CAULIFLOWER.

Cauliflower sells well in the large markets during April and May, before the season for fresh garden peas opens, and brings good prices with the high grade commission dealers. Kronk's Erfurt, of which there is a special forcing strain, is undoubtedly superior to all other varieties for forcing. Sow the seed now in flats or in the bench in a house kept at 50 degrees at night. Prick off into flats or benches when sufficiently large to handle, which would be after the second pair of leaves has appeared, and later plant out in benches of well manured soil. They can be grown much warmer than lettuce, 55 degrees at night suiting them well, but they will do well 10 degrees lower. It is a good idea to place a layer of rotten manure at the bottom of the benches for the roots to run in.

Cauliflower must have an abundant water supply when growing and manure water as the heads appear will add to their size. Coldframes in which a foot of warm manure has been firmly tramped are quite suitable for their culture after the end of February in the northern states, provided that the sashes can be covered with mats and matched board shutters during cold weather. A sash 3x6 will hold eighteen to twenty plants. W.

VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS.

We should like to know what vegetables, besides lettuce, tomatoes and radishes, can be grown profitably under glass. At what temperature should they be kept? Do you think it advisable to grow lettuce, tomatoes and radishes in the same house? If not, how could we manage? F. C. H.

Cucumbers are one of the most profitable crops for forcing under glass. They require a night temperature of 65 degrees, with a rise of 20 degrees by sun heat. Cauliflower can also be employed for this purpose. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees suits it best, this same temperature being also suitable for radish and lettuce, though for the latter 45 degrees is better than 50 degrees. But tomatoes require at least 60 degrees at night. The variance in temperature required will therefore show that the three vegetables mentioned in the query cannot be grown successfully in the same house.

The question, "How could we manage?" is a rather hard one to answer, considering that you give no details regarding the arrangement, construction or heating facilities of your house or houses. If you have two houses and one is heated so as to maintain the highest temperature given above, then the matter is quite easy. If you have only one house, you can either cut out the warmer growing class or the cooler growing class and grow the other exclusively, or you can partition your house, install enough piping in the one division to give you the necessary high temperature and run the other part to suit the cooler class.

PACIFIC COAST.

Berkeley, Cal.—H. H. Lilienthal, state vice-president of the S. A. F., is not confining his efforts to securing new members, but has started an auxiliary, in the Juvenile Horticultural Society, organized December 22.

CALIFORNIA NURSERYMEN.

The so-called "hard times" have affected the nursery interests on the Pacific coast to a considerable extent, and some trouble has been experienced in delivering orders that were placed last summer and fall. Generally speaking, last year's business was the heaviest ever done by the coast dealers and the wave of prosperity extended well into the middle of the year. Much planting, both on large and smaller places, had been done and much more was proposed for this season. Countermands, however, began to come in to the sellers, and by the time the season was well advanced considerable stock was left on hand that had been sold previously. This is especially noticeable in the places that do business by the aid of agents, and many nurserymen will not be able to deliver over fifty per cent of their orders. There is not so much trouble with fruit trees and vines, as these are looked upon as necessities, but with ornamental stock of all kinds there is a decided movement to wait a year at least. Owners of large tracts, as well as those who only buy to beautify their homes, have shown the same disinclination to expend much money for what they do not consider necessary articles, and the result is that quantities of stock will be left on the growers' hands.

With nurserymen who do not hire agents there is the same condition, although countermanded orders are not so noticeable, as people usually deal directly with these firms and the difference is mostly noticeable in the absence of inquiries for stock.

Another feature that has made a difference in the sales of the larger firms is their shortening of lengths of time of credit to the smaller firms. This, in turn, has made the smaller dealers more careful in extending credit to people to whom they have in times past given considerable leeway on purchases, and to a certain extent this had the effect of making them more cautious and better able to meet their payments.

With such of the trade as depend entirely on the sale of cut flowers for a livelihood, this has also been very noticeable this season, and quick payments have been the rule all along the line.

We are yet early in the season and there may be brighter times ahead for both the retailer and wholesaler, but the watchword all along the line so far this season has been, "Go slow." G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are far enough removed from the holiday time for business to get back again into its ordinary rut. There is very little doing in a general way. Some retailers seem to be busy enough, but it is principally with funeral work and outside of this there is very little moving.

The weather, however, has not been very conducive to much in the flower line, as we have had an abundance of dark, cloudy days, with some frost. Such a combination does not assist in the developing of inside stock and, with the exception of violets, there is a slight shortage. This is particularly noticeable in the realm of roses and but little fancy stock is seen. White carnations, too, have felt the season's unfavorable weather and they are also in short supply.

Valley is plentiful and has been cleaned up better than at any time since the season commenced. Narcissi of all kinds are plentiful and are bringing good prices. A few inside-grown sweet peas are displayed and net the growers $2 per dozen bunches, each bunch containing about three dozen flowers.

Chrysanthemums are holding out well and, considering the season, they are in good shape. Violets are plentiful and cheap and are being used more this season than ever before in floral designs and sprays for funeral purposes. Maidenhair fern and asparagus are not in as good supply as could be wished at this time and the retailers have some trouble in keeping supplied with these commodities.

Various Notes.

The cheapening announced by the telephone companies of the rates between San Francisco and outside towns will make it much easier for the retailers to keep in communication with the growers.

The Piedmont Floral Co., of Oakland, is well situated in its new store in the Athens hotel.

The Eureka wire works have located on the corner of Castro and Twelfth streets, Oakland.

D. W. Cummings, the well-known landscape gardener, will make a month's visit to the city of Mexico.

Geo. Rosmarin, of Alameda, is cutting largely of Paper White narcissi. He has one of the largest patches of this article on the coast.

Jas. Niven is with Henry E. Botkin at Ross station, Marin Co., Cal. G.

growing such stock as roses, carnations and asters, which are the main crops grown. The business will gradually be expanded so as to include the growing of hardy shrubs, vines and other nursery stock. The range at present consists of four houses, with an office, etc. The houses are all connected. Two of them are each 20x150, and the other two are each 27x150, with plenty of room to extend them. The heating plant, including two large tubular boilers, has also been constructed with a view to future extension. It is a rare thing to find a florist with a growth as rapid as JOHN A. KEPNER, of Harrisburg, Pa. In Oct., 1903, he completed his first greenhouse, 12x66 feet; today he has a block of houses supplying a store at 116 South 2nd St., Harrisburg, another at 35 North 2nd St., Harrisburg, another at 159 South Front St., Steelton, Pa. Cut Flowers, Plants, Funeral and Wedding Work the finest and most up-to-date of any Florist in the two cities. Why, do you ask? Because his stores are supplied fresh every morning. He also is prepared to supply to the Wholesale Trade in a manner that gives the best at fair figures. Address him at

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

PLANT a row of Colorado blue spruce in some conspicuous place. Have every one a perfect specimen.

A CORPORATION organized by citizens of Atlanta, Ga., plans to plant large citrus orchards in Cuba. H. L. Collier is president and H. H. Cabaniss secretary.

THE government will abandon its nursery on Mount Wilson, in Los Angeles county, California, and consolidate it with the one maintained by the Forest Bureau in Lytle Creek Canyon, near San Bernardino.

THOSE who have made extensive use of Ampelopsis Veitchii for covering old trees, buildings, etc., can rest easy, knowing that in spring this useful and beautiful vine will come out unharmed; no so with many other things used for like purposes.

OF all maples the Norway is perhaps the most popular, and deservedly so. The demand for this maple has increased tremendously recently, and this increased demand is by no means confined to a few localities; instead, it is the same nearly all over the country.

IF you think there will be considerable demand in your section within the next few years for four or five-year-old trees, look over some reliable wholesale men's catalogues, then get prices on once transplanted seedlings, make the best bargain you can, get them, plant them and the chances are you will do better than if you grew them from the start yourself.

PERENNIAL phloxes, lifted before the ground freezes solid and planted in a cold greenhouse, will yield a fine crop of strong cuttings before they are obtainable outdoors. This is the best method to increase stock of desirable sorts. The cuttings need treating like chrysanthemums and few will fail to root if carefully watered. Pot off into 3-inch pots and gradually harden so that you can plant out about the middle of April. The trusses produced on these young plants will be much superior to those on the older and larger clumps and the plants will be excellent for fall sales.

CLEMATIS PANICULATA is one of the finest, hardiest and most popular of climbers. The present is a good time to collect a quantity of seeds and sow under a coldframe sash or in flats. Use a compost of loam, leaf-mold and sand. Give a soaking of water and never mind if the soil freezes solid for the winter. The little seedlings will not germinate until next summer; so do not become impatient about their germination nor try to hurry them by starting in a greenhouse, for they will not start any earlier for forcing, possibly not at all. Prick off the seedlings in nursery rows when you can handle them nicely. In two years the plants will be strong and fit to sell to your customers.

NEW FORESTER AT AMES.

At a recent meeting of the board of trustees of the Iowa State College, C. A. Scott, of the United States Forest Service, was elected to the chair of forestry to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Professor H. P. Baker, who accepted a position at the Pennsylvania State College. Mr. Scott is a graduate of the Kansas State Agricultural College and a student of the Yale College of Forestry. Mr. Scott has been continuously in the employment of the Forest Service since graduation and during this period of seven years has gradually advanced through all stages of the work from that of student assistant to forest supervisor, which position he resigned to accept the chair of forestry at the Iowa State College.

STOCK WANTED.

Will you kindly give me the names of any nurserymen in the United States who propagate cuttings of shrubs ready for lining out; or, if there are none in the United States, will you give me the names of two or three of the reliable firms in the old country? I want about 10,000 small stock for lining out in our nursery to grow on.

CORYDON G. DWIGHT.

Janesville, Wis.

INSPECTION IN OHIO.

W. E. Evans, acting chief inspector of orchards and nurseries in Ohio, January 3 filed with Governor Harris the annual report of that department. Because of the several changes in the head of the department, it being vacant at the present time, the work has been interrupted through the year. Nineteen certificates of private orchard inspection were issued during the year; 591 inspections were made. In nursery inspection, 5,113 acres of nursery stock were examined and 1,195 trees ordered destroyed; 3,000 trees were fumigated. It is stated that the law is lame in not providing for the treatment of trees adjoining infested nurseries.

TREES FROM CUTTINGS.

In collecting the material for cuttings of deciduous trees and shrubs now, it will save much time that can be more profitably employed in some other work in the spring if the cuttings are all made the proper length as the work of collecting goes on. Eight inches is a fair average for cuttings of most hardwooded things.

As the cuttings are prepared they should be tied up in bundles of convenient size and then buried in sand or soil in a cool shed or cellar, or even outdoors. When disposed of outdoors they will require more covering than would be necessary indoors.

Evergreen cuttings should not be placed in a house where the temperature is usually so low that vegetation is hindered rather than promoted. Of course, it is much better if the temperature in the house is cool at first, and a little bottom heat available, so that the cuttings will receive the necessary moisture to sustain their foliage and to promote root action at the same time.

Shapely specimens of all kinds of choice evergreens are in constant demand, and many more would be planted than there are if they could be within a reasonable distance of the locality where they are wanted. It pays to grow a number of evergreens of the kinds most in demand. There need be no fear of selling them and at a good profit. M.

AMERICAN APPLE EXPORTS.

W. A. Taylor, pomologist in the U. S. A. Department of Agriculture, states, in reference to the American apple exports, that "the general outlook for sustained and increased foreign demand for our fruits continues good, although adverse tariff rates and inspection requirements in certain countries, notably Germany and France, operate to retard normal development to some extent." It is interesting to note that for the twenty-year period from 1887 to 1907 the exports of fruit to Europe have increased approximately 540 per cent. On the other hand, the imports have increased only eighty per cent. Mr. Taylor points out, however, that large losses in our exports are sustained every year by faulty packing. In some consignments as high as forty per cent of the barrels are recorded as slack or very slack. This means a serious diminution in selling price. It appears that the United States furnishes about two-thirds of the apples shipped to European markets from this side, and Canada one-third.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The cut flower trade remains about the same as usual. Funeral work is brisk, calling for large quantities of flowers. There is a good supply of carnations. The prices are fairly good; 60 cents to 75 cents per dozen is the general price asked. Roses bring from $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail. Violets are almost a drug on the market just now. There is not much demand for these flowers at present; $1.50 per hundred retail is the price. Paper Whites are now coming in regularly. These sell for 50 cents per dozen retail. A few tulips and narcissi are to be seen. These fetch 50 cents per dozen retail.

William P. Pierce had an attractive window display last week. Mr. Pierce is growing violets that would be hard to beat.

H. A. Jahn is selling his flowers of the new carnation Lloyd to almost all of the city retailers. Last week in two days' cutting he picked over 800 blooms. At the Park Street flower market in Boston his flowers are eagerly sought for.

A few sweet peas are now seen on the market. These sell at $1 per hundred retail. Growers are now getting ready for Memorial day. Some of them are planting their seeds of ten weeks' stock. We are having mild weather. W. L.

BUTLER, PA.—Anton Krut says that his Christmas business was equal to that of former years. Prices were not so high, but there were more sales, with the result that his stock was cleaned out.

The Market.

Trade the last week has been quiet and, with the increase in the cut of all kinds of stock, quantities had to be sold far below market prices. Roses have held up in price better than other stock, bringing from 5 cents to 15 cents. Carnations, which are usually in short supply at this time of the year, have been going slowly.

Tulips, Romans, Paper Whites and valley are being sent in freely, but there is no heavy demand for anything in this line. Violets have also gone down with the slump, there being practically no demand for them.

Various Notes.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in some fine pansies and long sweet peas.

Geo. W. Mercer has erected a fine new retail store on West Twenty-fifth street, near Clark avenue, and reports having had a fine trade for the holidays. The walls are of white enamel, with light green frescoing, which makes a beautiful appearance.

Lars Anderson has been sending in a fine cut of Rose-pink Enchantress. His Enchantress are also fine.

F. W. Griffin has had some very attractive windows of late, showing novelties in small potted plants, of which he handles large quantities.

J. M. Gasser has been seriously ill in a sanitarium at Flint, Mich., where he has been spending the winter, and his family was called, as the worst was feared. Mr. Gasser has suffered from heart trouble for some time.

Visitors: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co.; Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co. B.

Des Moines, Ia.—J. T. D. Fulmer is seriously ill with pneumonia, but his speedy recovery is hoped for.

Petersburg, Va.—A. W. W. Bryan is building an addition, 30x40 feet, which will be used for bedding stock in the coming spring. With this addition Mr. Bryan will have about 3,500 square feet of glass.

Green Bay, Wis.—Charles De Clerc is building about 10,000 feet of glass on the property just north of the Fort Howard cemetery and will be ready for the spring trade. A downtown office and salesroom has been opened in the Hoffman building, on North Adams street.

LLOYD No Gold Brick

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Unrooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. 10 per cent discount for cash with order.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of The Florists' Review.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

FLORIST'S REVIEW

WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Trade has kept up remarkably well since the holidays. Everything has been going on at a lively rate. There has also been a great deal of funeral work the last ten days.

American Beauties are more plentiful, the supply being equal to the demand, and prices are more reasonable. Azaleas are plentiful and move slowly at half the former price. Carnations have not been very plentiful, and good prices were obtained up to January 11, when large advertisements appeared in the papers, from two department stores, offering carnations at 2 cents, or 24 cents a dozen. Such advertisements by these department stores are a ruination to the market. When home growers ought to get a return for their hard labor, these stores spoil the profits and it is only done as an advertisement to get the people into the store. These carnations are shipped in from Chicago.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Lamb, manager of Geo. M. Kellogg's wholesale store, reports business as being very good. They are receiving large shipments from Pleasant Hill greenhouses, of violets, American Beauties, Brides and Bridesmaids, and the demand is good for them. They also sold a large lot of cyclamen, of which they had a fine display in their large window.

Geo. M. Kellogg, who has been sick, is now able to be about his business again.

James Payne, on Twenty-eighth and Main streets, is the owner of a freak calla. There are two perfect blooms on one stem. Mr. Payne says he has been in business for forty years, but never saw the like before. He is so proud of it that he will not sell it at any price. Mr. Payne is a good grower and, judging from the way he is starting out the first of the year, he will do double the business this year. We wish him success.

W. H. Humfeld is in very poor health. He has not been able to attend to any business since January 1. He talks of selling out and retiring from the florists' business.

K. Von Bourgondien, of Hillegom, Holland, was a visitor last week.

W. H. H.

London, Ont.—E. Whiting is erecting three greenhouses 30x50 at Smith and Trafalgar streets.

We find the Review a great help in both our flower and vegetable departments.—S. H. Maris, McMinnville, Ore.

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure gilt-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business since the holidays has been very unsteady. Parties and funeral work have produced the only steady call for flowers. Aside from this, trade has been very quiet. Plenty of stock is to be had, excepting the bulb stock, which is still very scarce. Carnations are plentiful, but mostly of poor quality.

Various Notes.

A short visit to Corfu found all the firms looking in good shape. Sweet peas and carnations are the main product and in a few days all will have a large cut for the Buffalo market.

The Buffalo Cut Flower Co., the new wholesale house, reports business to be good. The firm is handling some fine carnations and is well pleased with results.

Dutch bulb agents are arriving daily, thicker and thicker as the time goes on. Some do not even wait till you are able to see how their stock is to pan out, before they ask for the next year's order. Fortunately, we are able to see them coming, by their square-cut coat and small mustache.

As an attraction for a window display, W. J. Palmer & Son have secured a cage of prize-winning cats from the cat show. The idea was a good one and kept a crowd before the window the whole day. R. A. S.

I don't know of any paper that could take the place of the Review.—Abraham Wynne, Stamford, Conn.

Cliftondale, Mass.—Wm. Sim, whose specialties are violets, sweet peas and tomatoes, says he is the largest grower of violets in America.

Enclosed please find check for $1, to renew my subscription to one of the best florists' papers published—the Weekly Florists' Review.—S. J. Trépess, Glen Cove, N. Y.

Onarga, Ill.—The Mosbæk Greenhouse Co. reports that it is highly satisfied with the results from its advertising, and the numerous inquiries received for bedding plants lead the firm to believe that either the season is starting unusually early or there is a shortage of good stock.

Newton Highlands, Mass.—Patrick J. Melia says that business in this locality is very good, notwithstanding the so-called hard times. One thing particularly in favor of the florists is, that the weather has been mild and sunny this winter, which means a saving in the coal bill. Mr. Melia's Lawson carnations are unusually fine this season.

Grand New Double Daisy

A sport from that great money-making single variety, QUEEN ALEXANDRA, that everybody grows to a good profit. You can do better with this. The flowers are large, averaging three inches in diameter, and none of the flowers comes single at any time of the year. It blooms freely, either under glass or outdoors. Young stock, out of 2½-in. pots, ready for delivery, $25.00 per 100.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The general business report for the first half of January is good. In most instances it is ahead of the same period in 1907.

Roses and carnations clean up nicely, carnations at from $2 to $4 per hundred. Some exceptionally fine La Detroit and White Enchantress being handled by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange are in big demand.

Violets have not been moving very readily since the holidays. The price has dropped down to $1 and $1.50 per hundred.

Bulbous stock, consisting mainly of tulips, daffodils and Roman hyacinths, is a glut.

Several large decorations have created an unusually heavy demand for southern smilax.

Various Notes.

J. F. Sullivan was laid up with the grippe for over a week. Mr. Sullivan's housekeeper, who has been with the family for a number of years, died of pneumonia last week.

B. Schroeter had several decorations for the B. & M. I. U., which was holding a convention in Detroit.

Hugo Schroeter has been out of commission several weeks, owing to sickness. While he has been suffering from a severe cold himself, his wife has been laid up with the grippe. H. S.

DENVER.

Two Florists league contests were rolled January 6 on the Brunswick alleys. Team No. 2 defeated No. 1 in three straight games and team No. 4 won two out of three from team No. 3. The scores:

LET CARPENTER'S RAPID TIE CUT YOUR EASTER TROUBLES IN HALF.

Carpenter's Rapid Tie!

MADE OF FLAT COPPER, CAN'T RUST OR CUT INTO PLANT STALK.

FOR TYING Hyacinths, Tulips, Mums, Poinsettias, etc.

This labor saving device, simple as it may seem, has many advantages not possessed by "the old way" of tying with raffia or string .....

SOME GOOD POINTS:

I. The cost is nothing, considering the labor saved.
II. The U clamps the match stick, as the ends are bent about the stalk.
III. The ends not being fastened together, allow for the growth of the plant stalk.
IV. Tests have proved that it prevents buckling and breakage.
V. It is neater and looks better.

ADRIAN, MICH., June 10th, 1907.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Livingston Seed Co. has special sales on plants. These take well. At the time of my visit the firm had a fine lot of primroses and cyclamens, which undoubtedly would have gone off quickly had not old Boreas been getting in his best licks on that day.

Underwood Bros. have had excellent success with the Enchantress carnation and its varieties, planted in the bench and from pots. This settles the question with them; no more planting outdoors.

Carl A. Knopf, of the Franklin Park Floral Co., spent his vacation reorganizing the establishment, making important changes and many improvements. He says business never looked more promising.

Gus Drobisch, of the Cottage Rose Gardens, says that while he does not ship to so far distant points as formerly, home trade is very satisfactory.

J. R. Hellenthal has built a handsome office, facing the street. In addition to being very ornamental, it makes the plant complete.

Mrs. Charles will retire from business after the spring season, having sold the property for building purposes. She has held the fort in the north end for many years and has done well. Mr. Charles intends taking up landscaping and has a job on hand that will take fully one year to lay out.

Miss Fanny Evans has succeeded to the business founded almost half a century back by Maurice Evans. As she retains the services of the clever grower, continued success is certain. W.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.—J. W. Dudley & Sons say that trade was not quite up to the standard in Christmas greens, chiefly on account of the shortage in holly. Business in other lines was about the same as in 1906.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—H. F. F. Thorup, of the Southeastern Nursery & Floral Co., says that business during the holidays was very good, in spite of the money panic. The weather was fine. The death rate has been high of late, creating a harvest for the florist. Flowers are less plentiful than formerly and bring a fair price.

ORCHIDS JUST TO HAND: Cattleya Trianæ, C. labiata, C. Mossiæ, C. Schrœderæ, C. Gaskelliana, C. Speciosissima, C. Citrina, C. Intermedia; Laelia anceps, L. albida, L. autumnalis, L. majalis; Epidendrum Vittellinum majus, E. Cooperianum; Oncidium Crispum, O. varicosum, O. Cavendishianum, O. Luridum; Odontoglossum citrosmum.

To arrive in a few weeks' time: C. Aurea, C. Dowiana, C. Warneri and others.

DAGATA

In DAGATA we have what is conceded, and that without successful contradiction, to be the highest development of the Geranium at the present time, the premier of M. Bruant's many magnificent introductions, which are recognized as the standard in their different classes the world over. The color is a beautiful shade of mauve rose, with large white blotches at the base of each upper petal; flowers are freely produced in enormous trusses; the habit is perfect, dwarf, robust and branching. 25c each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

CYCLOPS. This new race of Geraniums is remarkable for their distinct white center, making them strikingly attractive as a pot plant; the following varieties are all of splendid habit of growth, free blooming, etc., and we are confident they will give satisfaction in every way.

MISTRAL, (Lemoine, 1905), the brightest soft crimson, shading through tender rose to distinct white center. $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100.

MAURICE POTTECHER, (Lemoine, 1905), bright scarlet, shading through tender violet to white center. $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100.

JULES VASSEUR, (Bruant, 1906), vermilion scarlet, distinct white center, slight violet shading on upper petals. 25c each; $2.00 per doz.

LEON BAUDRIER, (Bruant, 1906), beautiful soft cerise, shading to white center. 25c each; $2.00 per doz.

LEOPOLD BOUILLE, (Bruant, 1906) bright crimson magenta, shading through violet to white center. 25c each; $2.00 per doz.

DR. PHILLIPPE TISSIE, (Bruant, 1906), light crimson, shading through magenta to white center. 25c each; $2.00 per doz.

GERANIUMS, New varieties, 100, all different, 1905 and 1906 introduction, a splendid collection for $10.00.

GERANIUMS, Standard varieties, $2.00 per 100 up. 2-in. pots, 1000, our selection, in 20 varieties for $18.50.

GERANIUMS, Ivy-leaved, good assortment, $3.00 per 100.

FACTS ABOUT RADIATION.

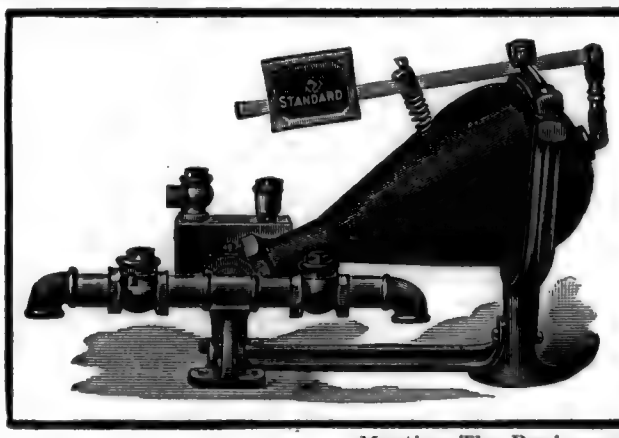
In the REVIEW of December 26, 1907, F. M. L. inquires the number of feet of radiation that certain sizes of pipe will supply. F. R. gives him a table of figures which seems to have been prepared with much care, but which in actual practice is misleading, since it is impossible to state correctly what amount of radiation a given size of pipe will properly take care of without also giving the length of this pipe from the boiler or other ample supply to the point of connection with the coil or radiator. A flow or riser of any certain size, running the length of a 70-foot house, for instance, will not supply the same number of feet of radiation that the same size of pipe would supply if it passed through only a 30-foot or 40-foot house before connecting with the coil or radiator. The principal reason for this is the friction that must be overcome in the long pipe, as well as the radiation of heat from itself. Hence any table of figures that can be given on this point will mislead, unless the length of the supply pipe is also taken into account.

Another point that must be considered is the size of pipe that is being used as radiators. For instance, 500 feet of radiation made up of 4-inch pipe will not require so large a supply pipe as would be necessary for the same number of feet of radiation made up with 1½-inch or 2-inch pipe. Since the small pipes cool so much faster and the friction is greater than in the large pipes, the circulation must be faster and the supply pipe larger.

R. G. MILFORD.

ONE HOUSE WITH PARTITION.

Please advise me about piping a house, 20x70 feet, for hot water. The house is even-span and runs north and south. It has 12-foot rafters and 4½-foot posts, with two feet of glass in the sides. It is double boarded and papered below. The boiler-house is at the north end. The south gable is of glass to within two feet and a half of the ground, the same as in the sides. The house is exposed on all sides. It is divided by a partition, making a 16-foot compartment, next to the boiler-room, in which a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, while the remainder of the house will be run at 50 degrees. The minimum outside temperature in this part of New York state is 25 degrees below zero. I contemplate using a sectional boiler, rated for 900 square feet, and wish the plant to be cheaply installed and to be economical of fuel.



This is my plan for the east half of the large south room: I would run a 2-inch flow from the boiler to the far end of the house, along the east purlin, and drop below the benches to the end of a manifold of four 1½-inch pipes under the east middle bench, connected by a 2-inch pipe to a manifold of five 1½-inch pipes under the east side bench. At the other end of the benches, also, the coils would be connected by 2-inch pipe between the manifolds, with a valve to cut out the middle coil. From the outside end of the east manifold there would be a 2-inch return to the boiler-house, where a line of 3-inch pipe would take up all the returns and carry them to the boiler. This would complete the piping in the east half of the large room, and the west half of this room would be piped in the same way, making eighteen runs of 1½-inch pipe and two runs of 2-inch pipe in the larger compartment.

In the smaller room there will be two raised side benches and two solid beds. I have enough 1¼-inch pipe on hand and would like to use it for this if possible, laying four coils of six 1¼-inch pipes each, one under each outside bench and one at each side of the middle walk, using one pipe of each coil as a flow, which would be supplied by a line of 2-inch pipe carried from the boiler across the end of the house near the ground, the returns to be collected by the line of 3-inch pipe across the house, already referred to.

The expansion tank can be placed ten feet above the top of the boiler. Eight valves are to be used, six on the flows and two on the two middle coils in the larger section. Do you think this arrangement will be satisfactory? If not what changes would you suggest? Should the returns have the same capacity as the flows, or greater?

E. C. B.

The piping you have planned is slightly more than is absolutely necessary. The large room should be maintained at 50 degrees with sixteen 1½-inch pipes, while you are planning to use eighteen. The small room can be heated with twenty 1¼-inch pipes, while you have provided twenty-four, good faults in both cases. The only criticism I have is that it is not wise to attempt to feed one manifold from another or to return one through another. I would suggest that you divide each 2-inch flow at the purlin and carry an independent branch to each manifold, and at the other end carry an independent return from each manifold to the main return. Follow this plan as far as possible in the small room. Push the expansion tank up ten or fifteen feet more, even if you have to carry it on a platform above the roof of the boiler-shed. Your system has only about 550 square feet of radiation, so a boiler rated for 900 or 1,000 square feet should do the work with satisfaction.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Schmidt & Gorkel have succeeded E. H. Fries in business at Fort Thomas, Ky., and will continue on the same lines. John Fries has a good stock for spring and keeps his market stand well supplied.

W. A. Helfer, of Akron, O., has greatly improved the front of his place by the addition of a store and office. Now he does not know why he did without this convenience so long.

Salmon & Son, of Akron, finding that the cut flower branch of their business demands their whole attention, have dropped the landscape department, which, though extensive, was not sufficient to be run alone.

Chas. Lindacher, of Canton, O., was busy putting in the first batch of chrysanthemum cuttings. He says it does not pay to grow carnations on city lots when choice grades can be bought for 1½ cents so soon after the holidays.

The Brown Floral Co., of Canton, now has about 50,000 feet of glass, all up to date, and are shipping much stock to near-by towns. I saw Mrs. Brown make up and pack a three-link floral piece in less than thirty minutes, on a rush phone order. It was a handsome piece, cleverly executed.

Reisch & Barber, of Beloit, O., report a good season. They are satisfied, also, with returns from the branch recently opened at Alliance.

I have seen the quotation somewhere, "The desert shall blossom like the rose." Possibly this meant Texas, for John Good, of the Good & Reese Co., Springfield, O., told me the firm has one customer in the Lone Star state who alone takes 40,000 rose plants each year and distributes them through agents, and this is only one. It would be interesting to know the number of rose plants alone that are distributed in Texas annually. And they thrive, for bushes eight feet high and six feet through are frequently met with down there. W.

DANVILLE, KY.—S. M. Harbison's Christmas trade was fifteen per cent better than in 1906. He says he can see nothing in the way of the largest business for 1908 that was ever done in the flower trade.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

For a Reception Table.

The accompanying illustration shows an arrangement by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, for a reception or tea where the guests stand or are seated about the room. It consists of a high vase of one variety of long-stemmed flowers, and around it a wreath loosely arranged, with four corner-pieces loosely tied with a ribbon to match. This style of decoration gives abundant opportunity for displaying taste. In this case the flowers were dahlias grown under glass.

TROUBLE WITH FICUS.

One of my customers brings me some leaves from her rubber plant and wants to know why the edges, and finally the whole leaf, turn brown as shown in the samples enclosed herewith; and she wants to know what to do for the plant. Can you give me the information?

H. P.

The ficus leaves enclosed with this query have all the appearance of having been frozen, and it seems probable that the plant has been standing too near a window during severe weather, or has been otherwise exposed to a draft of cold air. Occasionally one finds the leaves of a ficus browning around the edges from having too much water during the period of rest, but a case of the latter kind shows a rather different injury from that shown by the leaves in question, and a few minutes' exposure to a sufficiently low temperature would be enough to spoil the plant in the manner indicated.

W. H. TAPLIN.

COLORS.

There is nothing more difficult than defining the colors of various flowers, says a writer in a paper read by florists in England. If we could only get some registered guide it would be a great help; but then, all the catalogue descriptions would be wrong. I remember some years ago a west end florist in London telling me that when he had to match a lady's dress or ribbons he always asked for a sample; otherwise it would be impossible to be anywhere near the colors wanted. We know what a white should be, yet even here there are various shades. Yellows are not so difficult; but come to pinks we are in a sad fog. Compare a rose-pink chrysanthemum with a proper rose-pink rose, and they are as different as possible, the chrysanthemum described as a rose-pink being a purple-pink. Take what is described in catalogues as a scarlet stock, and compare it with a scarlet geranium and there is a wide difference, and it is much the same with other colors.

With a view to getting some more definite ideas regarding proper definitions of the different colors, I once went to the warehouse of a firm who are large importers of French dress materials, and after being shown the color chart, and having some conversation with one of the managers, I was in a greater muddle than ever, for I found that none of the colors in dress materials corresponded with those of flowers as they are usually described. It is the pinks, crimsons, purples and reds that are the most perplexing. Then if we take mauve, lavender and heliotrope, can anyone define the difference between these and lilac? To be correct, there is no doubt a difference; yet as described in catalogues, they are much mixed up. And I find after going through an American color chart that almost all the descriptions found in any catalogue of florists' flowers would have to be altered. The National Chrysanthemum Society's floral committee defines the colors of the varieties submitted to them and they are registered; yet there are few who would agree that they are right.

THE EAGLES.

The illustration on pages 4 and 5 show two methods of treating a design which often is called for. The Fraternal Order of Eagles is national in its extent, and its membership is large. The result is that retail florists everywhere are asked times without number to make an appropriate design for the funeral of some member of the organization.

One of these illustrations shows the bird of freedom as it is conceived to be in Maine; the other is a prairie eagle, from Illinois. It is evident that the artist in Maine gets the conception of the bird's poise, not from that new-fangled notion, the clearing-house certificate, but from the good old dollar of our daddies, several of which formerly changed hands on the transaction. But the Illinoisan is an impressionist and does not seek a model, but puts up a good, fat figure without much regard to form. In each case galax leaves are used for a background, one being bordered with smilax and the other left wholly unadorned. Asters were used in Maine and white carnations on the prairie.

One of these designs is the work of a woman, Mrs. Franklin D. Hartshorn, of Augusta, Me., and the design has been adopted by Capitol Aerie, of that town, as the official piece of the order, to be sent by them at the death of any member. The other design is by Claude Wisely, of Murphysboro, Ill., who started the business as a boy in knickerbockers and does a prosperous trade.

FLORICULTURAL EDUCATION.

Travel and Observation.

I have just read with much interest Mr. Kempton's inquiry, "Floricultural Education," of January 16, and, as I am trying to learn the florists' trade also, perhaps my reply may be of interest to him and others.

He asks, "Where can a young man learn the trade?" I would say, by doing as our employers have done; travel from one place to another; get different men's ideas, methods, etc. I am afraid that he will be unable to find a place where he can learn the trade "from seed sowing to hybridizing," for the florists are going more into specialties.

I note that he mentions that florists do not wish to bother with learners. I would say that I have always found my employers as willing to teach me their business as I was to learn it, and why shouldn't they, when they realize that the more the employee knows the more intelligence he shows in his work?

I see no reason why a young man of today cannot become as good, if not a better, florist than those of the past.

Agricultural Colleges.

It seems to me that there are two possible solutions to the inquiry of Thomas A. Kempton, on page 5 of the issue of January 16 of the Review. One solution is to become an apprentice to some leader in the line of work chosen. To thoroughly learn the "tricks of the trade" from this leader the apprentice may have to pay what might be called a "tuition." When such is done it can be demanded that the master instruct the apprentice in the arts of the trade. Where one simply hires himself to the master, only such things may be learned as the employee may pick up from observation, the employer not necessarily being under any obligations to teach any of the "secrets" of the craft or trade. Such education as this will undoubtedly make a one-sided man. Emphasis has been placed entirely on the "how" of doing any particular piece of work. The apprentice in such cases has little chance of rising above the standard of the master.

But to become one of the future leaders in horticultural work there is, and will be, a much stronger struggle for existence than has been the case in the past. This brings me to the second solution I have to offer to Mr. Kempton's question. The agricultural colleges of the country are yearly turning out hundreds of young men and women who have been given solid and thorough training in the "why" of doing the various phases of work incidental to all of the multitudinous lines of soil cultivation. These young men have a broad, solid foundation for their future work. It is true that the education which some of these men receive is purely "book learning" and they are only partially equipped for the struggle for existence. The practical end of their work, the money making end, has to be learned after they get out of school. But in the better schools of agriculture of today, equal emphasis is placed on the practical side of all work. The students are taught how to do a certain piece of work and then why it is done in that particular manner. The purpose is to develop the mind as well as the hand. It is a combination of the purely practical and the theoretical, and makes a broader man, a man better equipped for his work, than when emphasis is placed only on one side of the training.

As for a college education costing lots of money—it is true that it does cost money. But the total amount of a four-year course in college need not scare any one off. Each year there pass under my observation hundreds of young men who are working their way through school. Some of these young men work for every cent they get from the first day they leave home till the day they graduate; others may get some assistance from their parents or friends. But it is a usual and expected thing for many students in college to work their way through. And it is a good thing for the student in agricultural schools especially, as there is always a demand for help on the farms or gardens, and the students get additional practical experience in their training and are just that much better equipped in the end.

I am sorry that there are not more schools giving instruction in floriculture, but to my knowledge only two agricultural colleges make any special attempt at it, namely, the universities of Illinois and Massachusetts; while a number of others give a good course in general horticulture which equips one for taking up floriculture after leaving school. This lack of instruction in floriculture is because there has been only a small demand for work of this sort. But for any young man who is desirous of following commercial floriculture, I would strongly urge him to lay a good foundation. This can be done by taking a full course in some good agricultural college, laying especial emphasis on the horticultural end of the work. Much practical work will be obtained while doing this, and the theoretical obtained will better enable him to quickly grasp the reasons for doing other practical things which can be learned only by experience. It is the practical end of the training that makes the money, but one with a good foundation can more quickly acquire and understand these practical phases than one trained in the practical work only.

During the next generation there will be a greater demand for these college-trained practitioners than there has been in the past. It was not many years ago that no one thought of going to college to learn to do practical work. But each year sees a change of sentiment and there is an increasing demand for college-trained men, and most of these college men are outstripping their practical brothers in the same lines of work.

USE OF MIXED POLLEN.

There has been a wide divergence of opinion among botanists and hybridizers as to whether, by using mixed pollen, the influence of more than one of the pollen parents will be transmitted to the resultant seedlings. Some botanists claim that it is all but impossible to fertilize with double pollen, but a short article in the December number of the English Orchid Review would seem to upset this idea. The paragraph, which I will quote in full, is as follows:

"A year ago we recorded an experiment made in the collection of R. G. Thwaites, Esq., of Streatham, by crossing Laelia xanthina with mixed pollen from Cattleya Warscewiczii and C. Dowiana aurea, and how one of the seedlings flowered as Laelio-cattleya Phryne, a hybrid from the first mentioned cattleya. Another which subsequently bloomed was believed to be Laelio-cattleya Ophir, a hybrid from C. Dowiana aurea. We have recently seen the batch of seedlings, some of which show clearly the Warscewiczii and others the Dowiana habit, and one which was in flower was clearly a richly colored form of Ophir, having deep yellow sepals and petals and traces of the rich Dowiana color and markings in the top. It is now clear that both hybrids have appeared out of the same cross and we hope to be able to report further next year when other seedlings bloom."

Mr. Thwaites is one of the best known of English orchid specialists and an enthusiastic hybridist. The result of his cross is most interesting. It settles one point on which differences of opinion existed. The other point on which we need further light is, can the characteristics of two pollen parents be transmitted to one seedling? It will be interesting to learn whether any of Mr. Thwaites' seedlings develop in this way and thus settle what has been a knotty problem. W. N. CRAIG.

BENCHES OVER CEMENT FLOORS.

Will plants on benches over cement floors do as well as the ones over earth floors? M. E.

There is no reason whatever why plants will not grow as well in benches over cement floors as over earth or cinders, such as are usually found in commercial establishments. From the standpoint of neatness, the cement floors have an advantage, the only trouble being that they do not hold the moisture as well as those made of cinders or stone, and it is necessary to damp them more frequently. I would certainly not advise any florist to put in cement floors unless it might be in some show house attached to the store or salesroom. C. W.

FIBROTTA PLANT TUBS.

Cordley & Hayes, New York, who make Fibrotta ware, as the indurated fiber receptacles are known in the trade, say that many florists have adopted tubs made of indurated fiber as the most acceptable for large plants. The great strength and durability of this material make it especially suitable for this service, as it is absolutely water-proof and of handsome appearance.

Wooden tubs are all right for a time, but as soon as moisture from the soil penetrates the coating of paint decay begins, and there is no way of stopping it. The metal hoops, too, are a source of weakness, from their liability to rust and break, allowing the tub to fall apart. As regards earthenware, a blow or fall is enough to break it, which not only involves the loss of the pot, but not infrequently injures or destroys the plant as well. Nearly all jobbers handle Fibrotta ware and report it coming into more general use as its qualities become better understood.

POOR COLOR IN VIOLETS.

I bought some Princess of Wales violet plants from a florist this spring. The plants grew nicely and are blooming well, but the color of my flowers is very light compared with the original stock. What is the cause of the difference in the shade of the flowers? Can I work any fertilizer, etc., in the soil and get darker shaded flowers? W. C. P.

If you had stated the night temperature given your single violets, it would have been easier to answer your query. If you are keeping them at 45 to 50 degrees at night, they are too warm and will come a much paler color than in a house held at 40 to 42 degrees. Have you ever noticed the magnificent color of singles grown in coldframes, where they never get any fire-heat at all? The cooler they can be grown, the deeper will be the color. They may open more slowly, but if you want dark color you must grow them cool.

Too early planting causes an excess of leaf growth and the flowers come pale in color also. We think it probable, however, that too high a temperature is the main trouble with your flowers. If so, lower the night readings to 40 to 42 degrees, letting the thermometer run up 10 to 15 degrees on bright days. Adding fertilizer will hardly improve the color of the flowers, unless they are kept cool. Some soot-water aids in coloring both leaves and flowers. If the benches are well filled with roots, mulch them with some fine, well rotted cow manure or pulverized sheep manure. This will help to keep the roots cool and moist and give necessary feeding at the same time. C. W.

VIOLETS UNSATISFACTORY.

I enclose some violet buds. The stems look dried out and the buds go to seed. I keep them at from 38 to 40 degrees at night and 50 to 60 degrees during the day. I have kept them on the dry side since last fall. They bloom poorly and the leaves have not grown much since last fall. They stay short and small. My soil is loose. It does not pack solid. I have a good deal of manure in it. What kind of soil would you advise me to use for next fall? Would new soil out of new timber land be suitable? F. J.

The leaves and flower stems enclosed were certainly puny and if these are an average sample of what your plants are producing, conditions must be radically wrong. You do not state what variety you are growing. It hardly seems possible that the variety is Princess of Wales. Are you quite sure that you are not growing some small and inferior variety? Your night temperature should be all right and the rise in the daytime is not excessive, with sun heat. It is a great mistake to keep your plants on the dry side. Violets, like pansies, want to be cool and moist at the root, and if you have good drainage, my advice would be to soak your beds or benches thoroughly, making sure the water has reached the bottoms of the roots. Choose a sunny day for watering and do it early in the day, so that the foliage may dry before nightfall. Violets want a light, sunny house, a compost of three parts loam and one part rotted cow manure, well mixed, and must never be allowed to become dry at the root. Some growers use even more manure than I have suggested, but you can provide extra food when needed in the form of top dressings or liquid manure. C. W.

THE METAL TIE.

At the Philadelphia convention of the S. A. F. a young man sat on a table diligently wiring a plant to a stake. He was using an invention for which he had applied for a patent. He called it Carpenter's Rapid Tie and he had a circular on which was reproduced a letter from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., dated June 22, in which Mr. Pierson said, "I believe your device to be a labor saver and feel enough satisfied with it to give you an order for 100,000 as a trial." Carpenter & Co., Cohoes, N. Y., who were making the exhibit at Philadelphia, say they have had a large business as a result of their display. The tie is simply a narrow strip of flat copper, looped in the center where it naturally clasps the stake. It is soft and easily bends around the plant and will neither rust nor cut into the plant. While thousands upon thousands were used by chrysanthemum growers and poinsettia growers, the approaching bulb season gives Carpenter & Co. their busiest time, for millions will be used on these plants.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Night Temperature.

From a letter recently received, there appears to be some difference of opinion regarding the graduation from day to night temperature.

Some growers advise keeping the day temperature at 60 to 65 degrees on bright days, reducing it to 58 or 60 degrees at dark, then gradually allowing it to fall to the proper night temperature for each variety by midnight and keeping it there until the outside temperature begins to rise, which will be about 8 or 9 a. m. Others reduce to the proper night temperature soon after dark and try to keep it there until after daylight, while there are those who allow the mercury to drop several degrees below regular night temperature after 4 a. m.

In changing from day to night temperature we are striving to imitate nature by adhering to the principle that light and temperature go hand in hand, and I imagine the plan of gradually reducing the temperature until midnight is an attempt to follow nature more closely. To say this method is the ideal one, would be making a very broad statement; still, one would not be justified in declaring it altogether wrong, as there is a certain element of merit in it, for one of the fundamental principles of carnation culture is to avoid sudden fluctuations in temperature, especially a descending one. But, with all this, it is doubtful if such mode of procedure would be practical from a commercial standpoint.

A small addition to details often involves an additional expense wholly out of proportion to the advantage gained, and the small grower might well hesitate to increase his personal cares, for with him a night fireman is out of the question. My experience is that by proper manipulation of the ventilators and heating apparatus, we can bring about the desired change in temperature by dark, without in the least injuring the plants or lowering the quality of bloom.

Taking, for example, a bright day in January, when the sun sets between 4:30 and 5 p. m., the ventilators will need lowering more or less, according to outside temperature, from 2:30 to 4 p. m., at which time all would, under ordinary circumstances, be tightly closed. Meanwhile the heating apparatus should have been gotten in condition to respond when called upon, as the sun's influence lessens rapidly as its rays begin to leave the glass. Increase the inside heat as the outside temperature falls, but instead of maintaining the regular day temperature, allow it to fall gradually from 4 to 6 p. m., when the regular night temperature is reached.

Growers who claim to allow a drop of several degrees after 4 p. m. may be unwilling to admit that such a circumstance is beyond their control. I should be pleased to learn of any benefits to be derived from such a practice.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Splitting and Wilting.

During the last few days we have had the most trying weather of the season on the carnation calyxes. After considerable cloudy weather we had some mild, bright days, followed again by several cloudy days and so on, changing back and forth every few days. This has caused the blooms to develop in spurts and much complaint is heard about splitting of calyxes. If you are having trouble, do not blame the night man; he cannot help it. You will find that in most cases the variable weather is at the bottom of the trouble.

The worst of it is that you can do but little to prevent the bursting. If you have been feeding strong and pushing your plants to the utmost, you will have much more trouble than if you have been growing them moderately. The same may be said in regard to the plants wilting. Plants that are soft from having been overfed will wilt so they will lie down on the wires, and spraying must be resorted to to keep them up. A light spraying overhead before noon will help them considerably, but make it light and be sure the plants are dry by night. In a few days they should hold up well.

In such weather it will pay you to cut the blooms quite close on most varieties. A stem which supports a bloom two-thirds developed, if it wilts down, will never straighten up as it should. The weight of the bloom will hold it down. If you are propagating now, take cuttings from the plants only in the morning while such weather prevails. The cuttings are nice and fresh then and will hold up better in the sand.

The Washington Convention.

I hope you intend to be in attendance at the carnation convention at Washington, D. C., next week. From all accounts it ought to be a hummer. Every grower of carnations, whether on a large or small scale, ought to make an effort to attend and encourage this society in its good work. Do not harbor the idea that these meetings benefit only the carnation specialists and breeders. Of course they are the greatest beneficiaries, but every man who grows any carnations at all is benefited by the work this society is doing. If it were not for these meetings, etc., the society would not be doing this work, and the least you can do is to encourage it by being a member, even if you cannot be a very active one. If you are not a member, I feel sure that you are not very enthusiastic over your carnations. Enthusiasm is what causes men to accomplish things and it is enthusiasm about the carnation that this society keeps up. So get in line and become an enthusiast, and before you know it you will be casting about for better varieties and improving your methods of culture and, in fact, you will be taking new interest in your carnations.

NINETEEN SPORTS.

This number of sports in one season, of a single variety and at one establishment, seems to us to be remarkable enough to be worthy of being chronicled. However, this is the number of variations from the original Enchantress that we have noted among our 4,000 plants of that variety, and they are almost as varied as numerous. We have pure white, shell pink, rose pink, variegated, blotched, and splashed specimens. Three of them are particularly worthy of note —the pure white, a large splashed one and a shell pink. Of these three, all of which we consider quite distinct and worth multiplying by propagation, the shell pink one is especially attractive. It is of a delicate, soft tint, without a suggestion of the salmon tinge which at times gives Enchantress a rather faded appearance, and in this instance the whole plant appears to be a sport. Three blossoms have appeared and they have all had the same attractive color. We intend to take particular care of this plant, which is a small one. We will propagate what cuttings we can from it this season, and if the variation proves to be fixed it will certainly be heard from as soon as we can get up a stock of it.

STATE FLORAL CO.

VARIETIES IN SAME HOUSE.

Could I successfully grow Enchantress, Queen Louise, Lady Bountiful and Wm. Scott in the same house? If so, would it make any difference which would be at the cool end? If the above varieties would not go together, please name white and pink varieties to grow with Enchantress. R. E. G.

You can grow the varieties you mention successfully in one house. Plant Enchantress in the cool end and Queen Louise in the warm end. Queen Louise and Wm. Scott are not considered up-to-date varieties any more up this way. In your warmer North Carolina climate, however, they may do better than some of our best sorts. If Enchantress does well for you, its white sport, called White Enchantress, ought to do as well. White Perfection ought to do well for you, too. The Rose-pink Enchantress might come washy most of your season, but Aristocrat has a good color in warm weather and should do well for you. A. F. J. B.

BOTTOM HEAT FOR CUTTINGS.

Can carnation cuttings be successfully rooted without the aid of bottom heat? If so, I should like to learn how it can be done. F. H. B.

Bottom heat is not absolutely necessary for rooting carnation cuttings, but with slight bottom heat they will root in a shorter period of time. This is quite important to those who propagate large quantities, and if the bottom heat is not too strong it is not harmful to the cuttings. Ten degrees warmer than the top temperature is not too high for the bottom, but we do not want more.

It is not the heat that draws the roots out, but the striking out of roots is a natural function on the part of the plant. Root formation and root growth, like top growth, are more rapid in a warm temperature than they are in a cool temperature. The carnation, being a cool-loving plant, will bear but little forcing beyond its natural temperature and therefore should be kept cool. By keeping the top cool and the bottom slightly warmer, the cutting itself is held stationary and in good condition, while the root formation is encouraged or hastened. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE ON WOLCOTT.

I am mailing a sample plant of the Wolcott carnation, and should like to know the cause of the spotting of the leaves, and the remedy. I have just a few that are affected this way. I also find now and then one of the Enchantress so affected. What would you suggest doing? C. A. S.

The specimen of Wolcott you sent is badly affected with stigmonose, and if your plants are all as bad as this one I would advise you to discard the whole batch. There are a number of white varieties on the market at present which are far better than Wolcott ever was, so why not stock up with up-to-date varieties? However, if you prefer to keep on growing Wolcott, propagate only from plants which do not show any of those light spots. By keeping this cutting selecting up for several years, you can work the disease out of your stock. You must give your plants careful attention and sane culture, however, along with it. Especially keep down all insects, as these are supposed to be the cause of the introduction of the trouble in the first place. A. F. J. B.

MUMS WITH WEAK STEMS.

Will you let us know how late in the season we can run a mum house without firing? What night temperature is best during October and November? Our mums have been somewhat weak-stemmed, possibly from too high temperature. But if the night temperature is low, will it not affect the keeping quality of cut flowers in a living room temperature or the temperature that cut flowers are subject to? F. D. S.

It depends on the season as to how late one can run a chrysanthemum house without heat. If the night temperature is 40 to 50 degrees, it is all right, though it is better to have a crack of heat, so as to maintain this temperature with air on, than it is to shut the house up tight and get a damp, close atmosphere. By giving all the air possible, day and night, F. D. S. will do away with a good deal of trouble from weak stems. The chrysanthemum loves air and lots of it at all stages of its growth, and neglect or ignorance of this is responsible for much of the wretched stock one sees in the wholesale markets.

We generally, in this part of New Jersey, get frost in the last week of September and give heat at that time, though after a few nights the weather picks up again and one can sometimes run through October with no heat to speak of. The heat is given not so much to keep the temperature high as it is to keep a current of dry air moving through the house, so that the flowers will not damp. A high night temperature makes the flowers soft and a low temperature makes them stiff. In other words, flowers grown in a low temperature will keep longer after they are cut, because a low temperature is natural to the chrysanthemum at flowering time, and the nearer a grower keeps to nature the better success will he have. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

MUMS ON OPEN GROUND.

I have a large, level piece of ground, adjoining my greenhouses, on which I wish to grow a large number of mums, two to a stem, for Thanksgiving day, in the following manner: First I would set up posts to support the woodwork for the hotbed sashes; then I would plant the mums in the ground and grow them the same as indoors, only without glass, putting on the hotbed sashes at the approach of the first frost and removing them and piling them away for the winter after the mums are all cut.

How high should this house be to suit such mums as Dean, Baer and Jones? Should these mums be planted right in the flat ground, or, if planted in beds enclosed by boards set on edge, how wide should the boards be? The sashes are 3x7, and thirty-two in number. How should this house be heated, using hot water? The house would run north and south and would be twenty feet from the present house, where the boiler is located. The boiler is capable of heating another house 20x100.

Will mums produce bread and butter blooms under these conditions? When should they be planted? Are there any other cultural notes you could add?

J. M. J.

While blooms grown as J. M. J. proposes will not be of exhibition grade, still fair flowers can be produced in the manner described. If the piece of ground referred to is well drained, I would plant right in the soil and not bother to make beds, but if the soil is naturally low and wet, raised beds would be necessary. Set a 10-inch board on edge, supporting it by short posts and filling with six inches of soil to make the bed. The paths between the beds will serve as drains in wet weather, but, as stated before, if the soil is a sandy loam no bed is necessary.

The house should be not less than five feet and a half high, and more if J. M. J. is a tall man, since when one is building it is just as easy to build a framework under which one can work in comfort as it is to build a squatty affair which causes a man to use profane language every time he goes into it. The varieties mentioned, Dean, Baer and Jones, do not go over four to five feet at the outside. There are some other kinds, such as Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Mrs. Geo. Beech and Mrs. Swinburne, which would need more head room, possibly, but which would turn in J. M. J. considerably more money from the same amount of space, as would also Jennie Rosette and M. Hankey.

Planting should be done in June, if possible, so that the young stock will have a good chance to get growing early enough in the season.

As to the amount of heat needed, I am no expert on heating, but a 2-inch pipe all around the house should be ample to keep out the frost and that is all that J. M. J. would require for plants grown under such conditions.

Chas. H. Totty.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Herbaceous Calceolarias.

The blooming time for herbaceous calceolarias is April and May. They make quite rapid growth now and it is time to transfer them to their flowering pots. For compost use fibrous loam, dried and screened cow manure and sand. If the loam is a little heavy, none the worse. Some finely broken charcoal and a little soot are also desirable soil constituents. Better not use chemicals in the soil; they can be utilized later in the form of surface dressings. Grow the calceolarias cool; 42 to 45 degrees at night is quite warm enough. They will revel in a low night temperature and be less a prey to green aphis than in a house kept 5 degrees warmer. Press the soil moderately firmly in the pots at the final shift. We find the plants appreciate an occasional light spraying overhead, and like plenty of fresh air.

Smilax.

Probably your first crop of smilax strings will now be all cut. See that strings are run up in ample time for the second lot, before they can become entangled. Also give the beds or benches a mulching of good cow manure. Keep the plants on the dry side for a week or two after the first crop is cut. When you start them up, soak thoroughly. Never use white twine for smilax or Asparagus plumosus. The green article comes somewhat higher, but should always be used.

Primulas.

If good flowering plants are wanted for Christmas trade, it is always well to grow a batch of primroses. They can be easily grown and at a moderate cost, usually selling well if in good shape. The Chinese primroses make the best holiday plants, especially the lighter shades. Extra good sorts are Crimson King and Chiswick Red, but there is sure to be a call for the white and pink colors also, the blue varieties not taking so well.

Seed can now be sown of any of the primulas wanted for winter bloom. The soil should be largely leaf-mold, with a little loam, some fine sand and charcoal added. To kill weed seeds and insect life, it is better to sterilize the compost for all choice seeds. This is easily done where steam is used. Use well drained pans or flats for sowing the seeds in. Put some coarse compost over the drainage, filling the balance with that which has been finely screened. Water the surface, using a can with a fine rose, after making the surface perfectly level. Then scatter the seeds over it, dust a little sandy compost over them, place in a warm, moist house and keep covered with paper until the seeds germinate.

Primula obconica can be treated similarly to P. Sinensis. There are now some fine colors of this primrose. Its persistent flowering qualities should commend it to all florists who grow pot plants.

Seeds of these primroses may be sown until the end of March and produce nice plants, but if really strong stock is wanted the seed must be gotten in as soon as possible. Do not, on any consideration, purchase cheap seed. The best will be found the cheapest in the end. Avoid cheap mixtures. Rather get a packet each of the best selling colors, which can be obtained separately from all reliable seedsmen.

Plants for Easter.

It seems rather a long cry until Easter, it being still almost three months away, but it is now necessary to pay a good deal of attention to plants you may want in bloom at that time. Rambler roses must be started right away, or they will not be in season. Do not tie the canes straight up, but wind them round and round three or four stakes evenly spaced round the edges of the pots. Start rather cool; 45 to 48 degrees at night will suffice. Spray freely in bright weather and give them the fullest sunshine. Hydrangeas do not cut much of a figure as Easter plants. Any wanted by April 19 should now have shoots several inches long. Keep them well watered and feed liberally where they are potbound. It is much too early to start genistas, Acacia paradoxa and Azalea Indica.

Spiræa Japonica is one of the most useful of Easter plants. By allowing twelve weeks for the newer varieties, such as astilboides, grandiflora and Gladstone, and ten weeks for the ordinary S. Japonica, they will come in season all right. Start in a brisk heat. Grow them somewhat cooler after they have made a few inches of growth. Rhododendrons, lilacs, metrosideros, deutzias, prunus and other shrubs for forcing must not be started for some weeks yet. Keep cool; a little frost will not harm them.

If your longiflorum lilies are six to eight inches high and in a night temperature of 50 degrees, they will come along in good season. Get rid of any sickly and diseased plants and do not let green aphis secure any foothold. Weekly fumigations will keep it in check. Sprayings with diluted tobacco extracts are also quite effective, as they kill any insects they hit.

Blue Cornflowers.

Centaurea Cyanus, commonly known as the blue cornflower, is seen a good deal in the markets from January until July. Sometimes, owing to erratic treatment, plants of this class are a failure inside, but grown in benches at the cold end of a carnation house, they are very fine and furnish a tremendous quantity of flowers for bunching from even a small space.

Sweet Peas.

Weather so far during 1907-8 has hardly seemed like winter at all. We have heard of courageous cultivators who have planted their sweet pea seeds outdoors this month, anticipating from this sowing decidedly better results than would be the case if sown two or three months later. Sweet peas under glass, when flowering, like a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night, with 5 degrees rise in the sun. While such varieties as Christmas Pink and Mount Blanc are necessities for indoor culture in winter, any sorts may be sown now, and as the flowering season will have stronger sunshine than we now enjoy, all will do well.

Stocks and Asters.

Stocks and asters are both grown to some extent under glass, the former more than the latter. Stocks are useful for Memorial day trade and are also in request at other seasons. They improve in quality in spring very much. They make a useful winter crop to follow chrysanthemums or carnations, which may have died of stem-rot.

Asters are less met with as flowers grown under glass, but will pay for any indoor treatment accorded them. Make a sowing of seed now, pot off the seedlings when they have made their second leaves and grow them in a carnation house temperature. Any florist who has a good call for funeral designs and wants some asters before they are obtainable outdoors, should try a bench of them. The flowers come of finer quality than those grown outside, are always clean, never troubled by the aster beetle, and are entirely free from summer droughts, which are often disastrous for asters in the open. Those wishing to experiment on the asters under glass should try Queen of the Earlies, Giant Comet and Victoria. The Comet aster is a decided break from the rather stiff and formal asters. The petals are arranged more loosely, curling up at the tips and reminding one of Japanese chrysanthemums.

Brief Reminders.

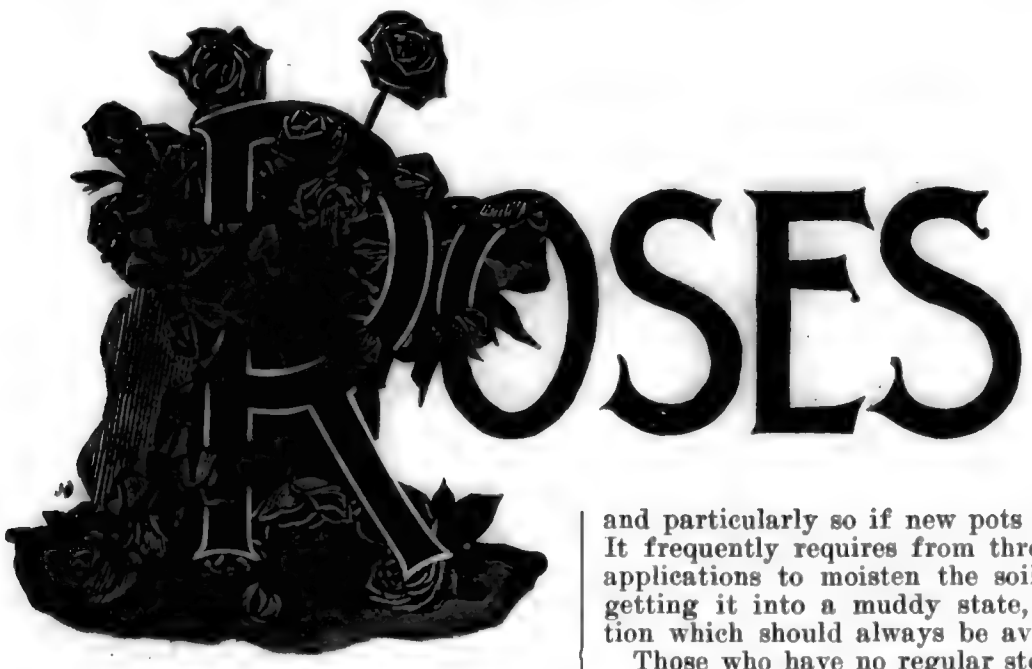
Watch the little geraniums closely. Be sure not to overwater them in the small pots until they are well rooted. Continue to spread out your plants in the benches and give them all possible space.

Start cannas where a large stock of each kind is needed. For spring blooming, cannas in pots make pretty floral pictures.

Continue to propagate any soft-wooded bedding stock you are short of. Do not root any Salvia splendens until March, or the plants will all be much too large.

Shake out a batch of fancy-leaved caladiums and start in small pots in a warm, moist house. One kept at 65 degrees at night will be suitable. Be careful not to overwater until growth is well advanced.

Pinch the tops out of the show pelargoniums, unless you are anxious to have very early flowers.



Start up any hybrid roses, still dormant, which you may want for Easter.

Pot or box off any rooted cuttings in the propagating benches before they become hard.

Keep Spanish iris in a cool house. It resents hard forcing. Do not let the night temperature exceed 50 degrees.

Mulch any outdoor plants hitherto omitted. Alternate freezing and thawing is very bad for the majority of plants.

Plan to attend the Washington carnation convention if possible. It promises to be the largest ever held and the exhibits will surpass anything of the kind ever seen before at a convention.

POTTING YOUNG STOCK.

As soon as the cuttings are ready, and that is when the roots are from half an inch to three-quarters of an inch in length, they should be potted. As the sand or other propagating medium contains no nutriment, it is obvious that the young stock will have to subsist on water alone, if they are left in the bench after root formation is complete. Any growth they may make under these conditions must of necessity be of a weak and inferior character.

Good rose soil with little manure in it and passed through a half-inch screen is just what they like.

For tea roses 2-inch standard pots are large enough. These should be thoroughly clean, especially on the inside. No drainage is necessary.

Care should be taken not to pot too deeply, three-fourths of an inch being deep enough to steady the young plant.

Reject all poor and sickly looking plants, as these require more care and attention than the more robust, and seldom give satisfaction, even if they seem to recover. The space can be utilized more profitably than nursing weak stock.

Before setting the plants on the bench it is a good plan to see that the soil is thoroughly moistened. This cannot be accomplished by one application of water, and particularly so if new pots are used. It frequently requires from three to five applications to moisten the soil without getting it into a muddy state, a condition which should always be avoided.

Those who have no regular stock house should select some nice airy position in a house with a night temperature of 56 degrees to 58 degrees. Spread some sifted coal ashes on the bench to the depth of an inch or so. This makes good, clean drainage and prevents worms from working up into the pots. Set the pots close together and shade lightly for a few days until root action commences.

During bright weather they will require watering and syringing twice a day and should at all times have an abundance of fresh air. RIBES.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Spring Exhibition.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met at the Hotel Martinique, New York city, Monday afternoon, January 13.

August Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, Ill., has been appointed special committeeman for the Chicago show. J. A. Valentine will present a paper at the annual meeting upon "Roses in Colorado"; Adolph Poehlmann will present one upon "Practical Rose Growing," and William Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., will give a paper upon the "Proper Size of a Greenhouse for Commercial Rose Growing." Mr. Elliott has the largest single rose house in New England. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, will have a paper upon "Forcing Roses in Pots for Easter."

The following judges have been appointed; J F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Adam Graham, Cleveland, O., and John H. Dunlop, Parkdale, Ont.

The secretary reported that many of the members had paid up their annual subscriptions within ten days from mailing the bills and that the society needed as many as 1,000 annual members, all interested.

The details of schedule had been attended to and the first edition had already been printed and mailed. There will be a supplementary list of prizes issued to cover those that are given for special objects.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Carnation and Breeders' Rate.

Through some misunderstanding, the New England Passenger Association instructed its agents to issue certificates for the Breeders' Association meeting, to be held in Washington, D. C., January 28 to 30, in conjunction with this society, but failed to add that certificates should be issued to either the Breeders' or the Carnation Society, as both are to be counted as one meeting. This has been changed and covers the whole of the New England Association except the Eastern Steamship Co. Certificates will be issued for the Carnation Society in this territory the same as in previous years.

If you can not get a certificate for the Carnation Society, and the agent has instructions to issue for the Breeders' meeting, buy your ticket for that meeting. It will be honored in Washington and you can then get the reduced fare to return home.

We want everybody interested in carnations to come to this meeting, and if possible bring along an exhibit. You will be getting into good company, both in the exhibition hall and the meeting-room.

Rates to Washington.

The Central Passenger Association having refused the special rate, thus cutting out the states of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois, members from these states will do well to buy to Pittsburg and from there buy to Washington on the certificate plan, or get special rates for parties of ten to Washington.

The special rate of one fare and a third can be had from the following states: Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, excepting the northwest corner north and west of Pittsburg and west of Franklin, Oil City and Warren; New York, except the territory west of Salamanca and Buffalo; Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. In all of these states agents will issue certificates with their tickets if asked for, making the rate one and one-third fare.

Special Premiums.

In addition to the premiums offered in the premium list, the Berry & Whitmore Co. offers a silver cup for the best fifty blooms of light pink, Enchantress shade, either novelty or standard sort, but separate from other exhibits.

W. J. Vonderheide offers a fine silver cup for 100 blooms of the best carnation to be disseminated for 1908. This exhibit must also be separate from all others, excepting that it can enter for certificate of merit.

In consideration of the lateness in offering these prizes, they can be entered for at the meeting in Washington without extra charge. Anyone not a member of the society and not acquainted with its rules and regulations can, by joining at the meeting, make entries for the show free of charge. Members who have neglected to send in their entries or have additions to make can make them at the meeting by paying $1 for each entry made. Everything possible will be done to make the work of exhibitors easy and expeditious. We have a fine lot of entries now and want more for the above prizes and any other of the numerous ones offered in the premium list.

RUFFLED GLADIOLI.

At Kendallville, Ind., A. E. Kunderd has for years been breeding and selecting gladioli with a view to the development and fixing of the type of flower illustrated in the accompanying reproductions from photographs, in which it will be seen that the petals are ruffled, unlike any gladiolus heretofore known. Mr. Kunderd believes that he is well under way to the development of the most magnificent type of this flower, as these two varieties are now well established in character, and he has others in which the development is even more marked, but which are not yet established to his satisfaction.

The illustration in which the section of spike is shown is of a variety creamy in color, with a blush tint overspread, and has a fine feather or flame of red in the center on the three lower petals. The plant is strong and it is said that flowers over five inches in diameter have been produced. The ruffling is even more apparent in the natural flower than it is in the photographic reproduction. The flutings are up to five-eighths of an inch deep.

The picture showing the two spikes is of a variety smaller in size but a fine white in color, with a little more pink tint than in the flower previously described. There is a similar feather on the lower petals and the ruffling is more pronounced. The arrangement of the upper petals gives the flower much the appearance of the azalea flower. Mr. Kunderd says it increases less rapidly than the former variety, which makes from fifty to 100 cormels. A bulb of the first described variety was sent last spring to Luther Burbank and was returned in November with 142 cormels.

A. E. Kunderd's Ruffled Gladioli.

Mr. Kunderd also is at work on some other types. One is a flower that he describes as saucer-shaped, the petals being all of about the same proportions and opening so that the tube is short. He is hybridizing to put the ruffle on this form of flower. He also has a type in which the flowers are well distributed around the stem, with blooms as upright as tuberoses, and with long tubes. In this form all six petals are exactly alike. This class comes in light colors, some being solid colors and others having all the petals blotched. Other sorts on which Mr. Kunderd is at work provide still other interesting variations.

LILY BULBS IN THE U. S.

Work of the Department of Agriculture.

As a preface to a bulletin by George W. Oliver, just issued to record the work of Bureau of Plant Industry, Dr. B. T. Galloway says:

"The Easter lily is of great importance to florists, its bulbs being largely imported from Bermuda and Japan. The imported bulbs, however, are not satisfactory, and if the industry of forcing these plants so that they will be in flower at Easter is to be continued it will be necessary to produce the bulbs in this country. The problem of producing these bulbs in the United States has been studied for some years by members of the staff of this Bureau, and the accompanying paper summarizes the information on the subject to date. Mr. Oliver has shown that healthy bulbs can be readily and profitably produced in this country and that disease-resistant strains can easily be maintained."

Disease in Imported Bulbs.

At the present time Bermuda is the main source of supply of Easter lily bulbs for the United States. The mild winter climate of the island is very favorable to the growth of these lilies in the open air, but the area of arable land is limited and many of the farms are so small that alternation of crops is not practiced with lilies, onions and potatoes, which are the staple crops.

As a result of these conditions and the fact that careful selection is not practiced, the vigor of the lily bulbs produced is lessened and weak plants are produced from them. As a consequence the plants grown from Bermuda bulbs in greenhouses in the United States are in a very unsatisfactory condition. In many cases from fifty to seventy-five per cent of the plants are diseased to such an extent as to be practically unsalable; in fact, they are so seriously affected that many florists would willingly give up their cultivation altogether were it not that their patrons demand the lily in its season. The problem how and where to produce the bulbs within our own borders therefore confronts those who would continue in this industry. That this problem will be solved soon there is little doubt. It is not likely that American growers will be able to harvest the bulbs and place them on the market as early as the Bermuda crop, but judging from present appearances their efforts will result in supplying bulbs practically free from disease.

It is said that about 3,000,000 bulbs are annually imported from Bermuda and that about 20,000 salable bulbs, ranging in size from three to five inches in circumference, can be grown on an acre of ground from mother bulbs planted the preceding year. The second year's crop of bulbs of that size, whether from seedlings or from bulbs, should therefore bring from $1,000 to $2,000 an acre.

Lily Bulbs in the United States.

During the past decade many attempts have been made by seed firms and others, including the Division of Botany of the Department of Agriculture, to grow the Easter lily commercially in the Carolinas, Florida and other states. These efforts were useful in pointing out places where it was evidently impossible to produce bulbs cultivated after the manner now pursued in the Bermudas and Japan.

Both large and small imported bulbs were planted at various places and received the best of care, but in every case the crop when harvested did not warrant a continuation of the experiments. All of these failures resulted partly from unsuitable soils, but principally from unfavorable climatic conditions. It is reasonable to suppose that the lily disease so prevalent in imported bulbs played its part in making the experimental work a failure.

Trials in California.

The experimental work now being conducted on the Pacific coast promises successful results, but even in that region, favored as it is with nearly ideal conditions in the matter of soil and climate, good results can not be expected by following the old methods of asexual propagation practiced in the Bermudas. This has been shown repeatedly in connection with several large lots of selected imported bulbs planted out in widely different localities for seeding purposes. These plants show the usual amount of disease on the foliage, while the apparently healthy plants propagated by division and by scales also show the disease to such an extent that it seems a difficult matter to get rid of the trouble by purely vegetable methods of reproduction from selected bulbs.

Effort to Grow Seedlings.

A few years ago Dr. Albert F. Woods, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, in his investigations of the lily disease discovered that seedling plants were practically free from the disease. About the same time E. M. Byrnes, then connected with the Office of Public Buildings and Grounds, but now with the Bureau of Plant Industry, found that the progeny of crossed varieties were more vigorous than either parent.

At the instigation of Dr. B. T. Galloway the writer grew a large number of seedlings in the Department greenhouses, and from these several pounds of seed resulted. This was distributed on the Pacific coast and in Florida. The seedlings grown in California showed conclusively that with liberal treatment first-class bulbs can be grown by this method much more quickly than by asexual propagation. The plants are almost free from disease. A few plants show it here and there in first generation seedlings, but in the second and third generations it is difficult to find an affected plant. These results have been so encouraging to practical men on the coast that several are now engaged in getting up a stock of seedlings upon a large scale.

A. E. Kunderd's Ruffled Gladioli.

Suitable Localities for Bulb Growing.

Although enough has not been done in an experimental way to ascertain all of the localities where lilies can be grown successfully, it may be stated that the lily seedlings have shown great vigor where the winter temperature does not fall below 24 degrees. Below that point the plants get a check to their growth and the foliage puts on an undesirable yellowish tinge, which remains during the winter.

In Florida, seed sent to persons who undertook experimental work has not given good results. The northern and central parts of the state occasionally get much too cold to insure strong winter growth. In the southern part where seed has been sent the reports of those who were experimenting are not very favorable. However, most of those who grew the seedlings were absent during the summer, in which season the growing plants need very close attention. It is possible, therefore, that the failures may be charged to want of attention at critical periods.

At Miami, Fla., the temperature is neither too hot in summer nor too cold in winter for growing bulbs. During the period from September, 1895, to December, 1903, the temperature fell below the freezing point on only two occasions, the lowest being 29 degrees. Under such circumstances the bulbs will do well provided they receive the necessary attention.

At Key West, Fla., the conditions are ideal, closely approaching those at Bermuda, the extreme range of temperature in thirty-three years being from 41 degrees to 100 degrees, and the extreme range of precipitation 21.1 to 58.4 inches. On the large keys near the southeastern coast of Florida the seedlings do remarkably well, but the climatic and other conditions during the growing season are such as to practically prohibit good cultivators from locating there.

In the northwestern part of the State of Washington the seedlings do not stand the winter without protection. However, bulbs planted deeply in the fall make fine roots and develop well the following year, making excellent bulbs late in the season, but much too late for early forcing.

In California.

In many parts of California, especially in the hot interior valleys, where good soil and plenty of water are available and the winter temperature is not too low, the seedlings thrive well. At Loomis, a few miles northeast of Sacramento, the soil and climate are well adapted to their needs. Some areas in that vicinity are nearly frostless, and the lilies come into flower as early as anywhere in the state, with the possible exception of the foothills near Los Angeles. So far, none of the seedlings have been grown at Loomis, but judging from the growth made by mature bulbs sent for seeding purposes and comparing it with that made in other sections the advantage lies with the Loomis locality. Very little disease was apparent in the foliage, and the flowers were open several days in advance of those from bulbs planted at the same period in the valleys of the southern part of the state.

At several places south of San Francisco selected for experimental work, it was impossible to secure the carrying on of the work necessary for the raising of bulbs from seed. The seed would germinate well, but when it came to planting out the seedlings in spring the farmers and florists could not be brought to believe that it was possible in twelve months' time to raise a flowering plant from a seedling not more than two inches high. One firm had 70,000 seedlings in fine condition two years ago, but not one was put out in the field. Fortunately, however, a few capable men were found who carried out the instructions of the Department, but even then another difficulty was encountered, for when the lilies came in flower twelve months after planting the seedlings the price offered by retail florists for the blooms was a temptation which few could resist. One florist cleared $250 in the spring of 1907 for flowers from seedlings on a space 25x45 feet, and this was only for the flowers he did not want for seed. The removal of flowers and stems, of course, results in bulbs of an inferior grade.

Those florists who have grown the seedlings for the bulbs alone are more than pleased with the results. This has been done in the vicinity of Santa Ana, where the soil and climatic conditions are evidently very favorable. Many of the bulbs harvested were of the 7 to 9 inch grade. Some two-year-old bulbs measured nearly eleven inches in circumference, while a bulb three years from seed measured fourteen and one-half inches in circumference when harvested, grown at Santa Ana, Cal., by Edgar A. Metcalf. The bulbs secured from these sources force well, and being almost free from disease the loss on this account is small.

At Ventura, Cal., the conditions are extremely favorable for the production of strong, healthy growth, but the bulb mite put an end to the experiment in that section the second year. It should be mentioned, however, that the soil in which the bulbs were planted had been used for calla lilies for several years.

At Longbeach, Cal., the growth made by the seedlings before planting out was very favorable, and probably a little distance from the shore in good soils the lilies would thrive well. At Yuma, Ariz., the growth made from mature bulbs planted for seeding promises well, and it is probable that the bulbs can be grown there to mature quite as early as those from the Bermudas.

In the extreme southern part of Texas the possibility of producing good bulbs would seem very encouraging, but the facilities for testing have been anything but satisfactory. The farmers are men who grow crops on a large scale as a rule and a few hundred lilies are apt to receive but scant attention at critical periods, especially when staple crops are being attended to.

At Brownsville, Tex., one can see in the old Spanish gardens very healthy longiflorums in bloom during the first half of April. The growth is very strong and absolutely free from even a trace of disease. January 15, 1907, some bulbs of the Harrisii variety planted near Brownsville had made a strong growth, averaging seven inches in height. These bloomed about the end of March and seeded fairly well.

Unfortunately, the temperature in the southeastern part of Texas is not very favorable, judging from the records supplied by the Weather Bureau. Some years the crop will turn out satisfactorily, but there always exists a danger of low temperatures, on account of which it would be unsafe to attempt cultivation on a large scale.

Bulbs of Lilium Harrisii x L. Longiflorum Grown from Seed within Ten Months.

Best Varieties to Grow.

During the past three seasons in California the best success has been with seedlings which were obtained by crossing the red-stemmed Lilium longiflorum giganteum with Lilium longiflorum Harrisii. The progeny is remarkably strong and in some localities totally free from disease. In the open fields they come into flower about a week later than the true Harrisii. These seedling lilies of the parentage mentioned are composed of four distinct types: Long-leafed and short-leafed green-stemmed plants, and long-leafed and short-leafed red-stemmed plants. All show a remarkable freedom of bloom. Fred Rafferty, of Santa Ana, Cal., bloomed a large number of them in the spring of 1907. Although the seedlings were only about three inches high when planted out in June, 1906, some of them had twenty-eight flowers to a single stem in June, 1907. Two years ago at Ventura, S. Cole had some two-year-old seedlings of the same cross, one of which had thirty-five flowers to a stalk.

On the farm of the Santa Ana Easter Lily Co. during May, 1907, hundreds of plants had twenty or more flowers to a stem.

The only well-known variety which has been tried by the Department in California and Arizona is the Harrisii variety from bulbs imported from Bermuda in 1906. These bulbs were planted in order to produce seed after being artificially pollinated. All of the stock grown turned out to be more or less diseased and most of the plants, although grown from good-sized bulbs, produced very poor flowers and a very low yield of seeds. A small lot of this variety grown from seed has turned out fairly well, but by this method of increase there are several distinct types, showing that it can not be depended upon to produce plants true to the original type. It would seem, however, that many reliable growers in the east think there does not exist the same necessity for the Harrisii variety as an early forcer as there was a few years ago when cold storage bulbs were comparatively unknown for early forcing. If this is true, then there is but little need for haste in getting the Harrisii variety into the American market, when in reality the bulbs should still be ripening in the fields. If the greenhouse men could use only the cold-storage supply for the production of flowers during the early part of the year, the fresh bulbs would then get an opportunity to ripen thoroughly before being taken from the ground. It would seem advisable to grow types from seed alone and propagate these for one or two seasons asexually, but only from bulbs and not by the scale method, using seeds instead of scales to increase the supply of bulbs. But when we have types which come absolutely true from seed there will be little likelihood of a necessity arising for saving even the smaller bulbs for replanting.

Advantages of Seedlings.

The seedling method of propagation not only has its advantages in so far as the elimination of disease is concerned, but it is also a much quicker method than propagation from scales or even from small bulbs. The seedlings one year after planting very often show as many as twenty flowers to the stalk. During the past season (1907), as already stated, Fred Rafferty, of Santa Ana, Cal., had seedlings with twenty-eight flowers. Such plants can be depended on to give bulbs of salable size the first year. Comparatively few of the 9 to 11 inch size are produced. The usual sizes are from 5 to 7 inches, but a considerable percentage of the 7 to 9 inch size is found in lots which have received good attention. The crop is ready for harvesting by the beginning of August. The smaller bulbs when replanted soon after being harvested grow much better than imported material.

LOUIS P. FAULK.

West View, Pa., is the home of Louis P. Faulk, who is well known as a grower of bedding plants for the spring trade in Pittsburg, Allegheny and vicinity. He is a grower of more than thirty years' experience, for his first venture in the greenhouse business was in 1876. As a boy he had learned the painting trade and in 1889 he returned to it for eleven years, but in 1900 he went back to growing pot plants and has made this his specialty for the last seven seasons.

Mr. Faulk has tried out about everything that has come to his attention in the bedding plant line. His trade calls for the best and he has been constantly on the lookout for improvements on the standard varieties, having found that his trade will willingly pay for an article a little better than the ordinary. In the course of Mr. Faulk's work he has taken up some varieties of our ordinary bedding plants which not every grower has been able to do as successfully as he, and he also has raised several novelties on his own place. He has a new lantana which he calls Violet King, from its peculiar color, which he says is the greatest thing in lantanas he ever has seen and which he intends to disseminate in the trade. Another of his novelties is Petunia American Favorite, and he has a pure white moonvine which he raised from a seedling and named Midnight Beauty. Among coleuses he has a new one named Banner of Japan, and Blue Jay is the name given to a new heliotrope which he thinks will be welcomed by the trade. He has quite a number of other new sorts of verbena, heliotrope and coleus undergoing test.

Geraniums are, of course, his principal item. After trying practically everything in geraniums he has selected the following as the baker's dozen of best sorts: Madam Buchner, Jean de la Bret, Mrs. E. G. Hill, Mme. Jaulin, Castries, Kleber, Jean Viaud, Beaute Poitevine, Marvel, S. A. Nutt, Beauty, A. Ricard and H. L. Hartman, the latter a deep rose-pink variety which he says is unsurpassed by any other sort except Alphonse Ricard, to which it is a close second.

TROUBLE WITH CYCLAMENS.

I have a batch of cyclamens that was received a month ago in good condition. From 2½-inch pots I potted them into fours, not having anything smaller. They have not done well. The leaves curl up, turn brown at the edges, wilt and drop off. I have not kept them overwet. I potted them into new pots, having soaked the pots first. I used good, fresh loam, mixed with some fine rotted manure. The temperature at night has been about 50 degrees, 55 to 60 degrees in cloudy weather, 5 degrees higher in sunshine. Does it damage them to have the bulb covered? J. & B.

The shift from 2½-inch to 4-inch pots was about right, provided the cyclamens were nicely rooted in the smaller pots. It was a mistake to cover the corms or bulbs; these should always be above ground. The temperatures given were all right and the chief trouble undoubtedly lay in too deep potting. I would recommend repotting them into 3½-inch or 4-inch pots. Use a compost of fibrous loam, old cow manure and sharp sand. If your loam is naturally heavy, a little leaf-mold will be beneficial. In potting let the soil come to the base of the corm. Stand your plants on a shelf or bench, well up to the light. They require no shade for some time. Water carefully and if the plants are not irretrievably injured, you should soon note an improvement. C. W.

PROPAGATING HOUSE.

What is the best temperature to keep a propagating house, where I root carnations, roses, geraniums and other spring cuttings? What ought the bottom heat be and the top heat? L. E. B.

Carnations will root well in a bench where the bottom heat is 55 degrees. Geraniums will root in a similar bench, but 5 degrees higher will suit them better. Geranium cuttings inserted in late winter or early spring will, however, root more satisfactorily placed singly in small pots and stood in full sunshine. The carnations, and about all other cuttings, require shade until they are rooted. Can you not divide your house and keep one-half 5 to 10 degrees warmer than the other? In the cool end, which can be kept about 50 degrees at night, carnations, genistas, chrysanthemums, pelargoniums, verbenas and cuttings of any plants requiring cool culture can be rooted, while in the warmer division, to be kept at 60 to 65 degrees at night, with a bottom heat of 70 to 75 degrees, coleus, alternanthera, heliotrope and more tender subjects can be accommodated.

Roses will root better at the cool end of the warm division. If you cannot well divide your house, try and arrange it so that more bottom heat can be given at the warmer end. Of course, after May 1 any plants will root freely enough in the same temperature, but as the bulk of propagating is usually done while a good deal of fire-heat is used, you should endeavor to arrange your house to accommodate cuttings requiring a brisk bottom heat and those needing but little. C. W.

PLUMOSUS WITH CARNATIONS.

Can Asparagus plumosus be grown successfully in a carnation house? R. E. G.

Asparagus plumosus should have a warmer temperature than carnations are grown in, to be really profitable. They will grow and make splendid stock, but not as rapidly as in a temperature ten degrees higher. A. F. J. B.

ERIE, PA.—It is announced that on January 1 the old firm of Schluraff Floral Co., doing business for the last twenty-three years, passed out of existence, all its assets being taken over by Vern L. Schluraff, junior partner of the old firm, who will continue the business at the new greenhouses at Floral park, Erie, Pa.

The Weekly Florists' Review

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

There are plenty of buyers who know they are saving money by paying for quality.

It is reported that both Indianapolis and Pittsburg want the 1909 convention of the American Carnation Society.

John Walker, Youngstown, O., speaks highly of a violet named Mystery, stock of which he obtained from Carl Merkle, Mentor, O.

Julius Baer, Cincinnati, used 200 white chrysanthemums in a big wedding decoration January 18. And yet we call it the autumn flower.

That the supply of Louisiana cypress is at least keeping pace with the demand is shown by the fact that the Louisiana Red Cypress Co., New Orleans, which is the selling agency of the cypress mills, has sent an agent to Europe to push the sales of cypress there.

The least an advertiser can do, when he receives an order for stock which has already been cleaned out, is to make reply the same day, returning any remittance which may have accompanied the order. Promptness in this matter will go far toward maintaining an advertiser's reputation. Indeed, next to sending out nothing but first-class stock properly packed, it is the most important essential for one who would build up a mail-order plant trade.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

The Council of Horticulture was in session at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, Wednesday, January 22, for the purpose of shaping up the press bureau work to which the S. A. F., the Seed Trade Association and many individual firms have contributed. It is planned to extend the scope of the work during the approaching season. Those present at the morning session were: Chairman J. C. Vaughan and W. N. Rudd, Chicago; C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Secretary H. C. Irish, St. Louis, and others were expected for the later sessions.

MORE THAN ALL OTHERS.

In sending in some subscriptions, the owner of a good sized range of greenhouses writes:

"I make a standing offer to my men to pay one-half the cost of their trade papers and I let my boys choose which they like best. It stands thusly: Thirteen chose the Review; the next paper, six chose; the third paper, two chose; the fourth florists' paper, one wanted. So you see the boys have a liking for the Review and I enclose my check for $13."

The record shows that of these thirteen subscriptions, six were renewals.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

J. H. Burdett, secretary pro tem., has mailed to guarantors a notice of assessment of twenty per cent of the amount of guarantees. Checks are to be made payable to Irving Bertermann, Indianapolis, who is treasurer of the committee of fifty.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago has gone on the guarantee list for $1,000 and also will give $500 in special prizes and medals. The guarantee list now exceeds $12,500.

It is the hope of the committee that the show will be so successful financially that the guarantors will receive back the sums which are necessary to advance for the preliminary work.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Vice-presidents for Michigan.

The following are the state vice-presidents who were appointed by President Traendly for the state of Michigan, and whose names were omitted from the former list through a stenographer's error: A. Pochelon, 153 Bates avenue, Detroit; Henry Smith, Grand Rapids.

W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

Notice to Ladies' Auxiliary.

All members of the Ladies' Society of American Florists attending the carnation meeting at Washington will please wear their badge pins.

Mrs. W. J. Vesey, Pres.
Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business is fair for the season and toward the end of last week the market stiffened perceptibly, the supply of roses being scarcely enough to meet the demand, and white carnations commanding a premium. January 20 and 21, however, were April days and the market softened again, with the prospect that we shall have an abundance of stock until the weather reverts to winter. There would be a famine in the rose market should we get a spell of dark, cold, snowy weather, such as would be seasonable.

Beauties have deteriorated in the last week. The supply is now much less than at any time since Christmas and the quality is off, but the demand is not strong enough to lift the prices and several growers report that with continued bright weather it will be only a matter of a few days until they will be on again with heavy crops.

There has been so much funeral work of late that short roses are commanding a premium, Bride especially so. There are some splendid long roses in the mar-to details, at all times maintaining our facilities a step ahead of the needs of our business, for the purpose of insuring to every patron the perfect satisfaction expressed by the writers of the following letters:

FROM THE GROWER

I feel very much pleased with the returns received from you for my Christmas violets, and can assure you it was highly appreciated by me. You deserve a great deal of credit. My violets never were as good as this year and I shall make the bunches as inviting to your customers as I possibly can. J. C. BARRINGER.
Rhinebeck, N. Y., Jan. 2, 1908.

FROM THE BUYER

Please accept our thanks for the satisfactory manner in which you have handled our orders. It is certainly a pleasure to deal with a house that, when an order is sent in, one can feel satisfied it will be filled as wanted. We always want the best to be had, as we have a very nice trade.

ket, but the supply is not greater than the demand and it frequently requires some skirmishing to find just the stock needed for late orders. The market now supplies quite a variety of roses when orders are sent early in the day. Killarney sells out first. Richmond is in better supply. Mrs. Field also gives a good cut. Kate Moulton is in good shape. Not many Chatenay are seen. Joe Hill, Cardinal, Perle and Sunrise are daily items of stock.

The carnation market cleaned up well last week under the leadership of the white varieties, but there was an accumulation January 21, carried over from Monday, which is a day that usually sees the market well cleaned out. There were, however, no whites left, but several growers say it will be only a few days until they are again in crop with some white varieties. The carnation crops are now enough above the usual January production to counterbalance the shortage in the fall. There will be plenty of carnations for McKinley day, January 29, and prices for good stock will be moderate. Quality is so universally excellent that short Lawson, where offered, is sold only at unmentionable prices.

The violet market has been in a bad way, receipts being much above the demand. Bulbous stock also has been selling cheaper than ever before. There are increasing supplies of tulips in three colors, and jonquils and daffodils are coming heavier every day. Golden Spur is not making the better prices usually noted for that variety. Roman hyacinths are a decided glut. Paper Whites do rather better and large quantities of all the white bulbous flowers are sold because of the demand for funeral work. Some days there is an abundance of Easter lilies and callas, but on other days it is hard to pick them up and the price on the few dozens available takes a jump. Sweet peas are abundant, but not many are of attractive quality.

New Commission Man.

Joseph Foerster, who has been for a number of years with George Reinberg, and for the last three years manager of his city store, has made arrangements to enter the commission business on his own account, beginning January 27. He will make his start on the floor of the Flower Growers' market, having secured the space formerly occupied by F. R. Hills.

Various Notes.

A. I. Simmons is in St. Bernard's hospital, where he underwent an operation some three weeks ago. He has been having a serious time with his leg for a number of months and will be in the hospital for many weeks.

E. C. Amling has given close attention to business without having taken a vacation for a number of years, and on the evening of Monday, January 20, he started for southern California for a month's rest and recuperation. Mr. Amling has a sister whose home is at Orange, Cal., near Los Angeles. He was accompanied by Mrs. Amling and their three children. Of the party also was Albert Amling, vice-president of the Maywood State Bank and president of the Albert Amling Co., growers of greens and roses, together with Mrs. Amling and their two youngest children. All told, it was a party of nine.

E. Wienhoeber says that business has continued good ever since Christmas, although it let up a little last week. He says that beginning a few days before Christmas and to the middle of January, the business of the E. Wienhoeber Co. was ahead of that for the same period last year, and he asks nothing more.

E. F. Winterson Co., appears in the obituary column this week.

J. E. Jensen says he is well pleased with the way business in carnation cuttings is progressing. Standard varieties are moving out well, and some good orders for Defiance have come in during the current week. F. R. Pierson and J. R. Fotheringham, of Tarrytown, N. Y., were visitors January 20 and left an order for Defiance.

Harry Rowe says that retail trade in the first fifteen days of January surprised him by going ahead of the same period last year, when things were decidedly brisk. The last week, however, business has fallen off.

Weiland & Risch say that orders for young stock of the Killarney rose are coming in so fast that they have been obliged to refuse many of them. Killarney gives cuttings only at the expense of flowers.

E. F. Winterson is doing jury duty againg this week, after having had a week's respite.

Peter Reinberg and a party of friends started Monday evening for a fortnight's trip to Alabama.

C. W. McKellar had a cyclamen plant last week that carried 160 flowers, but he says the size that sells for $25 per hundred is the one that is in most demand.

George Reinberg is still cutting poinsettias and occasionally a retailer takes the opportunity to make a decoration unusual for this season.

Phil Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's, started January 20 for a week's visit to the growers in New Castle, Richmond, Cincinnati and other towns in that direction.

E. E. Pieser, at Kennicott's, says the retailers like Dorner's new carnation Winona because it makes such a pleasant effect under electric light. They use it largely for dinner-table work.

Frank Beu is again marketing wallflowers, which find a good sale.

January 18 was the thirtieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Randall, and the employees of the company to the number of thirty made it the occasion for a surprise which was complete. They took along a salad and ice cream set as mementos of the evening. Carl N. Thomas made the speech of presentation, and it was up to Mrs. Randall to reply. The festivities lasted until a late hour.

C. M. Dickinson says the last order for a 10-gallon locked-faucet cask of To-bak-ine came from Alabama.

C. L. Washburn says that in his opinion there never will be any difficulty in selling cut flowers in this market; the only thing which concerns him is ways and means of providing the higher quality of goods which the trade steadily demands.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, says that ninety-five per cent of their Christmas business was on the credit basis, but that collections have been coming in first-class shape this month, a report to which many of the wholesalers subscribe.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. in the last few days has begun to receive Purity freesia, which is so much ahead of the old variety that there is no comparison.

Wietor Bros. this season grew a large part of their carnations indoors all summer, and are so well pleased with the results that they are preparing to work it the same way for next year. They have had a good, steady cut of high quality all season.

H. N. Bruns has been at Detroit to place his daughter in school there.

George Bros., a firm of Greeks formerly in the basement at 68 State street, have closed up since the holidays and their reappearance in the market is being anxiously awaited by some of the wholesalers.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Everything is moving along satisfactorily in our business and no one has a kick coming. There is nothing rushing, but there is just about enough demand to take care of the supply. There has been a good deal of funeral work and, in fact, this did constitute by far the greater part of the retail business. There has been scarcely anything doing in society. So, with conditions as above, the demand has been mostly for the poorer grades of flowers and these, in proportion, brought the highest prices. The best grades of flowers sold at comparatively cheap prices.

American Beauties were in fair demand, but the prices were low for the grade of goods. Brides and Maids and other standard varieties averaged better. Other red roses were in demand, with but few coming in. Carnations were just equal to the demand, and though the price was a little lower on the best grades, it would seem that the average price was well up to what it ought to be. Enchantress heads the list in the demand, with red a close second. Lilies are in demand and at good prices. Valley, Romans, narcissi and tulips are going nicely. Violets in some cases are a drug, but those grown near home, and which have some suggestion of perfume left, sell well and at good prices.

We are well supplied with green goods of all kinds and the demand is good. Galax is selling finely this year and leucothoe sprays are a close second.

Various Notes.

Samuel Batson, of Kalamazoo, Mich., is in with a good cut of his specialties and they are in as good demand as ever. He grows Baby primrose, wallflower, forget-me-not and snapdragon, also carnations and Sprengeri. He also grows stocks of all kinds to perfection, and usually gets a fine crop of them in for Easter.

Geo. Fulle, of Richmond, Ind., was a caller January 17. He was busy purchasing supplies for the range of 10,000 feet of glass he will erect in the spring.

The sick list is receiving new recruits almost daily, but as luck will have it, very few are serious. Chas. Jones is just recovering from a severe case of the grippe and hopes to be able to go to his store by the last of the week. Wm. Murphy has also been laid up with the grippe. Wm. Gear has been confined to his home for some time, but is now slowly recovering.

I regret to report the death of H. G. Conger, father of J. T. Conger, which took place January 16, at Mount Airy, O. Futher particulars will be found in the obituary column.

Visitors were B. Eschner and Martin Reukauf. C. J. Ohmer.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market had plenty of everything in season last week and the retailers had a fairly good week's business, though mostly work for funerals. Social work among the west end florists is not as brisk as it should be at this season of the year. There are quite a few small affairs, but those of any note have been scarce so far this season.

The weather last week, except Monday, was clear and springlike, which brought to this market an abundance of cut stock and especially California violets, which have become a glut, and sold as low as $2.50 per thousand. Carnations, too, are abundant in all varieties, white having the call over the others; $15 to $20 in thousand lots is what they brought last week. January 20 prices stiffened somewhat.

American Beauties of all grades are plentiful, and so are Brides and Maids. Extra fancy stock is not overplentiful.

Newcomers last week were jonquils, tulips and extra fine mignonette. Romans, Paper Whites, callas and sweet peas are abundant; also everything in the green line.

Various Notes.

The Engelmann Botanical Club elected officers at the meeting held January 13: President, C. H. Thompson, who has charge of the cactus houses at the Missouri Botanic Garden; vice-presidents, Dr. Green and Dr. Gladfelter; secretary, H. S. Barber; treasurer, John Kellogg. During the evening Professor Craig, in charge of the herbarium at the Missouri Botanic Garden, gave an interesting lecture.

C. De Weaver, former manager for J. W. Dunford, reports that he will this spring build a greenhouse plant on his place on the Olive street road, near Clayton, Mo.

J. W. Dunford, who recently bought out the Gallagher Flower Shop, has opened a downtown branch in the drug store of Johnston Bros., at Broadway and Franklin avenue. Mr. Dunford reports good trade at both places and is cutting an abundance of stock of all kinds from his Clayton place.

C. C. Sanders braved the big snowstorm Monday, January 13, to pay a visit to his friend, J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, Ill. Mr. Sanders says Mr. Ammann's place is in extra fine shape and that it is worth any man's time to visit it.

Park Commissioner Phil J. Scanlan has returned from his recreation trip and is again at his desk in the city hall, looking like a much refreshed man.

Prof. H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanic Garden, is to read a paper of his own selection at the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, which meets at Springfield, Ill., February 18 and 19.

signs last week. This department is well stocked.

The Riessen Floral Co. has been quite busy with decorations of all kinds since New Year's. The window displays are one of the attractions along Broadway.

Mrs. B. Buechel met with a bad accident last week, falling downstairs, receiving a bad scalp wound.

Henry Ostertag's specials in decorations were used last week at the big Lee wedding in Vanderventer place. This is only one of the few big decorations they have had since New Year's.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is having good success with violets and carnations in his new houses. These were built by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago. Mr. Pilcher contemplates building another new house or so this summer.

W. C. Smith estimates that 75,000 California violets were shipped into this market daily last week from Kirkwood and should the fine weather keep up the quantity will soon be doubled. At present violets do not bring much, but during the holidays they brought a good stiff price and cleaned up daily.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Market conditions remain rather quiet. There is not the demand for flowers which existed a year ago; yet it is better, almost, than could have been expected and seems to be satisfactory in the main to growers. Roses are in rather short supply all round and top grade flowers are bringing good prices; even the short stems are being cleaned up rather easily. Carnations seem to be rather off crop with many growers, for in spite of the clear, bright weather the supplies do not exceed requirements. Prices vary from $2.50 to $6, few selling below $3. Violets remain about the same, varying from 35 cents to 75 cents per hundred, the average selling price being about 50 cents.

Sweet peas of best quality are making up to $1.50 per hundred, some common grades selling for a third of this price. No change in lilies or callas. Bulbous stock is not in heavy supply and has cleaned up rather better than a week ago. Stevia still arrives, but is nearly over for the season. In miscellaneous flowers, some nice wallflower is noted, also pansies. Purity freesia still arrives of excellent quality. Lily of the valley remains a slow trade. Trade in pot plants of all kinds is rather quiet.

Club Meeting.

Ladies' night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club January 21 once more attracted a large attendance, over 300 being present. There was no stated lecture, a large part of the evening being devoted to entertainment and social enjoyment. Edward Hatch, W. J. Stewart and P. Welch, the committee, presented resolutions on the death of the late W. W. Edgar, which were voted accepted, spread on the records and a copy sent to the bereaved family. The committee on resolutions for John Clark, consisting of H. E. Fiske, Thomas J. Grey and Peter M. Miller, also presented resolutions which were adopted. Five new members were elected.

The exhibition tables presented, as usual, an attractive appearance. W. N. Craig received a report of merit for a large vase of Freesia Purity and also showed zonal geraniums. F. W. Fletcher staged eucharis and David Weir had a splendid specimen moschosma.

The newly elected officers were installed and spoke briefly. President Westwood spoke of the work of the last year and optimistically of the future. He hoped various new avenues of usefulness would be opened up. Vice-President William Downs made an excellent address, making some excellent suggestions. Treasurer Edward Hatch reported a balance on the year's finances of nearly $200. He spoke interestingly in his usual genial and humorous strain. Secretary W. N. Craig stated that there had been sixty-one members added to the roll during the year. There were three deaths. The average attendance at the club meetings, including ladies' night, was 153; the smallest attendance was 110, the largest 316.

The entertainers of the evening, all of whom were enthusiastically received, included Miss Harrigan and Mr. and Mrs. Brough, who sang. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, T. J. Grey and S. S. Skidelsky were speakers.

Refreshments were served and it was quite late before the meeting terminated, all present voting ladies' night of 1908 the best ever.

It was announced that the club would hold a carnation night February 18, with prominent speakers, and a rose night March 17.

and is due in Washington at 9:55 p. m. The following, among others, are planning to make the trip: Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, William Nicholson, A. Roper, S. J. Goddard, E. Allan Peirce, George E. Buxton, E. A. Strout, Biddeford, Me.; Mitchell, Waterville, Me.; Midgley, Worcester; H. F. Littlefield, W. J. Stewart, William Sim, W. H. Elliott and F. N. Sanborn. Several others are also hoping to go.

Cut blooms from Boston and vicinity promise to be less numerous than would be the case were the time for staging them not put so early as Tuesday, January 28, at 1 p. m. Growers here do not expect to be able to ship their flowers to arrive in season, as they cannot be sent on Sunday. Several novelties will be sent from Boston and vicinity. Roper's Bay State is in fine shape and will no doubt be keenly scrutinized.

Various Notes.

David F. Roy, for nineteen years in charge of the Converse estate and Pine Bank park, Malden, assumes the superintendency of the Converse estate at Marion, Mass., in a few days.

The two committees from the flower markets, which have been considering the holding of a combined exhibition, have dropped the matter for the present. The Park Street market will go ahead with a show of its own, to be held on or about February 29. A schedule of prizes is being arranged and will be ready in a few days. The committee in charge are S. J. Goddard, W. H. Elliott and William Sim.

There was a large attendance at Horticultural hall January 18, to listen to the regular Saturday lecture, which was by Prof. F. C. Sears, of Amherst, on "Opportunities for Commercial Apple Growing in New England." A long and animated discussion followed the lecture. The San Jose scale came in for considerable attention. The lecturer advocated the lime and sulphur wash, but several speakers stated that Scalecide was an effective remedy and easily prepared and applied. Robert Cameron's lecture on "Annuals and Biennials" will attract a big audience January 25. An exhibition the same day in the main hall promises to be an excellent one.

H. F. Calder, of Norwood, is bringing in some double violets of splendid quality at present. Mr. Calder is a first-class grower of violets.

Backer & Co. are still raising seedling carnations. Some are exceptionally promising. Their blooms of standard sorts are of the usual high grade.

Seed merchants report that seeds of many kinds are arriving unusually late and it will be impossible to fill early orders in full, owing to non-arrival of some kinds.

A prominent Brookline private gardener is a candidate for the position of superintendent of the Boston Public Gardens and his friends are hopeful of his securing it.

Up to date we have had a remarkably open winter, with no snow during January. As a rule, the carnation convention precipitates a snow storm, but we hope this year may prove an exception to the rule.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The oldest florist can remember no such winter as this in New York and vicinity. The week opens with sunshine and spring temperature and the dictum of Old Probabilities is milder. Only eight weeks until the sun crosses the meridian and less than twelve to Easter. This year settles it. We have an ideal climate in New York. One of the wholesalers who knows Dixie well says we are climatically in Virginia. And yet the men who take chances are betting zero before February. It would be the irony of fate to have our coldest snap of the year the week of the carnation convention. This will give the fellows who bought fur coats and caps last year in Toronto when the temperature was 20 degrees below zero a chance to wear them.

The cut flower market was quite steady the last of the week at quoted prices, with Beauties scarcer and on the up grade. Some sold as high as 60 cents, a few, and experts say they will not break 50 cents for the fancies during the present week.

Stock of all kinds was not abundant Monday and prices were firm. The bright weather and the high temperature will bring an abundance of everything before the week is over. The quality of all stock arriving is now at its best.

Carnations are abundant and wonderfully low when their splendid size and perfectness are considered. Never at this time of the season have prices generally been so below the average. It is an unfortunate state of affairs for the growers, especially those whose glass area is small. But there's a good time coming and the law of averages will be maintained.

Violets stay down and hug the 50-cent mark persistently. This, too, for the best of them.

Orchids of many varieties help to make entrancing the retail windows. In plant and flower their opportunity for universality of influence has come. Not a florist in the big city whose trade is worthy of the name is without the orchid now.

Various Notes.

There will be a goodly wholesale and growers' visitation at the Washington convention next week. A dozen or more, including the president of the S. A. F. and the noted experts of this section, from Flatbush, Nyack, Tarrytown, Lynbrook, Queens and Bedford, will be there and if the bulk of the prizes do not come to New York we will be very much surprised.

The many weddings and dinners in the city keep the retailers alert and happy. Grippe, too, is contributing its share of influence and funeral work is said to be excessive. The fine weather, however, is proving a boon to the merchants du pave and these now necessary addenda to the cut flower history of all large cities manage to clean up the market daily.

One of the signs of an early spring is the foreign bulb contingent here and arriving on every steamer.

B. Ruys' son, W. J., of the Royal Moerheim Nurseries, Holland, was one of last week's callers.

If prices of nursery stock at wholesale in this country are an indication of demand, then word from Rochester of the spring rates confirms it. When apples go to 12 cents and pears to 30 cents and can be held there, with the call louder than the supply, the activity of the coming spring to Bobbink & Atkins, Hiram Jones, J. T. Lovett, the Elizabeth Nursery Co. and the many other growers of nursery stock can be better imagined than described.

Saturday, February 29, only happens once or twice in a life time. The New York Club will celebrate on that evening with its annual dinner and, with its efficient managing committees, the club may expect the greatest celebration in its history. An attendance of over 100 is a conservative estimate. In fact, no one with a spark of loyalty to the club's prosperity can afford to miss it, and they won't. Send Chairman Sheridan your acceptance now.

Leonard Barrow lectured this week Wednesday, at 3:30 p. m., at the American Institute. His subject was "Everybody's Flower Garden." The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon slides from photographs and "harmonious color effect" was the theme.

The floral manager at the Knickerbocker is arranging for a great Tammany dinner at an early date, with many unique decorative effects, the piece de resistance being a floral tiger seven feet in length, the frame for which is being made by Reed & Kellar, whose last unique manufacture was the sedan chair used at the Vanderbilt dinner.

McKinley day, it is hoped, will demonstrate more this year than ever the grateful remembrance of the American people. If every one loyal to McKinley's memory would wear his favorite flower, the market would quickly be depleted.

For St. Patrick's day the green carnation will, as usual, be on exhibition. There is a demand for it that must be met. The wise mixer of dyes will take the hint and be ready in time.

James Ballantyne, of Tarrytown, general superintendent of the estate of F. E. Lewis, will take charge of his new estate at Ridgefield, Conn., February 1. Mr. Ballantyne received, as his New Year's gift from Mr. Lewis, a nice home at his new headquarters.

J. F. Huss, of Hartford, was in the city last week attending the funeral of Victor Dorval.

Thos. Martin, lieutenant of Traendly & Schenck, has been ill for two weeks with the grippe, and John Egenbrod, with Alex J. Guttman, has been suffering with blood poisoning in the hand and arm from contact with rose thorns.

The fire at Thomas Young, Jr.'s, on Twenty-eighth street, last week did not interfere with business, the damage affecting the building only.

Two acres of glass in four great houses, averaging 50x325, every foot devoted to the growing of carnations, is a vision worth any lover of flowers journeying to Scarboro to see. Add to this a heating system, simple, effective and unsurpassed and results that make one almost stand aghast with their extent and promise, and you cannot understand why every carnation grower, large and small, does not visit Mr. Pierson's wonderful factory. A cut of nearly 25,000 flowers Christmas week tells its own story. Winsor here is queen. The houses look like great wheat fields, so even and abundant are the buds. There is no disease, no failures and this is not the end. There is room for three more houses equally large, and a heating system large enough for all of them, and so simple, economical and perfect that I cannot imagine any addition to its "white perfection." Mr. Pierson grows more than Winsor, but he grows Winsor more. Here also are Melody, White Lawson, Victory, Beacon, Red Chief, Helen Gould, Patten, Enchantress and all the Enchantress family, white, rose-pink and variegated, as well as Red Lawson and Variegated Lawson. At the Tarrytown greenhouses ferns of Boston and all its children may be seen in abundance, and the latest, not yet even exhibited, is a sport of Elegantissima, the most beautiful of them all. Mr. Fotheringham is back from England with glowing stories of European horticulture, but in nearly every department of floriculture he declares America leads the world.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market conditions for the last week have not been so good. The cut on roses is not heavy and, with one or two days of good business, the supply would be short. Beauties are coming in much better than last week, except in the short and medium grades, which are a little bit scarce, the most of them being imperfect and off color. Richmond and Liberty have shortened up and sell a trifle better. Brides are scarce and in great demand for funeral work, of which there is quite a lot. Maids have shortened in supply and clean up at a little better prices. Killarney and Chatenay are a little shy and are much sought after.

The cut on carnations, which was reported heavy last week, has fallen off considerably. Enchantress, which is fine at this season, is much in demand. Winsor is a good sort and a great many more could be used, but the supply is limited and there is not enough to meet the demand. Beacon is good and the growers say it is a free bloomer and a good selling variety. White Perfection is at its best and is a good commercial white. The flowers are of enormous size. Lawson and White Lawson are up to their standard and bring fairly good prices.

The heavy crop of gardenias is about over for a few weeks and the call for them is much better, the price remaining about the same.

Sweet peas are going fairly well and are much improved in quality. Lavender and white are the most sought after and bring $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Violets, which were plentiful at the beginning of last week, have fallen off in the cut and good singles seem to be a little scarce. There are still a few good poinsettias to be had. Spring stock, such as lilacs, tulips and daffodils, cleans up fairly well. Freesia and yellow daisies are in good demand. Valley and mignonette are too plentiful and are hard to move. Cattleyas are good stock. Cypripediums are plentiful and hang fire. Harrisii lilies are in fair demand and the quality is fine.

Green stuff is selling in good shape and is a trifle scarce.

The Ball Season.

The large private and subscription balls continue at the rate of one or two each week and it is safe to say that never have these balls been given on a more elaborate scale. The decorations have been striking in every instance and in some cases have shown a degree of taste and originality highly creditable to the floral artist.

It is much the fashion for our florists, both wholesalers and retailers, to say that these balls have little effect on the market and general business. While this may be true to some extent, the statement is certainly misleading. Leaving greens, which they except, out of consideration, we find that over 1,000 of the new rose, Wyndmoor, alone were used in the first of these decorations, while in many of the others cut flowers have been used more extensively than in former years, especially on the supper tables. But it is not in the ball decorations alone that business benefits, but also in the dinners that generally precede these festive occasions. Sometimes these dinners are large and the tables handsomely adorned. Even when small, a few choice flowers are sure to be required.

An Interesting Catalogue.

The commissioners of Fairmount park have issued a catalogue of all the tender plants in Horticultural hall. The preface describes the erection of the hall for the Centennial in 1876 and its maintenance since then. The raising of the vast roof ten feet higher, with additional glass for light; the addition at the east end for the Carpenter collection, the fitting up of the west end as a cactus house and other improvements, are also described. The catalogue proper is devoted to a list of the names of all the plants in the hall, many of them brought there by exhibitors at the time of the Centennial and now of great value. Each class is given a brief introduction and a few of the principal specimens are described at length. The catalogue is illustrated with an excellent photograph of the parterre or sunken garden, planted in summer time, also with photographs of the main hall, of the cactus house, of the fern house, and of the show room at the east end when filled with azaleas and lilies in the spring and when filled with chrysanthemums in the fall. While no name is attached to the catalogue, it is understood that the preface and descriptions are written by the landscape gardener, Oglesby B. Paul, while the correct compilation and classification of the names of the plants is the work of the superintendent, Zavier E. Schmidt.

Various Notes.

A. Pericat, the orchid grower of Collingdale, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

M. Rice & Co. are receiving new and novel Easter effects on each incoming steamer.

Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, have a nice lot of Mrs. Jardine in 2¼-inch pots.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report a heavy demand for Japanese air plants and florists' supplies of all kinds.

B. Stahl had a good bit of funeral work for Boyertown last week.

The Lord & Burnham Co. is said to be working on the plans for a large greenhouse establishment near Philadelphia.

The Leo Niessen Co. says the social season is making a good market for cattleyas, gardenias and other choice flowers.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving some fine heliotrope, which has two heads on a stem and is much admired.

A. Farenwald is much pleased with Miss Kate Moulton rose, the cut of which is sent to the New York market.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some exceptionally fine Golden Spur. Carnations are also in good shape.

Edward Reid is on a trip south but will be back by the end of the week.

The Florex Gardens are cutting a fine lot of long Beauties and carnations, which are handled by E. Bernheimer.

Ask Harry Berger whether he thinks Bridesmaid is a thing of the past.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., says the ribbon business is good and that everywhere retailers are al-

MRS. JARDINE

We offer this new rose for March delivery and can recommend it most highly for commercial use. The color is a bright, pleasing pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon-pink. It is a prolific bloomer, free and easy to grow, and without doubt will supersede the Bridesmaid when better known.

Price, 2¼-in. pots, $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000

Grafted Stock add $5.00 per 100

We can supply a limited quantity of cut flowers of Mrs. Jardine, $4.00 per doz.; 3 days' notice required.

ready preparing for a big Easter business.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Flora of the Yellowstone Park" before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society January 21. This lecture was delivered by Mr. Thilow before our national society in Broad Street Theater August 21, 1907.

The window of J. J. Habermehl's Sons in the Bellevue-Stratford created quite a stir a few days ago. It was all in white; Easter lilies, Paper Whites, Brides, carnations, Romans, etc., set off by a brilliant red background. PHIL.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—The annual meeting of the State Horticultural Society was held at Van Buren January 21 to 23. One of the speakers was W. K. Tipton, of Tipton & Hurst, who talked on evergreens.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Patrick McDonough.

Patrick McDonough died at his home in East Newark, N. J., January 13, after a long illness. He had been in business as a florist in Kearny and Arlington for many years and owned a large amount of property in Kearny. He had been a resident of West Hudson for more than fifty years. He is survived by his wife and by two sons and a daughter.

Hannah Degnan.

Hannah Degnan, wife of Dominick Degnan, died January 16 at her residence, 2730 Fifth avenue, Chicago. She was 56 years of age and an old resident. She was the mother of John P. Degnan, who is well known in the trade as associated with the E. F. Winterson Co., Chicago, and also the mother of four other surviving sons. The funeral was held Saturday, January 18, interment being at Mount Olivet.

H. G. Conger.

H. G. Conger, father of the Cincinnati florist, J. T. Conger, died at Mount Airy, O., January 16, and the funeral was held January 20. Mr. Conger had been ill for some time and his death was not entirely unexpected. He was 76 years old and had been married fifty-five years. His wife is still alive, but is in poor health.

Marston B. Bunker.

Marston B. Bunker, the Boston florist, whose death January 12 was reported briefly in last week's REVIEW, entered Boothby hospital Thursday, January 9, and the operation was performed on Saturday. He rallied quickly, but later the operation had to be repeated, and the second time he failed to recover consciousness.

Born in Cambridge, April 25, 1859, he became a florist while young, and for a number of years was in charge of the stands at the Parker House, Young's Hotel and the Touraine. Later he began business for himself in a store on Beacon street, moving nine years ago to City Hall avenue. He lived at 82 Boston street, Somerville.

He was a member of Soley lodge of Free Masons; American lodge, I. O. O. F.; Unity council, R. A.; Royal Arch chapter of Masons and the Somerville lodge of Elks. He leaves a widow, a son and daughter.

FARGO, N. D.—John L. Graves has sold his interest in the firm of Shotwell & Graves to A. T. Shotwell, who will continue the business. Mr. Graves will remove to California.

IT gives me great pleasure to remit another dollar for the renewal of my subscription to the REVIEW, the gem of horticultural journals, which I look for most eagerly every week and which informs me in up-to-date style of what is going on in our profession. I have been perfectly satisfied with the paper in the past, and hope to give it the support of my little dollar, and any other support that I can render it, for many a year.—C. ADAMS, Memphis, Tenn.

Vegetable Forcing.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Cucumbers, 60c to 80c doz.; leaf lettuce, 15c to 17½c case; mushrooms, 20c lb.; radishes, 10c to 35c doz. bunches.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—Tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.; cauliflower, $3 doz.; lettuce, 40c to 60c box; escarolle, 40c doz.; romaine, 75c doz.; mushrooms, 50c to 60c lb.; cucumbers, $1.50 to $8 box; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Beet tops, 75c to 90c bu. box; No. 1 cucumbers, 75c to $1 doz.; No. 2 cucumbers, $2 to $3.50 box; lettuce, 25c to 40c doz.; mushrooms, 30c to 40c lb.; mint, 50c to 75c lb.; radishes, $2 to $3 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 40c to 50c doz. bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

WORMS IN LETTUCE SOIL.

I have a small lettuce house, 16x80, and use raised benches. I have used the same soil for five years and it is very rich. Now I find the soil full of small worms that look like angleworms. I am not aware that they do much damage, but the top of the soil looks as if ants had worked it up, though I know it is the work of the worms. Do they do any harm, and what is a good remedy?

A. V.

I would advise you to change the soil as soon as possible, if you can get at some fresh, clean, new soil. Clean out the benches thoroughly, washing them with the hose and a scrub brush, and give them a good coat of whitewash. The job will not occupy more than a day or two and will make considerable difference in the crops. The soil might be sterilized, so as to kill all the worms, etc., or you might clean them out by giving the soil a heavy dusting of lime, but it would be far better to remove the soil entirely, as it has been inside too long, even if kept rich by heavy manuring. The worms will not injure the plants directly, but make the soil soggy and sour, so that it is difficult to get a good crop. The frost, wind and weather outside keep the soil in better shape than any treatment we can give it inside.

H. G.

MECHANICAL WATERING.

W. B. Davis & Co., at Aurora, Ill., who are well known for the success they have made in the growing of vegetables under glass, have just completed a range of seven new houses, each 28x150, for lettuce and cucumbers. While the new range is modern in every particular, probably the innovation which will strike the grower most forcefully is that there is not a single water tap in the entire range. After having used the Wittbold system of mechanical watering for two years or more, Davis & Co. are so well pleased with it that they rely entirely upon it to supply moisture to the plants in the new range.

MILWAUKEE.

H. W. Koerner, the well-known dahlia and gladiolus specialist, is putting up a warehouse for the storing of dahlias that is to be something out of the usual in its construction. The cellar, 18x100 feet, will be used as a boiler-room and for the storing of dahlias, and as a foundation for a one-story building to be used for packing and potting, with a cool room for cut flowers. This packing shed is to be entirely of concrete construction. The walls, floors, roof, stairs, potting tables, bins, benches, and a water tank of a capacity of 200 barrels, with the foundation, are all to be of concrete, with the exception of the doors, windows and rafters. Mr. Koerner has not decided as to the size of the greenhouse, but has purchased the necessary glass for the season's building.

Herman Schwebke and Emil Welke propose to use about sixty and 100 boxes of glass, respectively, for additional greenhouse buildings, and likewise the C. C. Pollworth Co. and Holton & Hunkel Co. have purchased several carloads of glass for the same purpose now under consideration.

J. E. P.

MUNCIE, IND.

Business has been unusually dull the last two weeks, on account of the street car strike, but martial law has been raised and we look for trade to become normal again soon.

The first Holland bulb men made their appearance this week.

Longfellow & Williams are shipping their carnations to the Cincinnati market.

Simon Humfeld, of the Muncie Floral Co., has been laid up with the grippe the last two weeks.

Norwood Carnes, son of the late Jesse Carnes, will continue the business. The funeral of J. Carnes took place January 2. Quite a number of the trade sent floral offerings.

Claud Clark, grower for Mrs. Miller, had an unusually fine lot of Lorraines and cyclamens for the holiday trade. He is also very successful with Rex begonias, which are sold at wholesale.

DENVER.

State of Business.

There has been no material change in the market since last writing. If any, the tone of the market is better. Prices are running about the same, stock is in good condition and this, coupled with a fairly good demand, makes it a pleasure to do business. The supply is not abundant, though sufficiently large to meet all requirements, the bulk of the business being caused by the demand for many funerals.

Beauties are in pretty good crop and in fine shape. Brides and Maids are in fair crop, with just about enough to go around; quality is fine. Richmond is in good cut. Carnations have been in good demand and moving lively; if the quality holds, there will be no complaint. Violets are excellent and sell well. Romans, narcissi and valley are in good demand and not any too plentiful. A few tulips are coming in, but stems are short as yet, making them hard to sell. Daffodils and jonquils are to be had, but not in any large quantities; however, they soon will be quite a factor in the business.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer and wife, of Philadelphia, were in the city a few days last week on their way to the Pacific coast. Another visitor last week was William Duckham, of New Jersey, who has mining interests located at Idaho Springs in this state.

FOR SALE AT A SACRIFICE

On account of failing health I now offer my business for sale. I have greenhouses, well filled with carnations, ferns, palms and bedding plants. Located in the center of the city. We have been established for over 15 years on leased ground, but the owner has all kinds of vacant ground over the city and does not need this, which is safe for many years. I am doing A-1 business in cut flowers and have an immense bedding out trade. We run two wagons. If you wish to make money, here is your chance. I will give possession at once. Must be cash. For further particulars address W. H. Humfeld Floral Co., 9th and Highland Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

G. S. MAY, formerly with the Cox Seed Co., has opened a seed store in San Francisco, on Market street, near Chestnut.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin entitled "Progress in Legume Inoculation," which will interest the seed trade.

SEEDSMEN will be interested in the government's efforts to establish the growing of Easter lily bulbs in the United States, which appears on page 10 of this issue.

THE Nashville Seed Co., Nashville, Tenn., has moved to 215 North Market street, where 5,000 square feet of floor space is available. The firm handles not only field and garden seeds, but fruits and vegetables.

VARIOUS agencies in the grocery trade have been compiling statistics as to the packs of canned goods in 1907, but they are not able to do much more than stir up a controversy; for instance, as to peas, two leading authorities make the 1907 pack 5,535,064 and 6,505,961 cases respectively, a difference of 970,897 cases.

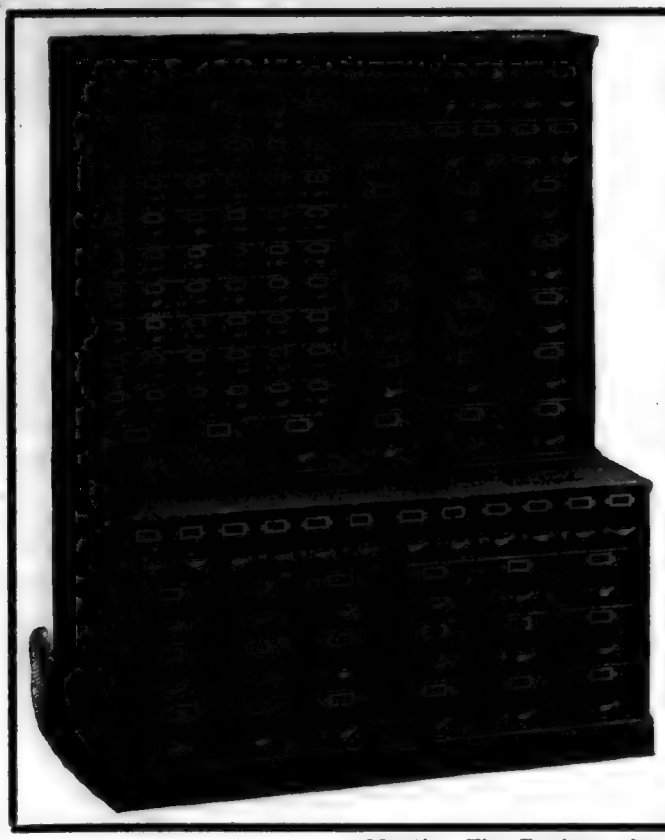
in the trade, who bore in mind the date of the event. Mr. and Mrs. Brill have five children, one daughter being the wife of Walter Bodger, of John Bodger & Sons, seed growers at Gardena, Cal.



J. CHARLES MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, has returned from a trip to California, during which he attended the wedding of his son, Trimble McCullough.

A GROWER writes: "It is always an aggravating experience to be forced to observe plants mixed beyond redemption, when the whole were expected to be of one variety and color, but extremely so when such a development means the uselessness for market of the whole product. The man or firm who can be relied upon to furnish good seed, true to name, should be counted among our dearest friends on earth and frequent inquiries made concerning the health of such."

IT is becoming quite the fashion for truck growers' associations to place bulk orders for seeds. The Grayson County Fruit and Truck Growers' Association met January 11 at Denison, Tex., and after listening to the report of a committee previously appointed, voted to plant its acreage with Sure Head cabbage, Prizetaker onion, Rocky Ford cantaloupe, Triumph potato and Alabama Sweet watermelon. The committee was authorized to buy for the association seeds to plant its entire acreage, and members were given until January 20 to make known their individual requirements. It was reported that the committee had received quotations that indicate a considerable saving by placing orders in bulk.

WITH THE CANNERS.

It is said that with the canners there is next to no business on peas for delivery from the 1908 pack. Buyers demand a concession from the prices of last season, while canners want an advance. Prices on Wisconsin goods are held firmly but so far as can be learned the future business in them has been a good deal smaller than in previous years. Some of the New York state packers are ready to accept orders on the basis of last year's prices, and in one or two instances might be induced to accept a little less, but the question of delivery terms is the rock on which buyers and sellers split, the former demanding guaranteed delivery on contracts, while the latter are unwilling to close business except on a pro rata delivery basis. This difference is said to be one of the main reasons for the backwardness of buying in future canned goods generally and until after the national convention, when the question will undoubtedly be a prominent subject of discussion, it is believed that future business will be slack. At the meeting of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association executive committee, held in Chicago January 20, this question of contract deliveries formed the chief subject for debate, and it is expected that a decision will be reached which will enable the jobbers to go to the canners' convention in Cincinnati next month with a well defined idea of what the jobbers want and will insist upon having.

SEED TRADE EXECUTIVES.

The executive committee has selected Detroit, Mich., as the place for the twenty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, to be held June 23 to 25.

There was a full attendance of the meeting of the executive committee at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, January 21. Those present were: President George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-president N. H. Duryea, New York; Secretary C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, and the members of the executive committee, as follows: Henry W. Wood, chairman, Richmond, Va.; Charles S. Burge, Toledo; Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., and one or two trade visitors who were present during a portion of the session.

The committee put in most of the day in framing up a tentative program for the convention. The selection of a headquarters was left in the hands of the president and secretary.

Those present included representatives of the Seed Trade Association's committees on seed legislation, on rates and measures, on postal laws, and on seed adulteration, and informal reports and discussion were had on these topics.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending Jan. 11 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto...	7	$ 89	Mustard ...	200	$ 2,234

DUTY ON IRIS ROOTS.

In the protest of Vandegrift & Co., dried iris bulbs which were classified under the provision in paragraph 251, tariff act of 1897, for "bulbs which are cultivated for their flowers," are claimed to be free of duty under paragraph 548 as "drugs," or under other provisions of the free list. The following is the opinion of the general appraisers:

The iris is a well-known flowering plant. See International Encyclopedia. From some varieties of this plant is produced the orris root, known to the drug trade. We think, however, that the orris root of commerce is the root of the iris plant after being scraped and prepared for the trade, which destroys the germinating principle. We are unable to learn that the root in such form as imported in this case is known or dealt in by the drug trade. There is some evidence in the case which tends to show that this particular importation was brought in for the purpose of planting and raising the orris root for medicinal or drug purposes. We do not think, however, that the use of the merchandise after importation should govern. It will be noted that the language of paragraph 251 is, "which are cultivated for their flowers." We think the iris roots are cultivated for their flowers, and the fact that they may be diverted to another use can not vary the assessment upon importation, the commodity not being in shape or condition to be used as a drug or by those dealing in druggists' materials. It appears from the evidence that these plants at the time of importation were in a condition to germinate and grow. If the bulb may be used either to plant for flowering purposes or to raise a product intended for ultimate conversion into a drug, it can not be said, therefore, to be dutiable under paragraph 548.

The following view expressed by the Board in Abstract 12933 (T. D. 27636) is pertinent to this case:

"Some stress is laid upon the fact that the United States Dispensatory refers to asparagus as having reputed medicinal qualities and to pumpkin seed as furnishing a remedy for tapeworm, but this can not be the test. Many table vegetables, or the plants or seeds producing them, contain medicinal principles and are mentioned in the Dispensatory, such as lettuce, celery, potatoes, tomatoes, beans. It would be opposed to common knowledge and sound construction to class such articles as drugs unless the particular substance imported was of such variety, quality, condition, or stage of growth as to be unfit for its common use and to be adapted to the uses of the drug trade. This was true of the celery seed held to be a drug in Clay v. Magone (40 Fed. Rep., 230), which was not in such condition that it could be sold for planting purposes. We conceive that it might also be true of lettuce after it had reached the period of inflorescence, when it is unfit for food and yields the drug known as lactucarium."

The claim that the goods are free is plainly untenable.

THE KENTUCKY SEED LAW.

The annual report of M. A. Scovell, director of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, was filed with Gov. Willson January 13. Several recommendations which will give the station greater power in regulating the sale of seeds, so as to prevent their adulteration, are made by Mr. Scovell. His report is as follows:

An act to prevent the adulteration, mixing and misbranding of orchard grass seed and other seeds, and fixing a punishment therefor, approved March 22, 1904, and amendment thereto made by the Legislature in its session of 1906, requires the Director of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station to enforce its provisions.

Section 2 of the above act provides that the Director of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station is required to make, or cause to be made, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by him, examinations of specimens of seeds of orchard grass, Kentucky bluegrass, red clover, mammoth clover or alfalfa (and the amendment thereto of timothy), offered for sale, which may be collected from time to time in various parts of the State and report violations thereof to the various Commonwealth Attorneys.

samples of seeds have been collected, of which 1,187 have been examined. Sixty-six samples were found adulterated and reported to the various Commonwealth Attorneys. In addition to the samples regularly provided for by law, we have had numerous samples sent us by farmers and seedsmen for examination. This latter work is growing, and as our work becomes more familiar to farmers and seedsmen, we expect this branch of our duties to increase greatly. This work has been done without expense to applicants and I think this branch of the work should so continue, unless at some time it becomes so great a burden as to interfere with our other work.

The law in its present form is defective.

First—Section 1 provides that persons who sell, offer or expose for sale mixed, adulterated or misbranded seeds and known by them to be mixed, adulterated or misbranded, and done with fraudulent intent within the meaning of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. It is almost impossible to prosecute under this provision, because it is difficult to prove what a man's intentions were in any given case. The result is that not a single conviction has been obtained. In this respect the law should be similar to the State Pure Food Law, which only releases the seller in case he has a written guaranty of purity from the wholesaler who resides within the State.

Second—Section 4 of the law exempts growers of seeds from its provisions. Many seedsmen grow their own seeds largely and there is no reason why they should not furnish pure seeds as well as the wholesaler or retailer of seeds.

Third—There is no provision made in the law for paying expenses of inspecting and analysis. Some provision should be made to meet these expenses.

Fourth—The law should also cover all field seeds and seeds adulterated with weed seeds. The presence of weed seeds in the great number of samples examined by this station indicates that foreign seeds are a source of more loss to farmers than seeds otherwise adulterated. The parasite dodder, for instance, is actually destructive to clover and alfalfa, and once established on land renders it unfit for these crops for several years afterwards. The law ought to be amended so as to exclude from the market all field seeds containing more than 5 per cent foreign seeds of any sort.

The law, with the amendments suggested to cover the defects, I believe, would be effective and result in great benefit to the farmers of the state.

RAVAGES OF RODENTS.

In last week's Review it was reported that Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., had lost a considerable part of his stock of seeds of Comet tomato, by the operations of mice; in fact, that all the seeds intended for sale were lost and only enough remained to supply Mr. Sim's needs for planting. Every grower who at any time has even a small quantity of seeds on hand should have a mice-proof case for them. Heller & Co., Montpelier, O., exhibited such a set of seed drawers at the Washington convention of the S. A. F. They supply complete sets of such fixtures for seed stores, but make them in cabinets of all sizes to meet the needs of those who carry only small stocks of seeds for their own use. So far as known, this is the only firm which ever has shown such device to the trade.

PEELING GLADIOLUS BULBS.

Why do we peel gladiolus corms just before planting? I have tried various experiments, but can discover no benefits from so doing. L. S. S.

The practice of removing the husk from gladiolus bulbs before planting is not only unnecessary, but in many cases is a disadvantage. Especially is this true when bulbs are planted for the flower in soil which has been prepared by the use of stable manure, either in the fall, which is the preferable time, or in the spring, through forgetfulness in the fall or for any other reason.

The husk is a protection to the bulb, keeping it, to quite an extent, from contact with manure or other substances which would burn the bulb if peeled. It also protects it from bruising and, most important of all, it protects the small sprouts which produce spikes and new bulbs. I would as soon think of peeling an onion before planting as a gladiolus bulb. ARTHUR COWEE.

LIQUID FROM TOBACCO STEMS.

Of what fertilizing value, if any, is liquid made from tobacco stems steeped in water? M. E.

While there is some manurial property in tobacco stems, it is so trifling as compared with what can be obtained from animal manures, that it would not pay to bother with it. The water is useful for spraying purposes and can also be utilized on asters and other plants troubled with aphis at the root. Potato growers not infrequently use the stems in their furrows. They can also be advantageously used in the hills for squashes and cucumbers outdoors. Plants so located are more immune from attacks of borers and other pests. C. W.

PANSIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I think I have lost all my pansies. Will you kindly tell me the best way to get some for Memorial day? Could I sow some seeds in the greenhouse, or would it be best for me to buy plants, and would they bloom by that time? H. P.

Pansies may be sown now and will bloom by summer, but if you want good, strong plants in bloom for Memorial day, your best plan will be to purchase some transplanted seedlings raised last fall and which are being wintered either outdoors or in a coldframe. Plant these in a cold greenhouse, or, better still, in a coldframe. Give them well manured compost to grow in and you will get excellent plants for Memorial day. Another year sow your seed outdoors or in a frame early in August, transplant outdoors when large enough to handle, mulch with leaves, meadow hay or straw after the ground freezes, and you will have the start of splendid Memorial day plants. Be sure to plant out on sloping ground. That on which water stands would be fatal. C. W.

PACIFIC COAST.

PASADENA, CAL. — W. J. Hesser, formerly in the greenhouse business at Plattsmouth, Neb., is now propagator for the Park Nursery Co., of Pasadena.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Trade.

Trade fell to a low ebb immediately after New Year's, allowing us time to get rested and to take a trial balance, and we are now more convinced that 1907 was a remarkably good year for our profession. At this writing, business has righted itself and we are prepared to hold the fort for another six months. One satisfying feature is the fine quality of nearly everything coming into the market, and there is no scarcity of stock, either, in any line except violets. We must remark that the growers are right up to snuff this season, having surmounted many difficulties characteristic of this moist climate. The retail stores are embellished with cinerarias, azaleas, cyclamens and daffodils which sell farily well and are easily handled in the absence of Jack Frost.

Visiting the Suburbs.

Portland's many suburbs have made a surprising growth in the last few years and none has shown greater activity than that known as the Mount Scott district. Lents, its terminus, lies six miles southeast of the city proper, and we often walk out and back to keep ourselves in good physical trim. This we undertook last Sunday. Leaving Hawthorn avenue, we get a partial view of Clarke Bros.' large place, once plainly visible from the street car, but now almost obscured by substantial cottages and bungalows. The big dog on duty objected to our presence, so we passed on to renew acquaintance with Tom Bodley. No pretension is made of enlarging his business, as he is more interested in real estate.

A Japanese firm, doing business under the name of the Nippon Floral Co., is nicely established at Arleta, with 7,000 feet of glass. Respecting a Japanese custom, we removed our shoes before entering the place and were nicely entertained by one of the proprietors with descriptions of many oriental novelties. In the same neighborhood Rudolph Stadeli has built one good, substantial house and knows how to grow carnations. He also devotes much time to landscape work and to the care of gardens.

Our next stopping place was Kern Park, where we met a gentleman bearing the familiar name of Jay Gould. Although an electrician by trade, Mr. Gould has other talents and has transformed a bit of the wilderness into one of the most attractive places in the district. He has started with two houses and equipped them with everything modern, including electric lights. Mr. Gould says his method of watering stock is a legitimate one and looks good to him.

On the return trip we crossed lots and paid our respects to Jean Robinson, in Woodstock, a successful violet grower. The sun was shining some and Jean said it was worth a dollar a minute to him. From there we went to Montavilla and made a short call on the Mountain View Floral Co. This firm is making a specialty of flowering plants this winter and the output is a credit to any place.

The first traveling man to extend greetings of the New Year was James Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer. There would never be hard times if everybody were as optimistic as Mr. Karins. Our Commercial Club has for some months had a photographer stationed at the Union depot to take a snapshot of any traveling man landing there, and Mr. Karins' picture now adorns the room of that institution.

H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Everything is at a standstill, with the exception of funeral orders, and they are the chief source of income for the florists at this time. There has been a great quantity of out-of-town shipping and those retailers who make a specialty of this kind of work have had plenty to do.

Flowers are fairly plentiful and the prices remain about the same as those quoted during the last few weeks. Roses are scarcer than they were at any time during the holidays and the prices show a tendency to rise somewhat. Carnations are plentiful and cheap, with a brisk demand for all kinds of white varieties.

Valley is plentiful and moves slowly. A few good Harrisii are seen and they cost the retailers $2 per dozen stems. Daffodils of the Ard Righ type have made their appearance in town and they sell well at $2 per hundred. Narcissi of the white sorts are in good demand for white work, and although they are not yet in their prime, they move well.

A few straggling mums of the late white and yellow sorts are seen, and although they are long past their prime, they do very well to fill in designs with. Hothouse-grown sweet peas help to keep up the variety in the windows. Roman hyacinths have moved slowly all during the season and at no time has there been any particular demand for them. Green stuff is plentiful, with the possible exception of maidenhair, and all the large growers seem to be in poor supply at this time.

Various Notes.

G. W. Simmons, of Elmhurst, will erect three rose houses in the early spring.

P. McDonnell, of Alden, will shortly commence building two additional carnation houses.

The May Seed Co. has opened a store on Market street, above California street. G. S. May was with the Cox Seed Co. for many years.

The Trumbull Seed Co. has become well established at its new location, in the middle of the burned district.

Petunia Seed from my Champion strain is the choicest seed of this strain obtainable at prices of common seed and cannot be beaten for size of flowers, variety of color and markings. All Petunia Seed is hand-fertilized. Tr. pkt., 25c; 1000 seeds, 50c; oz., $20.00.
My Champion Strain of Ruffled Giants is another very superior strain, finely ruffled, of enormous size, in an endless variety of color and markings. Tr. pkt., 35c; 1000 seeds, 75c; oz., $25.00.
I have only one grade of the two strains of Petunia Seed listed above, and that is the best.
Send for list of other seeds. Cash, please.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The cut flower trade is good. There is a brisk demand for flowers, with a plentiful supply to draw from. Carnations bring 60 cents to 75 cents per dozen retail. Roses are of good quality. They realize $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail. Violets do not sell so readily. Sweet peas are in moderate supply. They sell for $1 per hundred retail. There is a fairly good supply of bulbous flowers just now. Paper Whites, tulips and narcissi bring 50 cents per dozen retail.

It is a rare thing to find a florist with a growth as rapid as JOHN A. KEPNER, of Harrisburg, Pa. In Oct., 1903, he completed his first greenhouse, 12x66 feet; today he has a block of houses supplying a store at 116 South 2nd St., Harrisburg, another at 35 North 2nd St., Harrisburg, another at 159 South Front St., Steelton, Pa. Cut Flowers, Plants, Funeral and Wedding Work the finest and most up-to-date of any Florist in the two cities. Why, do you ask? Because his stores are supplied fresh every morning. He also is prepared to supply to the Wholesale Trade in a manner that gives the best at fair figures. Address him at

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

VISITED NEW YORK: W. J. Ruys, representing B. Ruys, Dedemsvaart, Holland.

THE man who wanted to plant a big orchard of Jonathan apples would have no easy time finding good two-year stock.

THE Wisconsin State Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting at Madison February 4 to 6.

AKEBIA QUINATA is a handsome Japanese climber, quite hardy, with handsome foliage, fragrant flowers and ornamental fruit.

H. J. CORFIELD, who for nearly three years has been designing and constructing an estate of nearly 300 acres near Detroit, has resigned and returned east.

AT Castle Haynes, near Wilmington, Del., A. Van Leeuwen and H. H. De Wildt, formerly of Worcester, Mass., are establishing a nursery on the land of the Carolina Trucking Development Co.

ARISTOLOCHIA SIPHO, the Dutchman's pipe, is a desirable vine for piazza covering when a dense shade is required. The foliage of this vine develops to immense proportions and is tropically effective.

THE Oregon State Horticultural Society held its annual meeting at Portland January 14 and 15. There was a splendid display of apples, and most of the discussion related to apples, for apple growing is becoming a large and profitable industry in Oregon.

THE English ivy is undoubtedly the most satisfying of all vines for covering brick or stone buildings in locations where it is able to survive without material injury from year to year. The older and more established the English ivy becomes, the less danger there is of it being damaged in winter or early spring.

WM. A. PETERSON, proprietor of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, was reelected a director of the State Bank of Chicago, with deposits of $17,000,000, at its annual meeting this week. Mr. Peterson takes nearly as much pleasure in watching the bank grow as he does in seeing his peonies bloom. The trust funds are his special care.

BOX FOR EDGING.

In some European countries box was at one time, and may be still, much used for edging gravel paths and for defining all sorts of formal beds. When used for path edging the custom was to keep the box clipped so that it seldom attained six inches in height. When used, as it was in many instances, for keeping the soil in place in beds, just as much as for its ornamental value of itself, it was of necessity allowed to grow much taller and thicker. There is a great deal of box used in this country, mainly because of the assistance it gives in the formation of so-called Italian gardens, and when so used it is always called for at least six inches in height, and often double that. Box is also used along the edges of walks, but it is used not in small, insignificant plants, but in plants of such generous proportions as will give immediate and somewhat massive effect. Large box plants are also used in great numbers for planting in closely formed groups to be subjected subsequently to severe clipping to bring the whole into the desired form and thereby bring about the much coveted formal effect now in vogue. M.

OHIO NURSERYMEN ORGANIZE.

The nurserymen of Ohio effected a state organization at Columbus January 15 with the following officers: President, J. W. McNary, of Dayton; vice-president, Robert George, of Painesville; secretary, W. B. Cole, of Painesville; treasurer, W. N. Scarff, of New Carlisle; executive committee, Robert George, of Painesville; Fred D. Green, of Perry; G. S. Pickett, of Clyde; John Siebenthaler, of Dayton, and E. G. Cox, of Proctorville.

BEDS OF EVERGREENS.

Nurserymen, landscape gardeners and others are frequently called upon to embellish public and private grounds with evergreens and to plant or direct their planting in groups, borders or beds in such a manner that the effect will be immediate. Although to some minds the close planting of evergreens in formal beds may seem unnatural, yet such arrangement in planting only comes to appear emphatically unnatural after some time has passed, and after the once shapely little trees have grown to such an extent that all individuality and shapeliness are gone. And that fault cannot be attributed to the system of planting as at first accomplished, but rather to neglect to adopt certain measures which, if attended to at the proper time, would be effectual.

When the planting was done it is reasonably certain that whoever had it in charge expected that some one would see to it that just as the trees showed evidence of crowding there would be a systematic thinning out and the plants removed would be used in an extension of the planting of the grounds. This would not only prevent the utter deformity of the trees in the beds, but would also prevent the impression sometimes produced that such planting as at first done is practiced for the financial advantage it affords by the use of large numbers of plants.

When further thinning out for the preservation of the individuality of plants in beds becomes impractical, a judicious use of the knife or shears will do much to keep them well furnished with foliage and prevent them from unduly crowding each other to the injury of all. M.

Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa.

January 31. The program, which is comprehensive and interesting, will be participated in by some of the most prominent nurserymen of the state. While the convention is in session there will be exhibits of spray machinery, insecticides, horticultural tools, fruit and nursery stock. The railroads have granted a special rate of one fare, plus 25 cents, for the return trip to Nashville.

The present officers of the association are: President, J. C. Hale, Winchester; vice-president, H. N. Nicholson, Winchester; secretary-treasurer, G. M. Bentley, Knoxville.

The program is as follows:

Morning session, 9:30 o'clock—Address of welcome, E. S. Shannon, secretary of the board of trade, Nashville; executive meeting; president's address, "The Nursery Business in Tennessee and the South, from a Wholesale Standpoint," J. C. Hale, Winchester; "Rose Growing in the South," S. M. Crowell, Rich, Miss.; "Results of Recent Experiments in Plant Breeding," J. K. Postma, Union City.

Afternoon session, 2 o'clock—"The Selection and Arrangement of Ornamental Shrubs and Trees on Private Estates," A. I. Smith, Knoxville; "Mutual Obligations Between Nurseryman and Customer," S. P. Fowler, Clinton; "The Relation of the Department of Agriculture to the Nursery Interests of Tennessee," G. M. Bentley, Knoxville; "The Nursery Business in Tennessee and the South, from a Retail Standpoint," E. W. Chatten, Winchester; J. Marvin Miller, Winchester; J. H. Austin, Antioch.

Evening session, 7:30 o'clock—"The Value of Bees to the Fruit Grower," John Davis, Spring Hill; "Why the Nurserymen and Fruit Growers Should Coöperate," Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; "What New Varieties of Fruits Should Nurserymen Add to Their Lists for Propagation?" symposium.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

State of Trade.

There is little doing here; in fact, in all lines everybody is complaining and no matter how optimistic we may feel, we cannot get away from the fact that conditions are not good, with so many out of work, which makes quite a difference in our business.

Roses are scarce and command fair prices: from 5 cents to 10 cents, the cheaper grades being most in demand for funeral work.

Carnations are poor this year. The majority of them are split, especially Enchantress, and, in fact, both white and Lawson. The former are small and the latter short in the stem, which makes it difficult to make good returns. Fair Maid is a dead one and can only be got rid of at a sacrifice. It certainly ought not to be grown in this section another year.

Price of Bedding Stock.

For the first time in many years the florists of Rochester got together, January 15, to consider the question of advancing the price of bedding stock this spring. In the past $1 per dozen has been the price for geraniums at retail. It is proposed to advance them to $1.25 and $1.50, according to grade, and other things in equal proportion. Fred Vick acted as chairman and a committee was formed to draw up a scale of prices to be submitted to the trade for their approval. The meeting was well attended and it is to be hoped that from this gathering others will follow and lead to the organization of a Rochester Florists' Club, which, for some unaccountable reason, Rochester, now a first-class city, does not possess. The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

"MAY"

REASONS

Why You Should Plant MAY

May is a strictly commercial variety. Business from beginning to end.

It comes into bloom early and continues uninterruptedly until the end of the season.

It is freer than any other light pink we know of.

The size of the bloom is just what you want in quantity, 2½ to 3½ inches.

The color is deeper and brighter and more even than Enchantress and holds better.

The form is well shown in illustration.

It is not so crowded in the center as Enchantress, therefore opens quicker.

The calyx never splits and stem is always strong.

The plant grows strong and upright and about as tall as Lady Bountiful.

Makes nice plants in the field and transplants easily.

We invite you to come and see our stock of it any time; you will like its habit.

February delivery.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The general business conditions are not satisfactory to anyone at present. Society is not doing anything to demand any quantity of stock, confining themselves usually, in the language of one man, to "a sandwich and a few flowers on the table." Funeral work continues to hold up well, but Beauties and high priced stock must suffer and you will hear neither wholesalers nor retailers bragging very much.

Various Notes.

There is considerable talk about the carnation convention and it is likely there will be a large delegation from this city. Fred Burki, John Wyland, Albert Lorch, Chas. Garland, I. S. Crall, John Murchie and E. A. Reineman have declared themselves and many others are holding the matter under consideration.

Jos. E. Bonsall, the man who runs his greenhouses without artificial heat, was a visitor last week. He locked his house after mums were done, took his good wife and went traveling. He is now going home to get ready for old Sol when he warms up enough to heat his houses. Mr. Bonsall has been experimenting with this for several years and says he gets all the work he wants from spring to Thanksgiving, and makes enough money in that time to enjoy living the balance of the year. Hoo-Hoo.

We sold 20,000 carnation plants with a classified advertisement in the Review for four weeks.—G. E. Beal.

LLOYD

No Gold Brick

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Unrooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. 10 per cent discount for cash with order.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of The Florists' Review.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

WASHINGTON.

Business was not so brisk last week. The store men are complaining. Stock is more abundant than it was the previous week. Prices still keep up. Bulbous stock is more plentiful. Violets are not moving so well. There is plenty of fine lilac, which is selling at $1.50 per plant.

F. H. Kramer is about the only man in town who is making a specialty of Virginia violets, selling them at 50 cents per hundred. Several years ago these violets were indispensable.

George Fields is sending in some exceptionally fine cattleyas.

J. J. Harty & Co. have a fine lot of double poinsettias, which bring $35 per hundred.

A special meeting of the club was called for Tuesday, January 21, to finish all business in connection with the carnation convention. The banquet committee consists of Peter Bisset, W. F. Gude, Charles McCauley, George Cooke, George C. Shaffer, F. H. Kramer and John Robinson. The tickets will be $3 per plate.

Reed & Kellar's representative, E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., and Mr. Goudy, representing Henry Dreer, Philadelphia, were in town last week. O. O.

WOODBRIDGE, FLA.—Albert Buckwell says that oranges and other citrus fruits have been rapidly going to market for some weeks, in spite of the difficulty in finding the necessary help. The wages paid to laborers run from $1.25 up. There has been very little cold weather here; not enough to hurt poinsettias or cannas. At Sanford lettuce has been ready for shipment since about the middle of December.

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure gilt-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.
Strong established pot-grown plants, $9.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

State of Trade.

Trade has been brisk for the last two weeks. There has been no let-up to funeral work. Stock is coming in finely. Roses are fine and of good color, especially Maids. Carnations are coming in heavily but a great many are split, which the growers cannot account for. Tulips are making their appearance in good quantity, but are short-stemmed. Other bulb stock is abundant. Freesias are coming in well, also azaleas in large quantity, which help to make a nice store display. The outlook is encouraging, as there is plenty of stock in sight now, something we have not had since Christmas.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a short business meeting Tuesday evening, January 14. After the meeting we had plenty of music and the social hop took place. The club will give another dance in the near future on a larger scale. Next meeting is bowling night.

The Munk Floral Co. reports the sale on lettuce slow and prices low.

Robert Schenck, late of Pittsburg, has bought out the Columbus Floral Co. and took charge of the store January 15.

Mrs. E. M. Krauss reports business flourishing, especially in funeral work.

Wm. Graff has been making a run on violets at 25 cents per bunch and reports a big sale. He was in Chicago last week.

J. M.

CANON CITY, COLO.—E. L. Cleveland is building his first greenhouse. He has been selling shrubs and plants for two or three years.

This picture was taken Sept. 6, 1907, the day before we started to make the geranium cuttings. The operator stood too close to the bed of geraniums, as it only shows about two-thirds of the garden. This bed contains 3,000 geraniums, composed of 13 varieties—the leading 13 selected out of over 50 varieties—the BIG 13 which are the leading geraniums for retail purposes about Pittsburg.

I run a first-class retail business and always demand the highest prices, give every variety a good test. I usually grow from 20,000 to 25,000 geraniums and have retailed pretty near all of them each season. The varieties are A. Ricard, S. A. Nutt, Marvel, Beaute Poitevine, Jean Viaud, Kleber, Castries, Mme. Jaulin, Mrs. E. G. Hill, Jean de la Brete, Mme. Buchner and Beauty, a large single salmon; and also my New

Geranium H. L. HARTMAN

The latter variety is a beautiful, bright, deep rose-pink and it ranks next to A. Ricard, as it is classed first in geraniums, and H. L. Hartman will be classed second. You can see this variety at the left of the picture. The color takes white in a photograph. This variety grows very bushy and dwarf, joints close, making it easy to propagate. This geranium is the best bloomer and makes the largest truss of any geranium grown. The truss is so large that it forms a round ball when in full bloom. The color arranges so nicely with other varieties that when left out of these other varieties it is missed, just as much as if you were to leave out A. Ricard. The center of the upper part of each floret is shaded to orange-scarlet, making it one of the prettiest geraniums grown. It is full semi-double. One batch of 1,500 in 4-inch pots in the greenhouse came into full bloom the week of Decoration Day, 1907, and were all sold in three days at $2 per dozen. A florist from Syracuse, N. Y., saw them and said it was the finest geranium he ever had seen; he bought 200 of my stock plants from 2¼-inch pots. For further particulars and prices, as I have a few more left to sell, please write to me, or watch the Florists' Review.

PETUNIA AMERICAN FAVORITE

I shall introduce to the trade my new petunia American Favorite. This grand novelty is to petunias what the American Beauty is to roses. It ranks first. In habit this petunia is dwarf and bushy, one of the very best bloomers. The flowers are very large and full double, exceedingly fragrant. A bed of two or three dozen of this petunia is equal to a bed of roses, as the flowers run from almost pure white to the darkest shades in petunia colors. There will be as high as 12 to 15 different colors on one stock at a time, ranging from light to dark mixed and striped. It is a perfect beauty. It is one of the best petunias for a pot plant for market. They have three or four different colors on a plant in a 4-inch pot, and sell readily at 25 cents each. Everybody admires the American Favorite petunia. This petunia comes in bloom very small and continues blooming long after all other varieties quit in the fall. I have several other double petunias and all of them quit blooming after the first frost (September 26, 1907), but American Favorite continued in full bloom. I covered them every night from October 14, the night of the first heavy frost, until November 10, when I cut them up for cuttings. I now introduce it to the Trade. Every Florist should have a hundred or more of this novelty this season. For prices and further particulars watch the Florists' Review, or write

The Market.

Business opened up nicely for the latter part of January. Shipments are not large at present and everything cleans up well.

Roses are none too plentiful. White roses are really a scarce article. Carnations are coming in a little more plentifully than for some time and the stock is good. Considerable bulbous stock helps out.

Romans are about the only thing that could be called plentiful.

Club Meeting.
